NOTES ON THE MYTHOLOGICAL TYPES ON ROMAN REPUBLICAN COINS.

FERONIA.

Feronia represented the goddess of liberty to the Sabines and Italian tribes outside Rome, and Libera was held in the city to signify the same idea. On April 19th 493 a temple to Ceres Liber and Libera was dedicated at the foot of the Aventine hill near the Circus Maximus.

The cult was Greek and the Temple was built in the Greek style. It is noticeable that the Temple was in the Plebeian quarter and much favoured by that party. The connection of the old Latin Liber, a deity of vine culture and agriculture, led to his being associated with Ceres and sometimes with Bacchus. The name Liber was thought to be connected with 'liberare', to 'set free'. Seneca said (de tranq. anim. 15), Liber was so called because he freed the workers from their work.

From this we see how the Romans joined Feronia and Libera as names of the nymph of freedom.

The head of Liber appears on Denarii of L. Cassius Q.F. 79 B.C. or 74 B.C. and on denarii of Petronia Gens, Turpilianus III vir, in 20 B.C. On other of his coins the head of Feronia appeared at the same time.

In 73 B.C. (de Salis) or 88 B.C. (Babelon), Marcus Volteius issued denarii with the head of Liber.

An ancestor of Turpilianus is said to have copied the Sibylline Books in which was found an order to erect a temple to Liber and Libera. The Petronii were proud of their part in inaugurating the temple of Liber and Libera. Feronia the Sabine nymph was regarded as the same as Libera. The Sabine temple was at Capene where games in her honour were celebrated. The most important of the fairs for commerce was that held near the temple of Feronia at

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN
GENERAL LIBRARY

Soracte. It was on the boundary between the Etruscan and Sabine lands and Roman merchants attended these gatherings.

Feronia was regarded as the patroness of freedmen who received a cap for their recently shaven heads in her temple. Plautus in the Amphitryone mentions this custom: "would that Jupiter would grant me a cap and shaven head".

Varro called Feronia the goddess of liberty.

Feronia seems to have had other powers such as we read of in Virgil's Aeneid (VIII, 564): "with this right hand I sent down king Herilus to Tartarus; to whom at his birth, dreadful to relate, her mother Feronia had given three lives".

Servius in a note on this passage calls Feronia "Nympha Campaniae". "She also is the goddess of freedmen and in her temple when their heads were shaven they received a cap". In her temple at Terracina was a stone seat with the following inscription: "Let deserving slaves sit, let them rise free".

August 13th was known as the day of the dedication of the temple of Diana on the Aventine ascribed to Servius Tullius. The cult appears to have been that of the Latins who joined with the Romans to build it. Varro called it "Commune Latinorum Dianæ templum". It was from the beginning in some sense extra Roman, and was specially connected with the Plebs and with slaves. This date in August was a holiday for slaves, perhaps after the harvest. Verrius Flaccus seems to connect by a poor pun the cult of Feronia with this temple to Diana in Rome "The Ides of August are commonly considered to be the festal day of slaves, because on that day Servius Tullius, who was born a slave, dedicated the temple of Diana on the Aventine. Under her protection were stags (cervi) from which fact they call run away slaves (stags), owing to their speed". The conception of stags as Diana's favourite beasts is Greek and much later introduced to Rome; the pun is late and of no importance.

Another note of Servius is given on Aen. VII, 800, viridi gaudens Feronia luco. "Virgil does not for nothing add the word viridis, for when once the grove of this fountain had been burnt through a chance conflagration, and the inhabitants wished to remove the images from it, it suddenly grew green again."

This grove was in Etruria between Veii and the Tiber. There was another grove between Luna and Pisa, and another in Latium in Terracina (Aen. VIII, 564, Her Sab., I, 5, 24).

The story of King Servius having been born a slave is mentioned by Plutarch in his Roman Questions (100), and he adds the fact that Roman women washed their heads on Aug. 18th to celebrate the festival.

Silius Italicus (XIII, line 84) says of the Carthaginians: "they advanced to the territory where, before all, the wealthy Feronia is worshipped in a grove and the sacred Capenas irrigates the water meadows". The story goes that the wealth untouched from the beginning of the ancient shrine grew through a vast period from gifts heaped up from all sides, fear alone protecting them, and "gold left for countless lustres", were pillaged by Hannibal's army.

Pliny (N.H. lib. II, 55) just mentions her temple in Terracina.

Alexander says people inspired in the temple of Feronia could walk unhurt over fire.

Livy in relating the cause of the Sabine war (I, 30) said: "Tullus complained that some Roman merchants had been seized in a crowded market near the temple of Feronia; the Sabines that some of this people had taken refuge in that grove and were detained in Rome".

Livy, XXII, 1. In 217 B.C., "During the time of distress owing to the Hannibalic invasion, and in consequence of omens the senate decreed on the advice of the sacred college... that the freedwomen should contribute money in proportion to their means, from which an offering might be made to Feronia".

Livy, XXVI, 11. In 211 B.C. "Hannibal withdrew from Rome to six miles distance by the river Tutia; from thence he proceeded to the grove of Feronia a temple at that time famous for its wealth. The Capenates were of old its neighbours and bringing thither the first fruits and other gifts in proportion to their abundance they had adorned it with much gold and silver.

The Temple was then stripped of all these gifts, large heaps of bronze were found after Hannibal's departure since the soldiers untouched by respect for religion tossed about unwrought metal".

Livy, XXVII, c. 4. "In the Capenate district by the grove of Feronia four statues sweated with blood one night". This refers to 210 B.C.

These coins bearing emblems of Feronia remind us of the natural love of liberty which was thus symbolized even during the period when slavery was thought natural to the men of that dark time.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTICES OF MEDALLISTS

Coin, Gem, and Seal Engravers, Ancient and Modern, with References to their Works.

Most of the previous articles have been revised and republished in the "Biographical Dictionary of Medallists". The references to that work in these supplementary articles will be indicated by the letters "B.D.M." together with the number of the volume and its page.

PINGO, LEWIS (B.D.M., Vol. IV, p. 551). Dr Bousfield possesses an early Royal Humane Society Medal, circ. 1793, signed L.P. of similar type to the later one signed PISTRVCCI, who obviously copied it.

One of the best known medals by this artist is that of Thomas Snelling, the numismatist. Dr Bousfield owns an unfinished die, varying in detail.

By Lewis Pingo is a medal of Granby, which I reproduced in error under John Kirk (Vol. III, p. 164).

Pingo won Premiums of the R. Society of Arts in 1756 and 1759 for Drawings; Premiums in 1759 and 1760 for Medallions, Premiums in 1757, 1758, 1760 and 1761 for Ornamental Designs; Premiums in 1761, 1763 and 1764 for Die Engraving; Premium in 1763 for gem Engraving; gilt Palette in 1770, gold Palette in 1771 and 1772 for Medallions. Third son of Thomas Pingo. Died 1830. (Sir H.T. Wood, Royal Society of Arts Journal 1912, p. 745.)

Lewis Pingo exhibited at the Society of Artists : 1760. Three medals and their reverses in plaster, viz., 1st. The honorary Prize Medal of the Society for Promoting Arts and Commerce, from a design of Mr. James Stuart; 2nd. The Union of the Army and Navy at Louisburg; 3rd. A portrait of a gentleman; in wax; — A model of a medal; ditto; — A model of Justice; ditto; — A frame with four medals, viz. His Majesty, Mr. Penn, Dr. Mead, Marquis of Granby; — 1779. A portrait, in wax, of Admiral Keppel; modelled from the life; — 1782. The Earl of Sandwich; in wax; — Model, in wax, of Lord Keppel.

PINGO, THOMAS (B.D.M., Vol. IV, p. 558). Dr Bousfield has a medal by this artist, showing Christ Church College Buildings. By Pingo are further; Capture of Belleisle, 1761 (CALONESVS CAPTA).

The R. Society of Arts paid 80 guineas in 1758 for making the dies for the Society's First Medal from a design by James Stuart, the Architect "Athenian Stuart". His daughter Mary Pingo won Premiums of the R. S. of Arts in 1758 and 1759 for Ornamental Designs; in 1761 and 1762 for Drawings of Flowers (Sir H.T. Wood, R. Soc. of Arts Journ. 1912, p. 749).

One of Thomas Pingo's remarkable works is the gold Medal presented by King George II. to Captain Callis, of the fireship "Duke", for services in burning five Spanish galleys at St. Tropez, 1742.

Obv. PRO.TALIBUS.AUSIS; the King, dressed as a Roman Emperor, presenting the medal to Captain Callis, shown kneeling to right; on the exergual line, T.PINGO.F.

Rev. View of St. Tropez; five Spanish galleys blockaded by the British squadron and engaged by the "Duke". In the exergue, OB.V.TRIREM.A.S./CALLIS.COMBUST.V./IVLII.MDCCXLII. Gold, 2.1 in. diam. — ornamental loop on top with original swivel, ring and bow attached.

A small British squadron under the command of Captain Norris, when bearing in for the French port of St. Tropez, was attacked by five Spanish galleys which had taken refuge in the harbour. The neutrality of the port having been thus violated, Captain Norris at once blockaded it, and ordered the fireship "Duke" to bear down and engage the enemy. These orders were promptly carried out, and, after a fierce contest, crowned with the most complete success. In recognition of this meritorious and courageous service, this unique decoration was presented by the King to Captain Callis. The action was fought early in June, 1742; the date noted on the medal probably records the reception of the news in London. Vide Schomberg : "Naval Chronol." I, 287; and "Med. Ill. Brit. Hist." II, 568/203.

This medal passed from Captain (afterwards Admiral) Callis to his sister, Anne Callis, who was wife of Thomas Western of Rivenhall, Essex, and grandmother of Lord Western, under whose Will it passed to the present owner.

This medal was purchased by Messrs Spink for £400.

Thomas Pingo exhibited at the Free Society : 1763. The face and reverse of a medal on the birth of the Prince of Wales; — 1764. The face and reverse of the Catch-Club medal; — A model in wax; — 1765. A coronation medal of Stanislaus Augustus, King of Poland; from an original drawing sent from Warsaw; — 1766. Two medals, engraved; one to strike gold, and the other silver, on the election of His Royal Highness, Prince Frederick, to the bishopric of Osnaburgh; — A pattern of a crown piece of Stanislaus Augustus, King of Poland; — A premium medal, engraved for the Board of Ordnance; — 1767. A copper medal of Charles, Lord Camden, designed by Mr. Stuart; — 1768. A proof of a guinea for His Majesty's Mint at Hanover; — 1769. A medal of the late Lord Anson; on the reverse is a figure representing Circumnavigation, round it are disposed six crowns of laurel, in which are inscribed the names of the principal officers, who served with his lordship in the expedition round the world; — 1770. A medal engraved for the Worshipful Company of Surgeons, given in gold to the faculty, as a reward for any new discovery in surgery; — A premium medal, given in gold by the Society for Improvement of Agriculture, in Nottinghamshire, and West Riding of Yorkshire; designed by Mr. James Stuart; — 1771. A proof of premium medals, designed by the late Lord Botetourt, and intended to be given annually for the encouragement of learning in the College of William and Mary in Virginia; completed under the direction of His Grace the Duke of Beaufort; — 1772. A proof of the premium medal, given by the Salford Hundred Society, of Agriculture, in Lancashire; — 1773. A small medal for an Irish Society in America; — 1774. A proof of a guinea; from a new die.

PIOMBO, SEBASTIANO DEL (Ital.). Was called DEL PIOMBO, because he was Piombatore or Keeper of the Leadens Seals (Bullae) of Popes Clement VII and Paul III. It is very unlikely that he had anything to do with the designing of Papal medals or seals. He was succeeded on his death by his friend, Titian, in the office of Piombatore to the Pope (Communication from Dr F.P. Weber).

PIQUER, C. (Span.). Contemporary Die-engraver of Barcelona, whose signature occurs on medals of the First Universal Exhibition at Barcelona, 1888.

PIRIX, J.M. (B.D.M., Vol. IV, p. 563). There is a medal of Aloisio de Montalto, 1638, by this artist, signed : J.M. PIRIX (illust.).

Aloisio de Montalto, 1638.

PIRON, RENÉ LOUIS (French). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, residing in Paris. He exhibited at the Salon des Artistes français, 1920, a frame containing six Plaquettes and Medals : Portrait of Mgr. Lacroix; — M^{me} P. K; — Madame Chamboredon; — Professeur Sieur; — M^{me} Cl. C; — M. F. Zeppa.

PISTOIA, FALCONE DA (Ital.). Mint-master at Antwerp, second third of xivth century.

PISTRUCCI, BENEDETTO (B.D.M., Vol. IV, p. 582). This artist signed one of the early issues of the Royal Humane Society, but copied the Genius which appears on it from Lewis Pingo's design. Recent issues of these medals bear no signatures of artists; they were apparently struck by W. J. Taylor and the Wyon die-sinking establishment.

Dr Bousfield possesses the following dies, etc., of Pistrucci : 1. Matrix and two Puncheons for R. of George IV's medal with Trident on R.; all different; 2. Puncheon for obv and two Puncheons for R. of Wellington medal, 1841, with Helmet (two types; one apparently unfinished).

Messrs. Spink own a beautiful Portrait-cameo of George IV, which was once presented by King Edward VII. to a friend. The British Museum preserves the famous cameo known as 'the Flora of Pistrucci', which Payne-Knight, to the day of his death, treasured as an antique, despite Pistrucci's claim to its authorship. Cf. Dalton, B. M. Cat. of Engraved Gems (n° 176).

It is told of Pistrucci that, until his death at seventy-three years of age, he never had to use glasses for his work (Osborne, Engraved Gems, p. 276).

The story of the Flora, now in the British Museum is told by Osborne, and is worth repeating here, both as evidence of the general situation and because it was, doubtless, one of the incidents that paved the way for the collapse which the Poniatowski gems precipitated. Briefly, the facts are that when Pistrucci was at work at the house of Sir Joseph Banks, on a model for a portrait-head, Mr. Richard Payne Knight, one of the best known antiquaries and collectors of the time, called and showed them triumphantly a small head in cameo which he held to be a veritable antique and for which he had just paid £500 to the dealer, Bonelli. The gem was broken off from the back of the head down to the throat and the lower part was lacking. Pistrucci at once announced that, six years before, he himself had executed the cameo as a Flora on a stone of peculiar shape which he had managed so that it seemed to have been broken, and that he had got £5 from Bonelli for it. He further said that they would find his private mark hidden in the hair at the top of the head, unless Bonelli had erased it. How far Payne Knight yielded at the time we have only Pistrucci's word for and he claims that he did yield, after an angry dispute. It is certain that the connoisseur was touched at his most sensitive point. He soon succeeded, however, with the aid of Bonelli, in reassuring himself; and to the time of his death refused to accept the gem as other than antique, cataloguing it, finally, as a Proserpina crowned with flowers and maintaining Pistrucci's claim to be an impudent attempt to prove an unmerited pre-eminence for himself. Experts took sides and the controversy waxed hot, with the inevitable result of unsettling the opinions of many as to the infallibility of the judgments they had relied on. Considering now the 'Flora' in the light of present knowledge, it is hard to see how it could ever have been an object of dispute among cognoscenti. Whether Pistrucci did it or not, it is quite apparent that it is no work of antiquity (Duffield Osborne, Engraved Gems, 1912, p. 190).

Pistrucci exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1830, 1832, 1839 and 1840. His exhibit in 1840 included Models for obverse and reverse of a medal of Field Marshal the Duke of Wellington; Model of the obverse of a medal in commemoration of the marriage of H.M. Queen Victoria with H.R.H. Prince Albert; Model of reverse.

PISTRUCCI, Miss ELENA (B. D. M., Vol. IV, p. 620). Exhibited at the British Institution : 1847. Gems : Head of Jupiter, after the antique; Head of Bacchante; — 1848. Gems : Head of Psyche, in a German agate; Head of a Nymph, in a German agate.

PISTRUCCI, Miss M. ELISA (B. D. M., Vol. IV, p. 620). Exhibited at the British Institution : 1847. Gems : Head of Proserpine, after the antique; Head of Diana, after the antique; — 1848. Gems : Faun and young Faun, in oriental sardonyx.

PITT, ROBERT (Brit.). Mint-engraver in London, succeeded to Henry Bayse, Michelmas 1549, but obtained his formal grant in March 1549-50. He had already been in office as under-graver since 1546. John Lawrence remained as assistant. "At this point", says Mr. Hy. Symonds, "there was another importation of an expert from the Continent. Anthony Levers, "a Frenchman", was employed for some time between October, 1547, and the same month in 1550, and, apparently accompanied by "certain French and Dutch men, set about the graving of irons within the Tower. The "prentyses" of the graver and under-graver are now mentioned, and we also learn that 593 dozen and 2 of coining irons at 7s. 3d. the dozen were provided during the three years in question (Audit Office Accts., 1670/495). Pitt did not remain in office longer than August 1551, as we find that on the 19th of that month, Sir Edmund Peckham was ordered to stay from giving the office of graver of the Mint, and to see the workmanship of a certain John Gramvett, and to certify whether he was fit or no" (Acts P.C.). Cf. Hy Symonds, Engravers of the Tudor and Stuart Periods, Num. Chron., 1913, p. 357.

PLACHT, RICHARD (Austr.) (B. D. M., Vol. IV, p. 624). Was born in Vienna in 1880. He studied in the Royal Academy of Arts in Vienna under the Austrian medallist, Professor Joseph Tautenhayn. Since 1904 he has been employed in the service of the State at the Royal Mint. In 1908 was created a member of the Society of Arts in Vienna. Appointed Mint-engraver and Medallist in February 1913.

He exhibited the following works at the New York International Medallist Exhibition, held in March 1910 :—

PLATERIA DE MARTINEZ (Span.). This signature occurs on a medal of Isabella II commemorating the African War, 1860.

PLATOVIC, PLATON (Germ.). To this Engraver, F. Tewes, late keeper of the Museum at Hanover, ascribes a Memorial medal of King George V, 1878, described by Fiala, Münzen und Medaillen der Welfischen Lande, Das neue Haus Lüneburg zu Hannover, 1915, p. 720.

PLATT, JOHN E. (Brit.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist residing at Leek, Staffs. At the Royal Exhibition 1914 he exhibited designs for the obv. and rev. of a gold medal intended for the Leek and Moorlands Co-operative Society.

PLATTNER, ANDREAS (Germ.). Mint-engraver at Stolberg, 1575-79.

POBJE, A. (Irish). Wax Modeller; flourished circa 1810. Cf. Strickland, A Dictionary of Irish Artists, II, p. 247.

POELCHINGER (Germ.). Signature on a charming cameo of a female head (communication from Mr. A. E. Knight).

POELLATH, KARL (B.D.M., Vol. IV, p. 639). Additional works issued by the Schrobenshausen Medal Mint: Medal of Merit with bust of the German Empress, Vaterländisches Frauenverein in Königshütte O.-Schl. (dies cut by Fritz Hörnlein, medallist to the Royal Mint at Dresden); — 90th Birthday of Prince Regent Luitpold of Bavaria; — Accession of King Ludwig III.; — Field Marshal von Hindenburg, 1914; 28 mill.

POGGINI, GIANPAOLO (B.D.M., Vol. IV, p. 632). One of the medals of Philip II., uniface, by this artist is reproduced below.

Uniface Medal of Philip II by Poggini.

POGLIAGHI, LUIGI (B.D.M., Vol. IV, p. 635). Among this renowned sculptor's many productions, the most important are the enormous bronze central Portals for the Milan Cathedral. Signor Stefano Johnson exhibited the following medallic works by this artist at the New York International Medallic Exhibition, March 1910: Christoforo Colombo; — Roma; — The Virgin; — France and Italy; — Large model of the reverse of the Columbus medal; — River-god; — Bonita; — Sforza; — Flying figure (small medal); — Model for Messina Medal.

POISSON, PIERRE MARIE (French). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, residing in Paris; exhibited at the Salon des Beaux-Arts, Paris, 1920, a Commemorative Plaque in bronze.

POLY(CLEITES?) (Greek). Engraver and Silversmith of Agrigentum, circ. B.C. 412-406. Dr Arthur Sambon has published an Agrigentine tetradrachm from M. Paul Mathey's collection which bears his distinct signature.

Tetradrachm of Agrigentum (B.C. 412-406).

The letters ΠΟΛΥ are concealed between the barbs of the last feather of the eagle's left wing.

The coin, which belongs to the last years of the independence of Agrigentum, ranks amongst the finest productions issued under the magistrature of Silanos and Straton.

Poly may have been, as Dr Sambon surmises, a native of Elis.

Gilbert ; — Dr. Auguste Navarra, Paris ; — 1920. Une seule famille, "La France" ; — Alsace, plaquette ; — Lorraine, plaquette ; — Souvenez-vous, 1914-1918 ; — Œuvre du soldat ardennais ; — Portrait du Roi Albert I ; — Les Veuves de Marins, etc.

The Pasteur Medal, executed in 1910, is a clever work.

Later works : General Gallieni ; 31 mill. ; — Alsace and Lorraine ; two Plaquettes, 69×51 mill. ; — Œuvre du soldat ardennais ; Æ Plaquette, 70×51 mill. ; — Nurse Edith Cavell, 1915 ; 29 mill. ; — Verdun, 1916 ; Æ 29 mill.

PUECH, DENYS PIERRE (B.D.M., Vol. IV, p. 708). At the Salon, 1910, he exhibited a Portrait-medal of M. Daumet, membre de l'Institut.

PUTINATI, FRANCESCO (B.D.M., Vol. IV, p. 711). Dr. Itrier has brought to my notice two plaquettes, of very fine execution, by this artist : 1. Raphael's Mount Parnassus with Apollo and the Muses, 1825, 156×196 mill. ; 2. Woman taken in adultery, 1827 ; 165×104 mill.

PUTTE, GUILLAUME VAN DE (Flem.). Mint-engraver at Brussels, 1577.

PYRGOTELES (B.D.M., Vol. IV, p. 715). "Alexander the Great commanded that only Pyrgoteles should be allowed to cut his likeness. This idea of the substitution of his own picture for that of some patron deity was probably justified by the young conqueror on the ground of his assumption of divinity. Portraits of him were held, at later periods, to possess a talismanic power ; all of which suggests a motive for the restrictive edict, more powerful, perhaps, than mere variety. Appuleius alleges as much when he speaks of it as 'Threatening that if any other artist should be discovered to have put his hand to the most sacred image of the sovereign, the same punishment should be inflicted upon him as if appointed for sacrilege'. From the many portraits of Alexander and the ordinary quality of most, it is easy to see that his face was popular subject for centuries after he and Pyrgoteles and the edict were dust.

"No gem that can be attributed to Pyrgoteles has yet been found, but such a splendid discovery is always among the possibilities. The probabilities are that no artist's signature would appear on any portrait of the divine king but that it would not be omitted on either work of the 'gem-engraver to His Majesty'" (Duffield Osborne, Engraved Gems, pp. 57, 62).

QUELIN, RENÉ T. DE (Amer.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist residing in New York, by whom is one of the medals issued by the 'Circle of Friends of the Medallion' in 1913. Gen. John C. Fremont, the Pathfinder of the West.

RANSOM, FRANK (Brit.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, residing in London. At the Royal Academy 1911 he exhibited a frame of medals.

RANSON, THOMAS FRAZER (Brit.). Line-engraver, 1784-1826. Learned his art at Newcastle-upon-Tyne. His plates include a good portrait of George IV after E. Scott. He won the Silver Medal of the Royal Academy of Arts in 1814, and gold Medals in 1821 and 1822 for Engraving. He was interested in the question of preventing the forgery of bank-notes, and barely escaped conviction for having a forged note in his possession (Sir H. T. Wood, Journ. of the R. S. of Arts, 1912, p. 750).

RAPPUSCH, HEINRICH (or RAPBOST) the Elder (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 30). Dr. Habich says P. J. Meier is right in differentiating between the author of the rough Medals of John George of Brandenburg and Christian I. of Saxony on one side and the artist of the elegant medals of the house of Brunswick. The latter are also signed IR as the former, but came into existence about 20 years later and differ entirely in style. Meier is probably correct in suggesting that the Heinrich Rappusch of the Brunswick medals was a son of the elder Berlin Heinrich Rappusch.

According to Nicolai, Heinrich Rappusch the elder was appointed in Berlin for ten years in 1579, but Sarre points out that as early as 1574 he had acquired the Berlin burghership, so that one may not unreasonably look for earlier medals of the Court of Brandenburg by him. Dr Habich mentions the following : 1578. John George and Elizabeth of Brandenburg; — 1588. The same; R. Christian I. and Sophia of Saxony; signed; — Undated. Joachim Frederick and Katharina of Brandenburg; varieties (Heräus 40, 47 and 40, 12); — Undated. Joachim Frederick, alone; pendant. To these belongs possibly also a Klippe of 1573, of John George and his second wife, Sabina of Brandenburg. Vide G. Habich, Die deutschen Medailleure des XVI. Jahrhunderts, Munich, 1916.

RASUMNY, FÉLIX (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 33). This artist exhibited the following works at the Paris Salon 1910: Leda; — Salomé; — Two Portrait-plaquettes; — Commerce, Industry and Agriculture, plaquette; — 1912. Leda, ivory plaquette; — Salome, ivory plaquette; — Pius X., plaquette; — Adoration of Infant Christ, plaquette; — Christ at the Tomb, plaquette; — La Liseuse, plaquette; — The Republic, plaquette; — Comité républicain du Commerce, Industrie et Agriculture, plaquette; — Pierre le Grand and Nicolas II., face and reverse; — 1913. Ten Plaquettes bronze silvered: Comité républicain; — Jeanne d'Arc bergère; — Portrait Ribo; — Vierge en Egypte; — La Prévoyance; and two medals: Vierge et enfant et Christiane; — Portrait Christiane (bronze); — King George V of Great Britain, 1914-15; R. 18 mill.; — Marshal Joffre; R. 27 mill.; — 1910. RÉCIPON, GEORGES (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 54). By this artist is a Portrait-plaquette of M. le sénateur A. Mézières, which was exhibited at the Paris Salon, 1910.

REFFINGER, WERNHARD (Swiss). Son of the preceding, Mint-master at Basle, mentioned in 1627. Cf. Carl Roth, in Schweiz. Künstler-Lexikon, Suppl., p. 358.

REGA, FILIPO (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 58). Dalton calls him an excellent artist, excelling both in portraits and in mythological subjects, who from 1776-87 worked under the Pichlers at Rome, and was later employed at the Court of Naples. His work is represented in the Brit. Mus. Collection by the following gems: Onyx (n° 397), laureate head of Joseph Napoleon to l. (signed PEFA); — Beryl (n° 745). Bust of a Nereid to r., with conventional indication of waves below (PEFA), and also probably by him: Agate (n° 396), laureate head of Napoleon I. to l. (about 1800); — Sard (n° 571), Head of Jupiter to r. wearing a wreath of oak-leaves; — Sard (n° 1138), Bust of a Man to r. with whiskers; short beard and moustache (PEFA). Cf. O. M. Dalton, B.M. Cat. of Engraved Gems of the Post-classical Periods, 1915.

REGO, DOMINGO ALVES (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 65). This artist's name occurs on the postage stamps of King Manuel of Portugals 1909-1910.

REICH, DAVID (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 68). Born on 29. October 1715, died on 7. September 1771. He cut dies for Half Kreutzer, dated 1766, and undated Kreuzer, also some commemorative medals with his monogram (DR), and a model of the Abbey of St. Gall, of which he had a description printed in Hamburg 1748, and of which there is a copper plate by P. A. Kilian.

REIGER, JOHN (Germ.). Warden of Breslau, 1615-1635.

REIMER, HANS (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 73). Dr Habich, Die deutschen Medailleure des XVI. Jahrhunderts, p. 171 enumerates the following works of this artist: 1583. Duke Ernest of Bavaria, archbishop of Cologne; — 1593. A pendant of the same; — Another, smaller; in honestone; signed: HR; and a Miniature piece; — Also, Klippe Pendant of Rudolph II., 1584; R. Christ carrying his cross; signed HR (in Brit. Mus.), but which Dr Habich suggests might equally well be attributed to Hans Reinhard.

REINHARD, HANS (B.D.M., Vol. V, 76). Dr G. Habich (Die deutschen Medailleure des XVI. Jahrhunderts, 1916) ascribes to this artist the following productions: 1535. Prince Elector John Frederick of Saxony; R. Shield of arms. Model in wood, in Gotha Museum. Varieties given in my preceding article. Another with smaller inscription and R. without inscription; — 1535. Cardinal Albrecht of Brandenburg. Head after the Nuremberg medal of 1527; R. RICHÉ, LOUIS (French). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, born in Paris; pupil of S. Gardet. At the Paris Salon 1912, he exhibited a series of 13 bronze plaquettes of animals.

RICHER, Dr PAUL (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 111). At the Paris Salon 1913 this artist exhibited five Portrait-plaquettes in bronze. Among his later works are: Dr J. Teissier, Lyons; — Dr Pierre Dolbet, 1910; — Dr Hutinal, Paris.

RICHER, JEHAN (French). Mint-master at Lyons, 1491: a rosette.

RICHTER, BENEDIKT (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 119). By this Medallist is also the medal of Tanfield Vachell, of Coley, Reading (52 mill.), published by Dr. G. F. Hill, Two Medals of Englishmen, Num. Chron., 1919, p. 61; from the collection of M. A. David, Paris. It was probably executed in 1703, at the time of Richter's visit to England, when he made also the medals of Sir Jacob Banks and Sir William Rich, and other well-known Englishmen.

RIDDER, HANS (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 122). This Mint-master's initials occur on a medal commemorating the Termination of the Oldenburg Succession dispute, 1676 (dies cut by Erasmus Thomas Reuss).

RIEDEL, JOHANN (Germ.). Cf. Vol. VI, p. 123. Signed sometimes R.J. Some of his medals appear to have been struck at the Die-sinking establishment of J.L. Stockmar; so the commemorative medal of the Third Centenary of the Reformation at Leipzig, 1839, which is signed: L.S.ED.

RIEDERER, HERMANN VON (Germ.). Mint-Director at Munich, † 25. October 1918. He had been for forty years in the service of the Mint.

RIEMENSCHNEIDER, TILMAN (Germ.). A celebrated Wood-carver of Würzburg of the first half of the sixteenth century. His Portrait-relief in wood, dated 1520, occurred in the Erbstein Collection, n° 20016 (Ad. Hess Nachf., Frankfurt a.M.).

RIEU, ANTOINE DU (French). Mint-master at Villefranche de Rouergue, about 1550: fleur-de-lys; the same, 1552: a crescent.

RIGELE, ALOIS (Austr.) Contemporary Engraver, employed by the die-sinking firm of Gebrüder Schneider of Vienna. His signature occurs on a Portrait-medal of Liszt.

RIESE, ABRAHAM (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 126). I am able to illustrate this Medallist's work by two medals, one of Count Ernest of Mansfeld, and the other of Emperor Rudolph II.

Count Ernest of Mansfeld.

Emperor Rudolph II.

RINGEL, LEONARD (Germ.), Mint-master at Aix-la-Chapelle, circa 1707.

RIPLEY, LUCY PERKINS (Amer.). Contemporary Sculptor; exhibited at the Amer. Num. Society 1923 a cast medallion, bronze, uniface, War.

RITCHIE, CHARLES THOMSON (Brit.). Chancellor of the Exchequer and ex officio Master of the Royal Mint, London, 1902-1903. He was created Baron Ritchie of Dundee in 1905. Born November 19th, 1838. Died January 6th, 1906.

RIVAUD, ANDRÉ ADOLPHE (French). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist; born in Paris. At the Salon of the Société nationale des Beaux-Arts, Paris, 1913, he exhibited a selection of his works, engraved in steel: Plaquette, L'établi de mon père; — Médaille-insigne, "Pour nos sœurs"; — Two jetons, one in silver, and the other in silver-gilt, "Tête de Sinagot". Marin breton. Séné, Morbihan; — in 1920. Médaille de la Victoire (engraved direct in steel).

RIVIÈRE, LOUIS AUGUSTE THÉODORE (French). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, born at Toulouse. Awards: medal of honour 1885; medal of the third class 1894; medal of the second class 1895; gold medal 1900 (U.S.A.); created a Knight of the Legion of Honour in 1899 and Officer in 1906. Among his works are many ivory statuettes, and a famous ivory group, Le Triomphe de la Courtisane (belongs to M^{me} Paquin). He is the author of some medals and plaquettes.

RIZZO, ANTONIO (Ital.). Sculptor of Verona and Bronze caster (circ. 1430-1498) to whom are attributed some of the statues of Doge Troni's tomb at the Frari, the statues of Adam and Eve, the Arco Foscari, facing the Giants' staircase, at the Palace of the Doges, the statue of Mars to the left of that of Adam, and possibly the group in marble above the gate of Sant' Apollinaro in the vicinity of the Frari, which depicts the Venetian general Vittore Cappello kneeling and receiving from St. Helena the staff of command before starting for the war. Prof. Dr S. Pozzi has described in Revue numismatique, 1914, pp. 201-206, a very fine Portrait-plaquette of General Vittore Cappello, in his possession, which he ventures to ascribe to the author of the group above referred to. This uniface Plaque is 140 mill. by 115 mill. and illustrated on Pl. VI of Rev. Num., 1914.

ROBBINS CO., ATTLEBORO, MASS(achusetts) (Amer.). Die-sinkers, whose signature occurs on a medal of the Athletic Association of Brown University (Providence, R.I.).

ROBERT-MÉRIGNAC, M^{me} ERNESTA (Vide MÉRIGNAC, Vol. IV, p. 36). Sculptor and Medallist; Officier de l'Instruction Publique; Plaque, by M^{me} Ernesta Robert-Mérignac.

Secrétaire lauréate des "Artistes Français"; Hors Concours à l'Union des Femmes Peintres et Sculpteurs; Medal-engraver to the French Mint.

This artist's principal works include, Two Bas-reliefs in marble purchased by the City of Paris for the Hôtel-de-Ville: Saintongeaise; — Auvergnate; — Fourteen Plaquettes in bronze and silver, exhibited at the Mint Museum (the twelve principal representing the varied Headdresses of France, "Coiffes de France"); — Two Plaquettes illustrating French Fencing; — Bas-relief in marble at the Vatican, Portrait of H. H. Pius X.; — Bas-relief in marble in the Mestreau Museum at Saintes: Charentaise; — Other works in the Brussels, Ghent, and other museums, etc.

Her chief Portrait-medallions and Plaquettes are: Marshal Joffre, generalissimo; — Dr Roux, Director of the Pasteur Institute; — Professeur Duclaux, Pasteur's successor; — Dr Vaillard, Médecin Inspecteur; — D. André, mathematician; — Leopold Flameng; — Duchesse d'Uzès; — Kirchoffer; — Les Mérignac, and all the principal Fencing Masters, etc.

M^{me} Robert-Mérignac has been exhibiting every year, since 1909, at the Salon des Artistes Français in both sections of Sculpture and Medal-engraving.

Among her most recent works (1917) I have noted two Plaquettes: To our Heroes; — To the Bravest (illustrated); — Alsacienne; — Lorraine; — Portrait of the Generalissimo Marshal Joffre, which his friends of Perpignan declare to be more life-like than any other similar works (medallion of 200 mill.).

ROBERTSON, JAMES (Irish). "Herald-painter and Seal-cutter; was living in Crane Lane, Dublin, in 1792, and at 41 Castle Street in 1793. He died in, or about 1799. His sons, WILLIAM and JOHN carried on their father's business" (Strickland, op. cit., II, p. 574).

ROBERT, JEAN (French). Mint-master at Toulouse, 1555: letter R.

ROBERTS-AUSTEN, SIR WILLIAM CHANDLER, K.C.B. (Brit.). Acting Deputy Master of the Royal Mint, London, after the retirement of The Honourable Sir Charles William Fremantle, K.C.B., until the appointment of Mr. Horace Alfred Damer Seymour. He was a son of Mr. George Roberts of Tulse Hill, London, and assumed the name of Austen by Royal licence in 1886. He was appointed Chemist and Assayer to the Royal Mint, London, in 1870. Born 1843. Died November 22nd, 1902.

ROBERTSON, J. (Brit.). Gem-engraver; exhibited at the Royal Academy: 1833. Head of Melpomene; in engraving on a die; — 1836. Medallion portrait of the late Robert Edmonstone, Esq.; — 1838. Portrait in wax of William Maugham, Esq., lecturer on chemistry; — 1840. Ajax.

ROBERTSON, WILLIAM (Brit.). Die sinker and engraver. Died at 8, Nigil Gardens, Waverley Park, Shawlands, Glasgow, in the year 1916.

ROBIN, PHILIPPE (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 141). Born at Geneva on 6. May 1729, died on 12. October 1792; was apprenticed to his uncle Pierre Légaré, with whom he engraved gratuitously the forty silver communion cups (1753). First secretary of the Société des Arts; Engraver at the Geneva Mint, 1780. He is probably the author of the dies for the Deux-quarts of 1785 and 1788, Trois-quarts of 1785, Sols of 1785, 1786 and 1788, Trois-sols and Six-sols of 1791. Besides his coin-dies, he engraved the reverse of a medal of the Société des Arts. and the jeton of its general committee, as well as that of the Société médicale. In 1780 he was entrusted with the cutting of new dies for the Scholastic Prize medals. The merit of his work led the government of Fribourg to entrust him 1786 with the engraving of the new coins of that canton, which order he carried out to the complete satisfaction of the Council. ROBINSON, ALFRED F. (Amer.). "Issuer of Copper Store Cards, Banker, Broker, and Notary Public, Dealer in stocks, bonds, notes, land warrants, uncurrent money, and all kinds of American and Foreign Specie. He resided, 309 Main St., Hartford, Conn., 1861, and was a general collector of medals, autographs, engravings, Charter Oak relics, tokens, store cards, and coins, two different sales of his collections being held in 1861 — one by Bangs, Merwin and Co., of New York City, on Jan. 28-29, and the other by Leonard and Co., of Boston, on April 16, 1861".

"Robinson was responsible", continues Mr. Edgar H. Adams, "for the striking of quite a number of medals and tokens, in nearly every instance probably the die-work being executed by Joseph H. Merriam, the well-known Boston Engraver. Among the medals issued by Robinson were the Stephen A. Douglas "Little Giant", "Intervention is Disunion", "Fourth of July", and "Jefferson and Adams" medals, which embraced several design varieties and were struck in several metals. Among others he is said to have been instrumental in having struck are the Clinton NON VI VIRTUTE VICI, Rosa Americana Twopence, Brasher Dobloon, etc.

ROBINSON & CO. (Brit.). A firm of Die-sinkers of Shrewsbury, who issued in 1903 a medal commemorating the 500th Anniversary of the Battle of Shrewsbury 1403-1903. Four specimens were issued in gold. The children of the fourth standard and upwards in all elementary schools in the town — about 1800 — were presented with medals in white metal and bronze medals were given to the teachers, about 180. The medal was designed by the Mayor (Mr. Herbert Southam, drawn by Mr. E. Cole, heraldic artist. On the obv. is a reproduction of Battlefield church in its present form, showing the East Front and the statue of Henry IV. On the rev. are the arms of Edward VII, of Henry IV (in 1403) France ancient and England quarterly, and also the arms of Shrewsbury and of the County of Salop, with laurel-branches and the Lancastrian rose.

ROCHE, M^{lle} CLOTILDE (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 142). At the Paris Salon 1913 this artist exhibited Medallions and Patterns for medals.

ROCHE, HONORAT DE LA (French). Mint-master at Aix, 1544-47: letter R.

ROCHE, JEHAN DE LA (French). Mint-master at Poitiers, 1533-40: letter : R.

ROCHE, JOHN (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 143). Not JOHN VERNON, as formerly mentioned. Strickland, A Dictionary of Artists, II, p. 294, gives the following account of this Engraver: — Medallist; flourished circa 1733, 1760. Lived at the Golden Heart, Usher Street, Ushers' Quay, and afterwards in King Street, Stephen's Green. In 1738 he did a medal of Dean Swift. This medal, which is cast and roughly executed, bears a medallion bust of the Dean supported by Hibernia with her shield and spear, a Gorgon shield lying near her, and by History who crowns the bust with a laurel-wreath. Above is a winged figure with a crescent on her forehead, and near her an infant genius with a palm branch. Below is a scroll inscribed REV. I. SWIFT, D. S. P. D. On reverse is Hibernia seated, leaning upon a harp and holding an olive-branch; ships, flocks, and herds appear in the distance. On exergue, MDCCXXXVIII, and the artist's initials I. R. FECIT. The head of Swift is copied from the portrait engraved by P. Simons in Swift's "works", published in 1734. Roche also issued a medal commemorating the Taking of Porto Bello by Admiral Vernon, signed I. R. Dublin. It is an imitation of one of Pinchbeck's. One of the medals commemorating the Convention of El Pardo in 1739, by which Spain agreed to compensate British merchants and ship owners, signed J. R. is probably his.

"Roche in 1741 applied to the Dublin Society for its encouragement and help in the making of "Birmingham ware" which he had introduced into Ireland. Members of the Society were deputed to inspect "the engines and instruments" set up by him in his house in Usher's Quay, and they reported that they "saw his man go through the whole work of making buckles, buttons, etc., from mixing the metal in the furnace and cutting them, and, after stamping, filing the edges, drilling, polishing and finishing the same". They also reported that he had "furnished himself with all the utensils and conveniences from Birmingham, and brought with him thence several workmen and apprentices". As a result the Society voted him fifty pounds "for his encouragement". In an advertisement issued by him from the Golden Heart in March, 1747, he describes himself as the "only person in the Kingdom who makes all sorts of gilt, silver and plated coat buttons for gentlemen's wear, metal-buttons for livery, gilt and metal sleeve-buttons, iron, steel and metal shoe-buckles and other kinds of hardware". In the same year he petitioned the Irish Parliament, praying for encouragement in the manufacture of hardware; and in

"In 1760 there was such a scarcity of copper money in Ireland that, to meet the want of small change, a quantity of base coin was manufactured and put into circulation in Dublin. This gave an opportunity to Roche to issue copper half-pence and farthings which, being of good metal, were generally received in preference to the wretched stuff then in circulation. This coinage consisted of a series of half-pence and farthings which, from the inscription upon them, are known as the "Voce Populi" coinage. On the 29th August, 1760, the Lord Mayor, John Tew, issued a proclamation stating that being informed "that several copper smiths, tinkers and other persons have been and are now engaged in different parts of the city and the suburbs thereof in forming of base metal into an imitation of the copper half-pence current through this Kingdom", a reward would be given for bringing the offenders to justice. One Edward Barry was committed to Newgate, and in November was sentenced to stand twice in the pillory with a paper denoting his crime fixed on his breast and back. Roche's apparatus for striking his coins was seized, but further proceedings against him were stayed by his death, which occurred in his house in King Street on 24th September, 1760. In the notice of his death in "Faulkner's Journal" (30th September—4th October, 1760), he is described as "maker of the medals which have the words "Voce Populi" thereon, now passing as half-pence in this city". In his will, dated the day of his death, he describes himself as "of King Street, Stephen's Green, Dublin, manufacturer of hardware", and left his wife Susanna his house and all his "work-tools and utensils in his manufactory, and the mill and appurtenances thereunto belonging".

RODO. This signature occurs on a Portrait-medal of J. J. Rousseau, 55 mill.

RODRIGUEZ, P. V. (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 147). Medallist, born at Valencia; pupil of the Academy of San Carlos; was awarded a Prize in 1795 at the age of 21. In 1808, he was appointed chief-engraver at the Mint of Mexico.

RODRIGUEZ & CO. DESIDERIO (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 147). Further medals edited by this firm: Inauguration of the Palace of Justice in Barcelona, 1908; — Prize medal of the Spanish Exhibition in Mexico, 1910; — First Congress for the Study of Tuberculosis, Barcelona, 1910 (engraved by Cabanes).

ROEBUCK, BENJAMIN (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 147). Founded the Mint in India. A miniature portrait of his, by John Smart, was sold at Christie's in 1912 for 480 gs.

ROEST(?), NICOLAS (Flem.). Mint-master at Louvain, about 1375-1383.

ROETTIERS, JAMES (II) (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 157). Miss Helen Farquhar has kindly brought to my notice an error that has crept into my notice of this artist. It is James (II) himself, and not his son (James III) who came to London in January 1733, in company with his first cousin, James (IV), son of Norbert. The Mint Records mention that the younger of the two Engravers obtained an appointment; James II, who was born in 1698, was then 35, while his cousin James IV, son of Norbert, born in 1707, was only 26. It is therefore evident that James IV was the one appointed. James (III), son of James II, about whom nothing is known, and who died childless, was not then born, as he apparently was the second child, and his elder brother (François Marie Thérèse) having been born in 1746 (cf. Table on p. 173). My statement that James III came with James IV is therefore incorrect, and it should read James II. The same error has to be rectified on Table p. 176. On leaving London, James II was appointed Mint-engraver at Antwerp, in succession to his uncle Philip II, on 31. August 1733.

ROFF, Miss LETA R. (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 191). Contemporary Modeller, residing in London. At the Royal Academy 1913 she exhibited a Portrait-medallion.

ROGER-BLOCHE (French). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, whose medallic work was represented in the Roger Marx Collection by three plaquettes: Georges Hayem, 70×50 mill.; — En Manœuvres, 65×80 mill.; — Soldats, 80×55 mill.

ROHLOFF, Prof. OTTO (Germ.). Contemporary Sculptor and Modeller of Berlin, by whom are some relief Portraits in repoussé work: H. M. the German Empress, Auguste Victoria, 1889; — Another of 1892, quadrangular, 288×213 mill.; — Plaquette, 1898; 138×85 mill. (only 6 issued); — Portrait plaquette of William II. and Empress, issued on the occasion of their Silver wedding, 1906; 160×110 mill.; — William II., cast relief, 1890; 282×198 mill.; 25th Anniversary of Kaiser William II.'s reign, 1913.

ROHR, PETER (Swiss). Goldsmith and Mint-master and Engraver at Berne, was born before 1533; son of the goldsmith Cornelius R. and brother of the painter Hans R. Member of the Gross Rath from 1559 to 1589. Already in 1559 he prepared Patterns for coins; 1562 he supplied six punches to the Mint, and 1565 dies for Bern-gulden and Fünfer; 1568 he cut three dies for the Mint. On 2. May 1560, in conjunction with Jakob Wyss, he was appointed Mint assayer; 1565 he was named Guarden or Warden of the Mint, and on 14 June 1567, as Mint master, he was authorised to issue Vierer and Heller; in 1571 his salary for striking gold and silver amounted to 200 livres. In 1582 he struck Vierer and Fünfer of the "Tischlitag", and again in 1584. In 1579 the Council entrusted him with the engraving of a new Civic seal. Died in 1592.

ROMI, ÉLI (Ital.?). Possibly the Jewish name of the Italian medallist, Gian Christoforo Romano. Author of the medal of Fourvières, so-called, issued in 1503 in honour of the physician Benjamin, son of the scholar Eliahu Beër, and intended to celebrate the accession of Pope Julius II and with him the return of justice. The head on the medal is supposed to be that of Augustus. Around are Hebrew legends; beneath, the word .VMILITAS. and another in Greek letters.

This curious medallion is fully described and discussed by S. Féarès in Rev. num. 1910, pp. 165-227, Pl. VIII (La médaille dite de Fourvières et sa légende hébraïque). The Hebrew legend includes the sentence: "Thanks to the talent of Eli Romi" we have issued this medal "to commemorate that the whole community rejoiced" to be delivered from Pope Alexander VI, etc.

RONAI, DIONYS (Hung.). Court-Photographer at Budapest, and Originator of a process by which it is possible to produce Portrait-plaquettes by photochemical means.

RONCA, J. (Brit.). Gem-engraver; exhibited at the Royal Academy: 1866. Cameo head of a little child; — H.R.H. the late Prince Consort; cameo; — Geraint, Tennyson's "Idylls of the King"; cameo; — 1867. The Rainbow, from a medallion by T. Woolner; — Elaine; — Dr Livingstone; from a bust by F.M. Miller; — Portrait of a lady; — Ariel; from a medallion by F.M. Miller; — 1868. Ariel. "On the bat's back I do fly, etc." — Tempest; — The piping boy; from a design by T. Woolner — The Very Rev Dean Stanley; — 1869. Hon. J.B. Legge; cameo; — A. Tennyson; cameo; — Titania; after F.M. Miller; cameo; — Miss Lucy Varley; — Master Harry Ronca; — The Rev. Dr. Chomley; — Night and morning.

RONSART, PIERRE (French). Mint-master at Bourges, from 1498 or 1518: ♂ in front of the B; also from 1529 or 1534, leaf of wild rose tree.

RONSART, THOMAS (French). Mint-master at Bourges, from 1491 or 1496.

ROOVERE, GEORGES DE (Flem.). Mint-master at Antwerp, 1682-1690(?).

ROOS or ROSS, J. (Brit.). Engraver of the Royal Seal of England. He held this office from 1704 to 1720.

ROQUE, FAURE DE LA (French). Mint-master at Toulouse, 1591-92: letter R.

ROQUES, FRANÇOIS JULES ALEXANDRE (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 211). At the Salon of the Société Nationale des Beaux-Arts, 1912, he exhibited a series of medals and plaquettes, and again in 1913. The Roger Marx collection, sold in June 1914, Paris, included three works by this artist. Femme qui se peigne; casting, 192 × 160 mill.;

— Lo Miounello; casting, 95 mill.; — Femme à la toilette; casting, 90 × 43 mill.; — L'Art des jardins, 75 × 45 mill.

Further works, since the war: Après les ronces, le laurier; — Hommage à la Belgique; — La Ville de Paris tenant des couronnes; — Dans l'orage; — La barette de ma croix; — Vive la vie; — Croix de guerre.

ROS.G. (or possibly GROS) (French). This signature occurs on a medal of the Pacte fédératif of Orléans, 1790 (Trésor de numism., 18, 1. — Hennin, 127. — Collⁿ Bourgeot, 998).

ROSENBAUM, LORENZ (Vide B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 213). From Dr. J. Habich's Die deutschen Medailleure des XVI. Jahrhunderts, 1916, we cull the following: Rosenbaum was born in Schaffhausen, went in 1539 to Augsburg and returned in 1546 to his native city. He was still working in 1563, as in that year he complains to the Council of St. Gallen that he had not been paid for matrices for coin-dies by the Master of the Mint. A honestone portrait of the 17 year old Duke Albrecht of Bavaria (1544 or 1545) bears the artist's monogram R.

Struck Medals: Undated. Judith (illustrated, Vol. V, p. 214); signed on R. LARENTZ ROSENBAUM; — 1546. Charles V. (illustrated, Vol. V, p. 213); to which are related the same Portrait, with R. Pillars of Hercules; two varieties. Related to the Judith medal are: Undated. Christ wearing the crown of thorns, facing; R. AGNUS ILLE DEI . . . of which there is a Kremnitz imitation; — 1550. Charles V, with crown and sceptre; R. Christ with the crown of thorns; — Undated. Albert V. of Bavaria; R. SI. DEVS. NOBISCVM, etc.; — Emperor Ferdinand I. Closely related to the Augsburg Thaler of Charles V. is the struck medal on the Schmalkalden Victory.

From the Thalers of St. Gallen by Rosenbaum, one is able to identify also as his work the Königstein Thalers of the Counts of Stolberg, issued in Augsburg, and also a Thaler issue of Schaffhausen. All three works show an Eagle type which is closely connected with that of the reverse of the Charles V. 1546 medal.

The supposed Self Portrait of this artist (Merzbacher, Pl. I, 4) has nothing in common with Rosenbaum, and the inscription L.R. is uncertain.

Dr Habich favours the suggestion that Rosenbaum is the author of the medals thus signed:

1545 R
1553-1563 LR
Undated: LR

Consequently we should add to this artist's work: Two models in honestone (in the Germanisches Museum) and two other medals, given by Erman (p. 74); — Model in honestone of Wolfgang Maier (Lanna Collection); — Two small stone models of Augustus of Saxony; — Undated (1549). Joachim, Count of Ortenburg (who married Ursula Fugger in 1545); — 1553. Jakob Philipp Adler; R. J.P. Adler crowned by his wife while asleep; large model in honestone; — 1553. Archduke Charles of Styria; R. Fortune; — Undated. The same; smaller; — Undated (after 1553). Katharina, Countess of Montfort (née Fugger), and possibly also, undated (1554), Christopher, Count Stolberg. Further: Undated (1555). Wolfgang Maier, model in honestone, with LR (illustrated); — 1556. Erasmus Rotenburger; — Undated (after 1555), Susanna Trautson, née Fugger; — 1557. Wolfgang von der Pfalz-Veldenz; two varieties; the small one, illustrated; — 1557. Augustus of Saxony; signed; — Undated (1557?). Marx III. Fugger; — Undated (1557?). Sibylla Fugger (née Countess von Eberstein); — 1558. Unknown, s.g. ÆTATIS. SV.Æ. VIII.; — 1558. Anastasia Türck, née von Kammerberg; — 1559. Diet at Augsburg: Friedrich the Pious, of the Palatinate; — Archduke Charles of Styria; — Count Palatine Louis VI.; — Alfonso Caretti-Finale; — (1559). Charles II of Baden and Christopher of Württemberg; — 1560. Archduke Charles of Styria; — 1560. Johann II. Fugger; — Undated (1562). Maximilian II., as King of Bohemia, and Mary; signed R; busts after Leone Leoni; — Undated (after 1564). Maximilian, as King of the Romans; signed R; — Undated (before 1566). Veronika Fugger; — 1566. Augustus of Saxony; honestone; signed; two varieties; — 1567. The same: armoured bust; R. Peace before altar in landscape; — Undated (1569?). Richard of the Palatinate; — Undated. Philibert, Margrave of Baden; — Undated. Kaspar Seler; honestone; — Undated. Philip Römer. — As uncertain: Undated. Gerhart Wickman. — Similar, a group of chiefly oval medals (badges): 1559. Charles, Margrave of Baden; — 1559. Christopher, Duke of Württemberg; — 1563. Wolfgang, of the Palatinate-Zweibrücken (3 var.); — Undated. Friedrich III of the Palatinate (2 var.).

With the signature LR is a medal (illustrated) depicting a Mother with her little son, skull and sand-glass, which from the analogy with the Judith of Lorenz Rosenbaum may safely be ascribed to this artist. Similar also are the two female figures in the R series, i.e. the wife of Jakob Philipp Adler on the honestone model in London, and the allegorical figure on the Susanna-Trautson-Fugger medal.

It is not impossible that Lorenz Rosenbaum also produced dies for the Kremnitz Mint, and that the beautiful Kremnitz medal with the Adoration on one side and the Fall on the other, 1565, ascribed to Lukas Richter (LR) should be given to Rosenbaum. Reminding one of this artist's style are the large Kremnitz Medallion Coins, with King Ferdinand on caparisoned horse. The Mint-master's marks, sprig of flowers, may yet be discovered as Rosenbaum's.

Dr Habich states that Rosenbaum's personal style first appears in the fifties under the influence of Deschler.

ROSELIEB, L. FRITZ VON (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 213). At the Royal Academy 1912 he exhibited a fine Relief in bronze, entitled "Claude".

ROSENFELDER, L. (Germ.). Signature, as Designer, on a medal commemorating the Sixth Centenary of Königsberg, 1855; the work is that of W. Kullrich.

ROSS, P. (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 215). This is not a signature on the medal in question, but the name of the person represented, which is not Byron, but Lieutenant-Colonel (afterwards Major-General) Sir Patrick Ross.

Obv. Plan of the lagoon of Santa Maura with the canal formed by the English. In the centre is a bare profile head of Sir Patrick Ross to r., with his name P. Ross on the truncation.

R. Inscription in Greek within wreath: "To Commandant P. Ross, in recognition of his just administration and many services, and of the recent excavation of the Isthmus a token of good will presented by the Leucadians, A.D. 1819."

(Num. Chronicle, 1894, p. 87.)

ROSSI, GERONIMO or GIROLAMO (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 219). Dalton called this artist ROSI. He was a native of Leghorn, but worked chiefly at Rome. His date is given about 1730.

ROSSI, GIOVANNI ANTONIO DEI (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 216). By him is also an intaglio on carnelian of a throned Saturn with a scythe.

ROSSLER, HECTOR (Germ.). Mint-master in Darmstadt, 1817.

ROSSY, JEAN BAPTISTE (French). Mint-engraver at Bayonne, 1770-1792.

ROTENBECK, GEORGE DANIEL (Germ.) Mint-master in Nuremberg, 1668-1705.

ROTY, LOUIS OSCAR (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 228). Died on 23. March 1911.

He exhibited the following works at the New York International Medallion Exhibition, in March, 1910: — M^{me} Roty; — Enseignement des jeunes filles; — Léon Say; — Exposition de Rouen; — Avancement des sciences; — Gustave Adolphe Hirn (bronze); — Mathieu Edouard et Rose Pauline Aynard; — Michel Eugène Chevreul; — Sir John Pope Hennessy; — Assurance de Rouen; — M^{lle} Taine; — Exposition de Moscou; — Dr Perrier; — Prison de Fresnes; — M^{me} Boucicaut; — Emile Gaston Boutmy; — In labore quies; — Charles Christoffe; — M. et M^{me} Boulanger; — Adolphe Brongnair; — Gustave Louis Dubar; — Maurice Roty; — Maison d'Education d'Auberive; — Marie Laurent; — Dr Alfred Riche, Paris; — Henry Lozé; — Henry Bouley; — L.A. Collin; — Dr Gosselin; — Club Alpin; — Gustave Adolphe Hirn (bronze silvered); — Alfred Engel; — Union Franco-Américaine; — Bataille de Nuits; — Jules Eugène Lenepveu; — Morel; — La foi; — Congrès Pénitentiaire; — Colonel Laussadet; — Chemin de fer Est-Algérien; — Dr Brouardel; — Commission d'Hygiène; — Union centrale; — Agents de change de Paris; — Union centrale; — Victor Hugo; — République casquée; — Instruction primaire; — Sapeurs-pompiers; — Athènes; — Paris-Lyon-Méditerranée; — Jeanne; — Chambre de Commerce de Lyon; — Chambre de Commerce de Saint-Nazaire; — M^{me} Jonnart; — Exposition de Chicago; — Jeanne d'Arc; — Chambre de Commerce de Paris; — Mariani; — Exposition 1900; — Président Carnot; — Julien Girard; — Charles Piet-Lataudrie; — Emile Gaston Boutmy; — Jockey Club de Buenos-Ayres; — Hibou et République; — Bateaux parisiens; — Actes de dévouement; — Maternité; — Dr Farabeuf; — Eudoxe Marcille; — Louis François Marie Amédée de Boissieu; — Dr J.R. Lépine; — Œuvre des Libérées de Saint-Lazare; — Jules Cambon; — Stéphane Dervillé; — Médaille de Mariage; — La foi; — Georges Duplessis; — Maurice Roty; — La Vierge; — Sainte Geneviève; — L'Amour console l'humanité.

Obituary notice from "le Temps":

Nous avons le vif regret d'apprendre la mort de M. L.-O. Roty, le maître graveur, décédé le 23 mars 1911 en son domicile, 20, rue du Luxembourg.

Né à Paris, le 12 juin 1846. Elève d'Augustin Dumont et de Ponscarne à l'Ecole des beaux-arts, il obtint, en 1875, le Grand Prix de Rome, avec un sujet de médaille représentant: Un Berber cherchant à lire l'inscription gravée sur un des rochers du passage des Thermopyles. Aux Salons de 1873 et de 1874, il avait exposé: Amour piqué, et une Médaille commémorative du dévouement des Frères de la Doctrine chrétienne pendant la guerre de 1870-1871. Les médailles et plaquettes qu'il a données depuis son retour de Rome comptent parmi les chefs-d'œuvre de cet art. On peut citer l'Immortalité, revers de la médaille de Victor Hugo (1885), la médaille commémorative du Centenaire de M. Chevreul, la médaille du 70^e Anniversaire de M. Pasteur, la plaquette des Obsèques de Carnot, la plaquette pour M. Boutmy, la Semeuse des pièces de 50 centimes, etc., etc.

M. Roty avait obtenu une Médaille de 3^e classe en 1873, une de 2^e classe en 1882, une Médaille de 1^{re} classe en 1885 et le Grand Prix à l'Exposition universelle de 1889. Il avait été élu membre de l'Académie des beaux-arts en remplacement de M. Bertinot, le 30 juin 1888. Il était commandeur de la Légion d'Honneur.

Au moment où je vais prendre le train pour une conférence que j'ai promise en province, on m'annonce la mort — ou plutôt la fin de la longue agonie — de notre cher Roty. Voici des années que nous le voyions décliner... Je me rappelle, comme si c'était d'hier, le jour où, dans son atelier, s'interrompant tout à coup de rouler une cigarette, il me dit, avec une de ces intonations inimitables de gavroche parisien : « C'est épatant ! mes doigts ne marchent plus ! » Depuis, le mal, que personne alors n'avait pu deviner, avait accompli son œuvre sournoise de lente destruction, et la lamentable dépouille humaine qui achève aujourd'hui de s'éteindre n'avait plus rien du vrai Roty qu'une lointaine ressemblance, et l'on serait tenté de lui appliquer les vers de Victor Hugo à son frère :

Maintenant que la mort a rallumé ta flamme,
Maintenant que la mort a réveillé ton âme,
Tu dois te souvenir ?

Sa flamme ! Pour qui a connu le Roty des belles années, quand, — après le long apprentissage, et la période si dure, et si gaiement, si vaillamment traversée, du travail obscur pour le pain quotidien, — il sentit venir le succès, la confiance en soi-même, le sentiment que, maître de son outil, il avait quelque chose à dire et qu'il allait pouvoir le dire, c'est bien le mot qui convient. Son esprit, prime-sautier, d'une spontanéité pleine d'imprévu, était pétillant de verve, d'entrain, de trouvailles et de saillies. Il n'avait pas eu les moyens ni le loisir de se donner une forte culture classique ; c'était un fils d'artisan et un élève d'école primaire — mais il avait en lui mieux et plus que ce qu'on apprend dans les livres : une sensibilité d'une exquise finesse, un ardent amour de la vie, et toutes les curiosités, toutes les divinations.

Il avait passé par l'école de Lecoq de Boisbaudran et, si j'ai si souvent ici parlé de ce maître, de sa pédagogie, de sa méthode d'éducation, de sa mémoire pittoresque, c'est que j'avais recueilli de la bouche de Roty, comme de celle de Fantin-Latour et de Cazin — les trois artistes de ce temps qui, avec Puvis de Chavannes, m'ont appris le plus de choses, — les témoignages répétés de sa gratitude et de son admiration. « N'oubliez pas mon vieux Lecoq de Boisbaudran », m'écrivait-il quelque temps avant la mort de son maître, dans un de ces billets qu'il prodiguait et dont j'ai devant moi les feuillets déjà jaunies. Je l'entends encore, un jour qu'il jetait à la boîte de l'Institut, en sortant de son atelier, un paquet de lettres, me dire d'un ton irrésistiblement comique : « Et dire qu'une partie de ma fortune aura disparu dans ce trou !... »

Dans l'histoire de la médaille française, il gardera, à côté de Chaplain, son aîné et qui aida ses débuts, une place au premier rang. Ce qu'il fut comme portraitiste : le portrait de sa chère femme, l'admirable compagne de sa vie ; ceux de ses parents, de son beau-père — le forgeron Boulanger —, de Pasteur, vingt autres, l'ont assez montré. Il mêlait à l'interprétation loyale de la ressemblance physionomique et toute sa spiritualité fine, légère, divinatrice, et, aux revers, avec une verve poétique que l'amour de la lecture renouvelait sans cesse, il imaginait ces évocations symboliques et pittoresques dont on put craindre quelquefois que les hardiesses ne sortissent des limites étroites imposées par des lois essentielles au style et à l'art du médailleur. Felix culpa, si nous lui devons quelques-unes des œuvres les plus charmantes où le génie français puisse se reconnaître. A le voir travailler, à discuter avec lui tel ou tel détail d'un de ses revers, à l'écouter, j'ai souvent pensé à ce que dut être, à l'aurore du quattrocento florentin un Lorenzo Ghiberti. Il en avait la tendresse, la verve, la grâce et l'agilité. Et il avait, en plus, une délicieuse, une inépuisable bonté. Ce qu'il fut pour ses amis aux jours heureux où il avait à se réjouir avec eux et pour eux, et encore plus aux heures sombres où sa sympathie pouvait leur être un réconfort, beaucoup pourraient le dire... Le voilà entré dans le repos qu'il a si bien gagné, affranchi par la mort de toutes les misères qui nous l'avaient indignement ravi. Répétons avec confiance le vers de Lamartine :

Je te salue, ô mort libérateur suprême !

ANDRÉ MICHEL.

The Roger Marx Collection sold in Paris (June 1914) comprised 88 works of the Master, including Pied-forts of the 2 Francs, 1 Franc, and 50 Centimes, which realized F130, F125 and F150 respectively.

THE NEW "PESO" OF THE CHILIAN REPUBLIC.

After Roty's models.

By the kindness of our correspondent, Mr. C. Newman, of Valparaiso, we are enabled to give an illustration here of the new "Peso" of the Chilean Republic, created in virtue of a law which was passed in the early part of the year 1915.

The coin differs in size, weight and standard from all the previous issues, but retains the well-known type modelled by Roty.

ROTY, MAURICE (French). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, born in Paris. He exhibited at the Paris Salon 1914 (Soc. des Art. fr.) two medals, Dieu and Patrie, and a Portrait of Paul Déroulède.

ROUBILIAC. A full-length figure of Sir Isaac Newton from a statue by this artist in the chapel of Trinity College, Cambridge, is impressed on the reverse of the Newton medal of the Royal Society of London.

ROUGET, CLAUDE (French). Mint-master at Paris, 1529 : rose in the first C and below the cross or shield. In 1552 at the Paris Mill : rose below.

BRITISH IMPERIAL COPPER AND BRONZE COINAGE, 1838-1920.

FOURTH SUPPLEMENTARY ARTICLE.

Since the third supplementary article was printed in the "Numismatic Circular", for January-February, 1924, the following descriptions of unrecorded varieties of British Imperial copper and bronze coins have been kindly sent to me by several numismatic friends: —

BRITISH IMPERIAL COPPER COINAGE.

VICTORIA I. 1837-1901.

10A. — PENNY, 1847.

Similar to 1, but dated 1847, and no colon after BRITANNIAR.

22C. — PENNY, 1854.

Similar to 1, but dated 1854, the trident plain, and less space between G of REG and the colon after it, and F of DEF and the colon after it.

36C. — PENNY, 1858.

Similar to 1, but dated 1858, with the last numeral from the left over 7, and more space between the points of the colon after REG.

36D. — PENNY, 1858.

Similar to 1, but dated 1858, in smaller numerals, and more space between the points of the colon after REG.

36E. — PENNY, 1858.

Similar to 1, but dated 1858, in larger numerals, W.W. omitted, and more space between G of REG and the colon after it.

14C. — HALFPENNY, 1852.

Similar to 1, but dated 1852, and two indentations (Die 2), on the rim of the Union Shield, below the lowest part of the fourth quarter.

20C. — HALFPENNY, 1857.

Similar to 1, but dated 1857, and two indentations (Die 2), on the rim of the Union Shield, below the lowest part of the fourth quarter.

6E. — FARTHING, 1840.

Similar to 1, but dated 1840, B of BRITANNIAR without upper serif, and the colon after REG large and thick.

REVIEWS.

MONEY SCALES and WEIGHTS. By T. Sheppard M. Sc., and J. F. Musham F.E.S. Cloth, 8vo., 221 pages, 10s. 6d. net; postage 6d. extra.

The above newly published work is an exhaustive treatise upon a long neglected but very interesting subject. The first part is a reprint from the Numismatic Circular, where sections of Mr. Sheppard's paper on "Money Scales" have appeared in various issues for some time, attracting much attention and comment. These are now collected in the one volume, profusely illustrated by between 80 and 90 photo process blocks, and handy for reference.

Mr. Musham's article on "Coin Weights" which completes the volume, is quite new and a valuable addition. Having been a collector of weights for many years, in the course of which he has gleaned some interesting and important facts on the subject, he has now, for the first time, put them into print for the benefit of collectors and the public at large.

We commend this book to all students of history as bringing them into intimate acquaintance with social and commercial conditions during periods which are very prominent in the development of the institutions of the Empire.

OBITUARY.

SIR WILLIAM ELLISON-MACARTNEY.

The Right Honourable Sir William Grey Ellison-Macartney, K.C.M.G., died after a very short illness on Thursday, December 4th, 1924, at his residence 48, Elm Park Road, Chelsea, London, S.W. 3. He was the eldest son of the late Mr. John William Ellison-Macartney, of Clogher Park, County Tyrone, Ireland, and was born in Dublin on June 7th, 1852. He was educated at Eton and Exeter College, Oxford, and was called to the Bar by the Inner Temple, London, in 1878, and practised for a short time on the South-Eastern circuit. At the General Election of 1885 he was returned to the Imperial Parliament as Member for South Antrim and represented that constituency for more than seventeen years. In 1895 he was appointed Parliamentary Secretary to the Admiralty and held the post for five years. In 1900 he was created a Privy Councillor and in the same year he resigned his office at the Admiralty.

In January, 1903, he became Deputy Master and Comptroller of the Royal Mint, London, and ex-officio Engraver of His Majesty's Seals. The most interesting series of Reports presented annually to Parliament show that the work of the Royal Mint had rapidly increased during his term of office. He was for some years a Fellow of the Royal Numismatic Society.

In December, 1912, the Right Honourable Lewis Vernon Harcourt, Secretary of State for the Colonies and representative of the Rossendale Division of Lancashire in the Imperial Parliament appointed Mr. Ellison-Macartney Governor of Tasmania, and he received the honour of knighthood (K.C.M.G.). Sir William Ellison-Macartney continued as Governor till April, 1917, when he was transferred to Western Australia where he remained until 1920 when his term of office expired. On his return to England he devoted himself to educational and other activities and always showed the deepest interest in institutions which aim at improving the social or intellectual condition of the people. His remains were interred in Putney Vale Cemetery, Surrey, on Tuesday, December 9th, 1924, the first part of the funeral service being held in Holy Trinity Church, Sloane Street, London, S.W.

The writer had the pleasure of knowing Sir William many years before he became Deputy Master of the Royal Mint and much regrets the passing of a kind and valued friend who rendered such distinguished service to the Empire.

HENRY GARSIDE.

MR. WILLIAM CARR.

Mr. William Carr died yesterday at Ditchingham Hall, his Norfolk house, at the age of 62. His death is probably the consequence of his services as a volunteer during the war. He will be much missed in Norfolk, where most of his life was spent, and for which he had been "pricked" as the next High Sheriff. He was also the owner of estates in Yorkshire and Northumberland.

The only son of Mr. William Carr, of Gomersal House, Yorkshire, who was a qualified medical man as well as squire, he was born on June 14, 1862, and was sent to Marlborough. At Oxford, where he went up to University College as a commoner in 1882, he continued the academic tradition of his family, many members of which from the 17th century have obtained fellowships and other distinctions. In the schools he took a third in classical moderations and a second in modern history, but he also achieved the remarkable feat of winning all the three historical essay prizes — the Stanhope in 1884 for an essay on "Montenegro"; the Lothian in 1888 for one on "The Place of Fénelon in French History"; and the Arnold in 1890 for one on "What Features in the Social Life of France before 1789 contributed to bring about the Revolution?"

In 1886 he married Margaret, eldest daughter of the Rev. Dr. James Franck Bright, Master of University College, and read for the Bar. He was called by the Middle Temple in 1889, and having read with Mr. (afterwards) Lord Robson he joined the North-Eastern Circuit. He was a strong Conservative, and contested the Morley Division of Yorkshire in 1892 and 1895. To the "Dictionary of National Biography" he was a large contributor, and later in life became a connoisseur especially of silver, furniture, pictures, and Greek coins. During the war he was indefatigable in supporting the Volunteer force in the rank of Major. He was a Magistrate of many years standing, for Norfolk, Suffolk, and the West Riding, chairman of Norfolk County Council, and a Deputy Lieutenant for Norfolk. But his real interest was primarily in the land. Besides managing his own estates, he was a practical farmer of great experience and exact knowledge, both of Yorkshire and of Norfolk. He was also a keen sportsman and a capital shot. Owing to ill-health he had been recently advised to give up his heavy county work, but the end came unexpectedly. He is survived by his widow and five children, his only son being Mr. W. G. Carr, of the 12th Lancers. Three daughters are married, respectively, to Air Vice-Marshal Sir Geoffrey Salmond, Colonel Newman, and Major Athill.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETIES, MUSEUMS, &c.

ROYAL NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

Nov. 21: Sir Charles Oman, K.B.E., M.P., LL.D., F.S.A., F.B.A., &c. &c., President in the Chair.

Captain F. G. C. Rowe was elected a Fellow of the Society.

Mr. William Gilbert exhibited a tetradrachm of Antioch of Antony and Cleopatra from the Bement Collection (lot 436) in extremely fine condition with both legends complete.

Miss Helen Farquhar exhibited a silver shell medallion of Charles II probably by John Roettiers, from the Bernay-Ficklin collection; only one other specimen is known.

Mr. L. A. Lawrence showed a pair-cased watch the inner case with arms of Charles I and the outer with his bust, probably Dutch work somewhat later than the reign of Charles I. Mr. Lawrence also showed a reckoning counter of the time of Edward II struck at the Mint, with reverse type, two sparrows, an almost exact anticipation of the reverse type of the New South African farthings.

Mr. Valentine showed a bronze ticket with the name William Howard of Chatham with a sun-face in the centre.

Mr. Percy H. Webb read a paper on "The Coinage of the Gallic Empire". In view of the impossibility of reconciling the accounts given by the Roman historians of events in Gaul between the revolt of Postumus in 258 and the abdication of Tetricus in 273, he endeavoured to construct the history of that period from the evidence deducible from the coinage. He referred to the available records of hoards deposited during and after those years, from which it appeared that coins of Postumus were most numerous and those of the Tetrici also very numerous but diluted by the issues of irregular or barbarous mints. Those of Victorinus were numerous and those of Marius scarce, but in considerably greater numbers than those of Laelianus. Mr. Webb then discussed the style and fabric of the coins and submitted the following conclusions; 1) that the rebellion of Laelian took place in the last year of the reign of Postumus (A.D. 267), and that his coins were issued from Moguntiacum only; 2) that the principal mint of Postumus was first at Lugdunum, and was removed to Cologne in or about A.D. 264, and that he did not associate either Victorinus or Postumus the younger with himself in the Empire; 3) that the reign of Marius was next in order, and lasted for at least some weeks; and that his mints were at Cologne, and some other place as yet unidentified, which used a grotesque portrait, and commenced to strike for Victorinus, but was quickly closed by him; 4) that the reign of Victorinus commenced in A.D. 268 and, as he claimed three consulates, probably terminated in the early part of 270, and was therefore somewhat longer in proportion to that of Tetricus than is generally supposed, and his mints, in addition to that above mentioned, were at Cologne and Lugdunum and the regular coinage of the Tetrici was probably from the mint of Lugdunum only, as was the Gallic coinage of Aurelian.

KENT NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

The November meeting was held at the Maidstone Museum on Friday 21 Nov., when Mr. J. W. Bridge, M.S.R., occupied the chair. The Journals of the Rochester Naturalists and the Men of Kent and Kentish Men were presented, and the affiliation of the Numismatic Society with the latter was confirmed. Mr. J. Shirley-Fox, R.B.A., wrote, expressing his willingness to accept the office of President of the Society in the New Year. The nomination of officers and auditors took place and a programme of events for 1925 was compiled. An interesting paper was then given by Dr. A. Spencer Edwards, entitled "Metals used in Coinage", in which he went through the whole variety of metals and their alloys that have ever been known in the world's coinage, with their specific gravities and proportions in alloy, including platinum, gold, electrum, silver, German silver, white metal, tin, pewter, latten, zinc, nickel, bronze, brass, copper and gun metal. He mentioned the find at Higham, as recorded by the Rochester Naturalists a few years ago, of a number of Staters of electrum which were in a hollow flint, that some of the most wonderful gold coins were minted 385 B.C. by Alexander the Great, and that while our pence of to day were of bronze, a similar alloy was in use by early man for weapons and tools 2000 B.C. The paper was illustrated by a fine display of all the possible varieties of coins, representing many of the more curious metals and alloys, and led the numismatic mind in quite a new direction of research and interest from many points of view. Dr. Spencer Edwards also presented a wonderful medal in glazed case of Napoleon and the Battle of Marengo. A proposition of thanks and appreciation from Mr. W.H. Day, and seconded by Mr. H. Risch, concluded the proceedings.

The December meeting was held at the Maidstone Museum on Friday, 12 Dec., when Mr. J.W. Bridge, M.S.R., occupied the chair. The nomination of Council and Honorary Secretary took place; the programme for 1925 was completed, and a Committee was called to re-arrange the exhibit in the Museum cabinet for the New Year. Mr. Bridge read a paper upon "Maundy Money", explaining the customs observed on Maundy Thursday from its earliest records and quoting Bishop Sparrow, "This day Christ washed His disciples' feet and gave them a Commandment to do likewise"—hence it is called dies mandati, mandate, or Maundy Thursday. The practice, accompanied by gifts, was observed by the Church and later by the King. Edward II. is the first on record who in the 19th year of his reign washed the feet of 50 poor men and gave them presents of food, cloth, etc. Henry VII. added money to the gifts, and James II. was the last to perform the ceremony of washing. Small coins of the realm were used for the gifts until Charles II. minted Maundy Sets of 4d., 3d., 2d. and 1d., and the practice still continues. For many years the ceremony was performed at the Chapel Royal, Whitehall, but it is now held in Westminster Abbey. All Maundy Money is in reality legal tender, but it is usually regarded as a curiosity or of sentimental value. Mr. Bridge's paper was well illustrated by a large collection of Maundy money from Charles II. downwards and kindly lent by Mr. W.H. Day. A vote of thanks was accorded these gentlemen. Mr. Bridge also exhibited a Philip and Mary shilling; Mr. Skinner a Charles II. shilling with the I.P. countermark; Mr. E.T. Clark a curious native Hindoo silver coin. A vote of thanks, with the season's greetings, was passed to the Chairman and officers.

YORKSHIRE NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

An ordinary Meeting of the above Society was held on Oct. 25th 1924, in the Museum, Albion Street, Hull, the President, Mr. J. Digby Firth, F.E.S., occupying the chair.

Prior to the meeting Mr. T. Sheppard M.Sc., conducted the members round the new Museum at the Old Corn Exchange in High Street, Hull, which is shortly to be opened as a Museum illustrating Commerce and Transport. This magnificent top lighted room, measuring 160 ft by 44 ft., has been recently entirely renovated and fitted up with plate glass cases round the walls by the various representatives of trade and commerce in the City, entirely free of cost to the Corporation, and in these, exhibits illustrating the various industries and exports and imports at Kingston-upon-Hull, as well as the various methods of road transport from the old Stage Coach and Sedan chair, to models of aeroplanes, will be shown.

Illustrating this subject a case has been set apart showing coins, tokens, badges, etc., from the earliest times, connected with trade, commerce, and land transport. Marine and river transport are already well provided for at the Museum of Shipping and Fisheries in Hull.

Specimens were shown of the silver pennies struck in Hull in the year 1300 by Edward I, a year after he purchased the town of Wyke and called it Kingston-upon-Hull. Then the 17th, 18th, and 19th century tokens, issued by the various Hull Tradesmen, in brass, bronze, and silver, were shown, and following these were the medals and tickets in silver, bronze, white metal, and ivory, representing Directors' passes on the various railways, medals commemorating early railway achievements, with representations of primitive engines etc., a magnificent series illustrating the various bridges and tunnels in the country, badges for permission to use the King's private roads, medals relating to balloons and other aircraft. In addition there was an almost complete collection of modern and old Yorkshire Tramway and 'Bus tickets, already described in a paper read before the Society.

Mr. Sheppard also exhibited the hoard of silver pennies found at Scotton, near Knaresborough, earlier in the year. This consisted of 319 pieces which had been found together in a pot, and included coins of Edward I, Edward II, Alexander III of Scotland, which had been struck at the following mints:—London, Bristol, Canterbury, Durham, Lincoln, York, Bury St. Edmunds, and Newcastle, and some continental pieces.

Mr. Sheppard was thanked for his kindness on the proposal of Mr. Pickersgill, seconded by the Honorary Secretary.

Mr. A.L. Darneley, in an interesting "Chat on Greek Coins" deplored the fact that the study of these beautiful relics of the past was not more general among numismatists. In dealing with so vast a subject he could give but an outline of the principal features of the Greek coinage, but he passed in rapid survey the different periods of Greek art, as applied to the coinage, illustrating his remarks by a selection of fine pieces from his collection.

A cordial vote of thanks was passed on the motion of Mr. T. Sheppard seconded by Mr. J.F. Musham.

The following exhibits were also made and described:—By the President:—A collection of foreign military and civil decorations.

By Mr. T. Pickersgill:—Queen Anne shillings of 1704, plain in angles on reverse, and 1710, plumes in angles on reverse, with bust of 1711, these being the rarest types of the Queen Anne shillings. Varieties of shillings of 1920 and 1924 for British East Africa. Three different types of Edward I pennies, from the Murdoch collection, and Roman first brass of Julia Mamaea.

By Mr. J.F. Musham:—Silver coin weight by J. Kirk, London, for 36/- or $\frac{1}{2}$ Portuguese gold piece.

By Mr. A. Rider A.M.I.E.E.:—Barnsley medals of Queen Victoria's jubilee, Shipley medal of Edward VII's coronation. Barnsley Sunday School medal with bust of Robert Raikes, medal on the opening of the Irish Northern Parliament, etc.

By Mr. H. Mackay:—Large Bronze Medal commemorating the fire at York Minster, together with broadsheets and a booklet on the life of Jonathan Martin, published at Beverley in 1829. By Mr. H. Armstrong: A Ripon Political medal.

Occasion was taken to compliment Messrs. T. Sheppard and J.F. Musham on the publication of their book on "Money Scales and Weights", copies of which were passed round for inspection.

After the meeting the members were entertained to tea by Mr. T. Sheppard, who was thanked for his hospitality on the proposal of the President, seconded by Mr. T. Pickersgill.

AUSTRALIAN NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

This meeting was held in the Society's room, B.M.A. Buildings, 30 Elizabeth Street, Sydney, on the 15th of the month, the President, Dr. G.H. Abbott, being in the Chair.

The chief Numismatic Proceeding was an address by the President, Dr. G.H. Abbott, on "Some coins of Cos with especial reference to the cult of Asklepios and to countermarks".

The majority of the coins mentioned relate to the cult of Asklepios (the Æsculapius of the Romans) of which the Asclepeion in this island (recently excavated) was one of the chief centres and from the number of votive models found quite a museum of anatomy and pathology. Cos was further distinguished as being the birthplace of the great physician Hippocrates, the father of modern medicine. Cos, having been partly colonised from Epidaurus, the chief centre of the cult of Asklepios, remained closely linked with that state into quite late times. Anciently Cos was celebrated for its Purple Dye, its Ointment, but more than all for its Mines.

In addition to coins relating to the cult of Asklepios various coins of Cos with countermarks were described and shown.

These few remarks will explain the value and interest of the following rare and interesting coins exhibited by the Doctor.

Coins of Cos exhibited by Dr. G.H. Abbott (some showing countermarks, and some illustrating the cult of Asklepios, etc.).

6236. 1. Æ. B.C. 300-190? B.M.C. p. 202, no. 93, but with ΚΩΙΩΝ instead of ΚΩΙΟΝ.

Obv. Head of young Herakles l., in lion's skin. Countermark. (? head of Tyche to l., ? as in type on obv. of no. 16, below.)
Rev. ΚΩΙΩΝ. Crab. Magistrate's name, ΙΠΠΑΡΧ; club below.
6513. 2. Æ. As above and with countermark, probably the same.
6238. 3. Æ. As above and with apparently same countermark but with? ΚΩΙΩΝ and apparently same magistrate's name as in B.M.C. no. 97 on the reverse.

6237. 4. Æ. c. B.C. 190-166?. Probably B.M.C. no. 109.
Obv. Head of young Herakles, three-quarter face towards r., wearing lion's skin.

Rev. ΚΩΙΩΝ. Bow in case and club; below, magistrate's name almost obliterated by a countermark (a crab).

5689. 5. Æ. c. B.C. 166-88. (From the Weber collection cf. B.M.C. 123, variety.)

Obv. Head of Asklepios r., laur.; below a letter.

Mr. P. Larson exhibited :

COLONIAL COINS of the late GERMAN EMPIRE (NEW GUINEA).

5 marks, 2 marks, 1 mark, $\frac{1}{2}$ mark, 10 Pfennig, 1 Pfennig.

Miss E. Tietkins exhibited :

1. MEDAL, Silver and enamel, 3 ins. \times 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ ins. (Flat, one piece). Obv. Decorated by band of turquoise blue enamel and silver flowers within which, in royal blue, the letters : THE LADIES MEDAL, surmounted by laurel wreath in green enamel and below in deep orange enamel a bow and arrows. Rev. Band of royal blue enamel with silver flowers inscribed :

"Won by John Hooke Greene Loyal archer. Fortune who was before blind has now recovered her sight in rewarding your merit, Cicero. 25th Sept. 1790."

2. MEDAL, Silver? Sheffield plate? 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ in. \times 2 in. $\frac{1}{4}$ in. thick (hollow; in two sheets, riveted at edge). Obv. Full raised figure of an archer holding bow and arrow in right hand. Motto above "TENDENS AD ARDUA". Rev. Inscribed. This Medal was given as the prize for the Lieut. of Numbers at the 5th gen. meeting of the Archers of Great Britain held on Blackheath the 29th day of May 1793 and won by John Hooke Greene, Tox. Soc.

3. MEDAL, Gold? gilt? 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ in. \times 1 $\frac{3}{4}$ in. (roughly) $\frac{1}{8}$ in. thick. Hollow: in two parts, riveted at edge. Obv. Full raised figure of an archer with bow and arrow in right hand. Motto above "NULLI SECUNDUS". Rev. Inscribed. This Medal was given as the prize for the Captain of Numbers at the sixth general meeting of the Archers of Great Britain held on Blackheath, the 28 day of May 1794 and won by John Hooke Greene Tox. Soc.

The ordinary meeting of the Society was held at the B.M.A. Library, 50 Elizabeth Street, Sydney, on Thursday, July 17, 1924, at 8 p.m., Dr. G.H. Abbott (President), in the Chair.

Apologies were received from Mr. H. Priestley, Mr. Paynter, Mr. Larsen, and Mr. O.E. Friend.

Professor Holme, of Sydney University, was elected a member of the Society.

Dr. G.H. Abbott gave an interesting and instructive address on "Errors and Peculiarities in the Striking of Coins", and illustrated his remarks by an extensive selection of specimens from his collection. The exhibits included :

A. Specimens with obverse type in relief on one side and similar type incuse on other side.

(1) Twenty-six Roman Republican denarii.

(2) Three Roman Republican quinarii.

(3) One Roman Imperial denarius (Julia Domna).

(4) Two Roman Imperial AE2 (Titus and Domitian), probably rare.

(5) Seven English copper half-pennies.

(6) Two English copper farthings.

(8) A continental copper coin (?).

When each of the coins in Group A was being struck, the preceding coin of the series had not been removed but was still gripped in the reverse die.

B. Specimens with reverse type in relief on one side and similar type incuse on other side.

(1) Eleven English copper half-pennies.

(3) One English bronze penny (1860).

(4) One Bank of Montreal token.

When each of the coins in Group B was being struck, the preceding coin of the series was still gripped in the obverse die.

C. Which must be very rare. A George III Irish half-penny in which the obverse has part of the reverse design in relief struck over it and the reverse has part of the reverse design incuse struck over it. This coin after being struck was therefore lying between the reverse die and another coin still in the obverse die when it was again struck and was turned over between the two striking.

D. A bronze coin of the French Republic with ordinary obverse type incuse on both sides.

E. An Italian 5 centimes bronze piece 1861 with obverse type incuse on one side and reverse type also incuse on other side.

F. Some interesting "double-struck" coins :

(1) Thirteen copper English half-pennies.

(2) One English bronze half-penny.

(5) Two French Republican copper coins.

G. Coins with part of design only on flan.

(1) An Australian half sovereign second type.

(3) Five English copper farthings.

(4) One 1 cent, American.

(5) One French Republican copper coin.

H. Coins with obverse type similar to reverse type.

(1) A rare coin of Hadrian (AE2) with bust of emperor and "HADRIANVS AVGVSTVS" on obverse and reverse (Cohen, Vol. II, p. 174, no. 808, var.).

(2) A coin of Trajan (AE2) with bust of emperor and inscription on obverse and reverse.

(3) A Roman Imperial coin (AE3) with "IOVIS CONSERVATORI" and figure of Jupiter standing, etc. on obverse and reverse.

An example of the peculiar coins of Sardes in Lydia restruck under C. Asinius Pollio, Proconsul in A.D. 37-38 in which circular rings were attached to the original dies so as to obliterate the previous inscription (see B.M.C., Lydia, p. 252).

J. Two Roman Republican and one Roman Imperial coin to demonstrate the method, sometimes used by the Ancients, of coining specimens made of copper, plated with silver.

K. A miscellaneous collection of coins, some with designs engraved by hand after striking and others tampered with in various ways.

Mr. D. Raymond exhibited some porcelain money of the Saxon Republic.

Mr. P.J. Marks exhibited a Silver plaque, with a Jewish inscription on it.

Mr. E. Wills exhibited a proof set of first South African mint issue : — 1 half crown, 1 two shilling piece, 1 shilling, 1 sixpence, 1 one penny, 1 threepence, 1 half penny, 1 farthing.

This was an excellent collection of coins fully up to Mr. Wills' general exhibition.

The Ordinary Meeting of the Society was held at the B.M.A. Building, on Thursday, 21st August, 1924, at 8 p.m., Dr. G.H. Abbott (President), in the Chair.

Apologies were received from Mr. P.J. Marks, and Mr. E.R. Moser. It was resolved that a letter of condolence be forwarded to Judge Hamilton in his recent bereavement.

Mr. C. Weaver read a paper on a "Review of An Archaic Tetradrachm of Syracuse" and described an interesting travel through the Metropolis for the purpose of searching out curios, and the finding of a fine archaic tetradrachm of Syracuse minted in the day of the great Gelon 480 years B.C. Mr. Weaver gave an excellent description of the coin.

Mr. Weaver also exhibited some drawings of coins of a very interesting nature.

Coins of Syracuse exhibited by Dr. G.H. Abbott.

In order to supplement Mr. Weaver's paper, Dr. Abbott exhibited a large and beautiful collection of coins of Syracuse, mainly in silver but with a few in gold and bronze. His exhibits included a number of archaic specimens and some fine portrait coins of Hiero II, Philistis, and Gelon II. The doctor, in giving a short description of the coins shown, drew attention to some of the most interesting ones.

Mr. Larsen exhibited : Roman Colonial Coins.

1. 1st Brass. TITUS. Rev. Head of Vespasian (Cappadocia, Asia Minor).
2. — HADRIAN. Rev. Restitutori Orbis Terrarum.
3. — SEPTIMIUS SEVERUS. Rev. Britannicus (Britain).
4. — PHILIP I. Rev. Turreted head of the City of Antioch.
5. — TRAJAN DECIUS. Rev. Soldier holding emblem of Dacia.
6. 2nd Brass. AUGUSTUS. Rev. Bull. (Calla Gurri Nasica, now Old Castille, Spain).
7. — AUGUSTUS-AGRIPPA. Rev. Crocodile. Nemausus in Gallia.
8. — GERMANICUS. Rev. Heads of Germanicus and Nero Drusus (Colony of Romula Spain).
9. — NERO. Rev. Head of Neptune. Colonial Coin.
10. — NERO. Rev. Head of Theos. Colonial Coin.
11. — VESPASIAN. Rev. S.C. in wreath, H. Colonial Coin.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETY OF VICTORIA.

The monthly meeting of the above Society was held on Tuesday Evening, October 14th 1924 at 8 p. m., at 237 Collins Street, Melbourne; the president, Mr. P. C. Clements, presiding over an exceptionally good attendance of members.

The usual business was dealt with, and correspondence then attended to. Amongst the latter was a reply from the Secretary of the Public Library and Museums of Victoria, stating in answer to the Society's enquiry, that the collection of coins and medals which is being arranged in the Museum, is not yet completed; but that arrangements could be made for the Society as a body, or individual members to inspect the finished portions if so desired. A courteous and fraternal letter from Dr. G. H. Abbott, President of the Australian Numismatic Society, was also received, and read with interest.

A brief statement by Mr. Gardner showed that the matter of the decennial report is well in hand, the manuscript being completed. A correct and revised typed copy will be very shortly available for the printers. The binding of a volume of Spink's Circulars (produced as a sample) proving to be very satisfactory, the remaining volumes in the Society's library were ordered to be bound, the president, as previously announced, generously defraying the cost. The librarian (Mr. F. H. Schafer) announced that several monthly numbers of the Circular are unfortunately missing, and it is thought that may be, they have been borrowed from the library by members, who have inadvertently omitted to return them. As it is desirable that the bound volumes should be complete, the Society would be glad if any members having any of the missing issues would return same immediately. The dates are as follows: November-December 1917, May-June 1918, November-December 1918, September-October 1919, May-June 1921.

The discussion concerning a design for a seal for the Society was definitely arranged to take place at the November (next) meeting. All members are asked either to bring or send suggestions.

Mr. Clark referred in a few words to his exhibit of paper money from various countries and a collection of English silver from Henry II to Queen Anne, and Mr. E. S. Anthony gave a few notes on a series of Roman (silver) Denarii, which he had on view.

Mr. F. Walters also remarked on the new German Currency and he showed a 500 mark piece of the German Republic, 1923 in aluminium.

After a very pleasant evening, the meeting was closed.

The monthly meeting of the above Society was held on Tuesday evening, September 9th 1924, at 8 p. m. There was a good attendance of members, Mr. P. C. Clements presiding.

The minutes having been read and confirmed, and other routine business attended to, the members discussed the advisability of having the various issues of Spink's circular bound into volumes. It was agreed to have this done, and the president (Mr. Clements), then intimated that he would defray the expense. This generous offer was greeted with applause.

It was also decided to set aside a sum from the general fund, for the purchase of Numismatic Literature for the Society's library.

Mr. Fisher then read his interesting paper on "The Sovereign's Head on our Coinage".

Mr. Anthony exhibited several specimens from which he endeavored to show that the centre of numismatic art in the early 17th century was Mid-European, the exhibits of a Thaler (1627) of Nuremberg, a Spanish Piece of eight (of 1666) and other coins of the Netherlands and of England of the same period, making his contention fairly obvious.

VARIA.

WAR COINS.

Of all coins circulated as legal tender during the Great War the TABORA golden 15 RUPEE is no doubt the most interesting and valuable.

In 1915 the KIRONDA GOLD MINING CO. owed the G. E. A. Government a considerable sum of money for mining royalties, and being unable to pay in currency, deposited as security some bars of gold, exploited from their own mine at SEKENKE (Kondoa Irangi District). This deposit was made with the stipulation that the bars would be redeemed and returned immediately after the war. In order, however, to raise their local credit and at the same time to supply cover for an issue of interim notes, the German E. A. Government melted this bar gold down and minted some 16000 gold coins (of Rs. 15 each) at Tabora in 1916.

Some of these coins which bear the effigy of an elephant on the one side and the German Imperial arms on the other, were recently discovered after having been buried for 5 years by the German Government Bank.

Up till quite lately it was believed that a counterfeit Tabora sovereign was in circulation owing to a marked difference in design of arms and shape of coin, which in the hitherto assumed genuine one is distinctly convex on the elephant side and perfectly flat in the case of alleged counterfeits. As now, however, coins answering to both of the above descriptions have been excavated, and some of these different coins were in each case buried by the same Government Bank the theory of counterfeit coins must be discarded in favour of the assumption that there must have existed two different dies.

As many of these gold coins were during the war converted into various forms of jewellery by the local Indians and Syrians, while others found their way into the Congo and elsewhere, there can now be comparatively few remaining in the possession of the inhabitants of Tanganyika Territory, especially as it is highly probable that a good number still remain buried in various parts of the country.

A YEAR'S WORK AT THE MINT.

RAISING OF ARTIST-CRAFTSMEN. GOLD COINS FOR EGYPT.

The 54th annual report of the Deputy Master and Comptroller of the Royal Mint, covering work done during the year 1923, has just been issued by the Stationery Office (price 6s. net). It shows that although no gold coins were struck at the Mint for Great Britain or the Empire during 1923, the work of striking gold coins was undertaken for King Fuad of Egypt. There was a considerable decrease in the number of silver and bronze pieces struck for use in Great Britain, but a heavy increase in the number of bronze coins struck for the Colonies.

Imperial silver coins struck numbered 68,819,823, as compared with an average for the preceding ten years of 93,301,643, and the corresponding numbers of bronze coins for the Colonies numbered 57,549,200, as compared with 21,292,186 in the preceding year and an average of 3,462,608 for the ten years ended 1922. The bulk of the bronze coins struck in 1923 were halfpennies and the greatest number of silver coins were halfcrowns. No threepenny pieces or pennies were made, except for the usual Maundy distribution. The total sterling value of coins struck for Imperial use was £ 6,365,544 4s. 5 ¹/₄ d.

The Comptroller refers to the work of the Advisory Committee appointed to assist the artistic side of the Department's work, and remarks that some of the Committee's selections of casts, dies, new coins, and medals were displayed at the Royal Academy. He adds; — "The Advisory Committee held 14 meetings during 1923, and a considerable body of new art work came before it for criticism. The more important designs approved during the year included the official seals for the new mandated territories of Palestine and Tanganyika by Mr. Cecil Thomas, the Great Seal of State for Northern Ireland by Sir Neville Wilkinson and Mr. G. Kruger Gray, a bronze badge for award to native chiefs in Uganda by Mr. Carter Preston, and a new reverse for the Jersey bronze coins by Mr. G. Kruger Gray."

Dealing with the scheme for producing plaquettes illustrative of London as the capital city of the Empire, for display at the British Empire Exhibition, the report notes with appreciation the offers of prizes for competitive designs from all parts of the Empire, and concludes; — "It is encouraging to be able to report that several new medallists have, by means of these competitions, been brought to the notice of the Mint and of the Advisory Committee, some at least of whom are young artists of considerable promise, who with increased experience of the necessary technique should in future be capable of producing medals and coins of unusual merit."

DESIGNERS AND CRAFTSMEN.

In an interesting note on processes and on a scheme for raising a body of artist-craftsmen, the report says: —

"With the notable exception of the fine seals for Palestine and Tanganyika by Mr. Cecil Thomas, and of much simpler work, such as the seals for the University Commissioners and the directors' passes for the London and North-Eastern Railway Company, which were engraved by the permanent craftsmen of the Mint from drawings in the flat, very little of the work produced or in course of preparation during the year was the outcome of direct engraving. But in all cases where the original artist supplied models, care was taken to keep him in close touch from the beginning with every stage of the mechanical production of the die from his model, and opportunity was given to him to supervise the finishing by our engraver-craftsmen of the reduction punch as it came off the reducing machine and before it was hardened. In this way several artists, particularly those successful in the open and limited competitions referred to above, well versed in modelling in plaster, but hitherto in medal or coin work, gained valuable experience as to the special qualities necessary in plaster models intended for reduction for these purposes, and small technical imperfections not apparent until reflected on the die by the all too faithful mediation of the reducing machine could be eliminated before publication. Meanwhile the friendly controversy between the opponents of the reducing machine and its supporters continues both upon the Advisory Committee and elsewhere with unabated zeal."

"As occasion offers and time permits, I hope to prepare a few experimental medals and coins by both processes so that the results may be carefully compared and placed on record. The present situation is that while there is a tolerable supply of good workers in plaster, engravers of distinction continue in scarceness. We may, perhaps, hope to amend this disproportion in time, and every opportunity will be given to existing engravers, if we can find private clients enough to give us orders for which they are in no great hurry, and for the laborious execution of which they are prepared to pay fees in proportion. Even so, there will always be more artists who can design but cannot execute in the steel than engravers in the steel who can also design. Moreover, as their lordships saw clearly when the post of chief engraver to the Mint was finally abolished, it would be a misfortune if the Mint productions came again to be in the hands of one engraver alone. However fine as an artist, he would have but one style, and no engraver of distinction would for long submit to instructions merely to engrave from drawings or models supplied by others.

"The result would inevitably be, as in the days of the Wyons, a series of medals, etc., good enough when considered individually, but a woful lack of variety in the Mint productions as a whole. On these grounds I am myself for a compromise course — the encouragement of the engraver-craftsmen at the Mint; to this end, the engagement of apprentices who shall be trained in design at a school of art as well as technically in the die department of the Mint; and the creation thereby of a school of expert handicraftsmen, not claiming on all occasions to have their own original work accepted, but content more often to take the drawings or models of other artists, and to convert them in collaboration with their original creators into dies technically adapted for the particular purpose in view. In some cases these dies would be engraved direct, in others they would first be taken from the plaster models over the reducing machine and then finished by hand under the direction of the original artist."

EXPERIMENTAL NICKEL COINS.

The complaints about the silver coins, which became discoloured, it is reported, are rarely received now, but the question of using pure nickel for coins has been further explored. "It is clear", says the report, "that the manufacture of nickel coins from the initial processes would involve considerable and costly modifications in our plant and processes and a large extension of our existing premises. Experimental pieces were, however, successfully struck in our presses from purchased blanks. It was decided to strike some of the keepsake medals for the British Empire Exhibition in pure nickel, and by this means further experience in the actual striking of the metal will be acquired by the staff. Experimental strikings were also made in German-silver, but it is clear that this alloy has not the many advantages of pure nickel as a coinage metal, though its appearance when newly struck is not displeasing."

Dealing with the striking of coins for the Colonies and foreign countries, the Comptroller says: —

"There was a further increase during 1923 in the number of Colonial coins struck in the Royal Mint, the total reaching nearly 62,000,000, a higher number than has been struck for many years. Nearly all the coins were for East Africa, but coinages were struck for three other Colonies and bronze coins for Jersey. Towards the end of the year 1922, I was approached by the Egyptian Government with a view to the coinage here of a limited number of 500 piastre and 100 piastre gold pieces, which his Majesty King Fuad desired to issue in commemoration of his reign. With their lordships' sanction I undertook this order, and the work proved a valuable experience, since no gold coins had been struck in this department for some years. Subsequently orders for smaller gold coins and silver coins were received, and the coinage was still in progress at the end of the year under review. In the autumn of 1923 their lordships authorized me to enter into an agreement with the Finance Minister of the Republic of Latvia for the manufacture here of a silver coinage of one-lats pieces, and arrangements for the striking of these coins were in an advanced stage by the end of the year."

Coinages were struck at the Royal Mint during 1923 for British Guiana, East Africa, Hong-kong, and Jersey. Medals struck numbered only 44,131, against 90,192 in the preceding year.

SHROPSHIRE'S BURIED ROMAN CITY.

INTERESTING DISCOVERIES AT URICONIUM.

REMARKABLE FIND OF COINS.

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.)

With appetites whetted by the discoveries already made, archaeologists are following with lively anticipation the work of exploration which is being carried out at a lonely Shropshire farm. At Wroxeter, seven miles south of Shrewsbury the Roman city of Uriconium has lain buried for centuries. Successive generations of tillers of the soil have sown and reaped over it, unaware, one may assume, of the absorbingly interesting remains of an ancient civilisation lying under the soil which their ploughshares turned. First taken in hand in 1859-61, when several acres were uncovered, and many interesting discoveries made, the work of excavation languished for lack of funds. A little was done in 1912-14, but it was not until last summer that a really serious attempt to explore the site was made possible by the generosity of Sir Charles Hyde, proprietor of the Birmingham Post.

The buried city is supposed to cover an area of 170 acres, and that it was a place of considerable importance is shown by a comparison with other Roman cities. Roman London, for instance, covered about 360 acres, Verulamium 180 acres, and Silchester 100 acres. All that is known so far about the history of the city is that for a short time after 50 A.D. it was a camp for one, or perhaps two, legions. Tombs of soldiers have been found in its cemetery. After 67 A.D. the civil settlement which had grown up round the camp developed into one of the most important towns of the provinces. It is mentioned in Ptolemy's Geography, compiled about 128 A.D. Ptolemy's name for it was Viroconium, which, with Uriconium and Wroxeter, are believed to derive from the Wrekin, the famous hill four or five miles distant, from which the Romans, supported by the garrison at Chester, dominated this part of the country.

The site was well chosen, for it occupies a bold piece of elevated ground on the banks of the Severn, and commands the rich vale of Shrewsbury. Originally, it was the headquarters of a British tribe, the Carnavii. Watling Street, and other important Roman roads, intersect at Uriconium, further testimony to the fact that it was a place of importance. The remains of a bridge and of a ford, which seems to have been paved, have been found in the Severn. In the district the Romans mined for lead, and even for coal.

DESTROYED BY FIRE.

The excavations made sixty-four years ago provided data from which the conclusion is irresistible that the city was destroyed by fire, and probably more than once. There was then unearthed a portion of the end wall of what was presumably the largest building of the city, the civil basilica, an edifice which contained law courts and an exchange, and served also as a covered place of assembly for the citizens on public occasions. Foundations have been traced which show that the hall was 299 feet long by 67 feet wide, divided by two rows of columns into a central nave, with aisles on either side. The nave was floored with small bricks laid herring-bone fashion, and the aisles had mosaic pavements.

South of the basilica has been traced a complete set of the baths characteristic of Roman towns. Columns of square flat bricks supported the false floors, which, with hollows in the side walks, formed the flues for heating the bath chambers. The chambers have been razed to their foundations, but in imagination one may reconstruct their vaulted roofs and follow the citizen of Uriconium — Roman or Parthian colonist, or Romanised Briton — through the stages of his bath.

Scenes of horror as well as of luxury are conjured up by what the explorations reveal. In one of the hypocausts or hollow floors of the bath was found, crouching between the low tile-built pillars, the skeleton of an old man. Near his outstretched hand lay a heap of coins. Not far away were the skeletons of two women. The fallen beams of the burning roof had blocked the exit, and the refuge had proved a death trap. Elsewhere among ruined and fire-blackened walls were found skeletons of men, women, and children. The tale plainly told was that of a sudden and overwhelming disaster. Who were the destroyers, Saxons or British? The late Mr. Thomas Wright, the chief authority on Uriconium, attributes the destruction of the city to the British, and puts its fall as late as 420 A.D.

BROAD AND STRAIGHT STREETS.

Streets broad and straight intersecting at right angles were brought to light by the early explorers, and sites of houses, shops, and manufactories were traced. In the manufactories bones of various animals were found, and horns of stags, from which it was evident articles were being made for sale in the shops. A building apparently used as an enameller's shop contained a well-used furnace, near which were found charcoal and mineral coal. The anvil and its stone support were also there. The shopkeeper seems to have fled for his life, for on the threshold was found a broken vase, probably his till, which had contained the coins found lying round it.

Hairpins seem to have been used largely in Uriconium, and upwards of thirty different designs have been collected. Extensive and interesting finds of pottery, ornamental and useful, were made, and Wright concludes from the presence of certain mortars, strainers, and other utensils, that the citizens in the Roman period indulged extensively in the use of made dishes, and the epicurism of the table.

The coins found are especially remarkable. On some the impressions are as sharp in outline as if they had just left the mint. They form a series extending practically over the whole of the Roman occupation of Britain for four centuries, from Claudius A.D. 41 to Theodosius A.D. 388. The collection includes two small British coins, probably of the date about B.C. 250, degraded imitations of the stater of Philip of Macedon, which doubtless found its way to our shores by the hands of Phœnician traders or Gaulish merchants. They suggest that there was possibly a British settlement on the site long before the Roman conquest.

The finds also include a silver coin of Mark Antony, B.C. 31, with the representation of an oared galley; a copper coin of Augustus, B.C. 29; and a perfect silver specimen of Tiberius A.D. 14. Coins of Vespasian, A.D. 77, are numerous, showing that Uriconium had become an important station before the end of the First Century. There are nineteen coins of Trajan, A.D. 104, and in six representations of Hadrian, A.D. 120, may be seen the person of the great Emperor who built the Roman wall in the North of England and introduced on the Roman coins the figure of Britannia, still retained in our coinage.

Seven medals show Antoninus Pius, A.D. 141, who erected the wall which bears his name across the lowlands of Scotland. There are fourteen coins of Constantine the Great, and one of his wife, Helena. Constantine introduced the Christian monogram on his coins. It is seen well on a bronze specimen of Valentinian I., A.D. 363, on a standard grasped by a Roman soldier. This is the only Christian evidence yet discovered.

CIVIC LIFE OF THE CITY.

It is upon the later or civil life of the city that last summer's excavations shed much light. The site chosen is west of the main street joining the north and south gates of the town, opposite the baths and basilica excavation of 1859-60, and north of the area explored in 1912-14. The site examined is occupied by an important building, only a part of which has yet been uncovered, because some of it lies outside the reserved area. Its main front faces east on the main street, from which it is separated by a narrow forecourt paved with cobbles, and consists of a spacious portico, the tiled roof of which was supported on stone columns. Two pillar-bases larger than the rest mark the entrance. Ten pillars out of eleven which formed the south half of the portico were found in position on their stylobate. Mr. Donald Atkinson, an expert who is taking a keen interest in the work, says this is the longest continuous colonnade ever uncovered in this country.

Beyond the portico lay a range of rooms, and beyond this again a courtyard, paved partly with gravel and partly with tiles. This was bounded on the south by a single wall, outside which was another portico facing directly on a crossed street, but in post-Roman times this had been almost entirely robbed of stone, and the pillar bases shattered. A comparison with plans of similar buildings at Silchester suggests that the building was the Forum, the market place and administrative centre of the town.

Mr. Atkinson says that four periods can be clearly recognised in the occupation of this part of the town. Lines of postholes, pits, traces of clay floors, and lumps of clay bearing the imprint of wattlework; under the east range pits, the timber sills of wooden buildings, and a well, purposely filled up and packed above with rough stones — all these indicate that buildings largely of wood had originally occupied most of the area. The next period is marked by the erection of the large building. Masses of debris, burnt beams, pottery blackened by fire, broken roof tiles and plaster found on the original pavements of the rooms and porticos, provide evidence of destruction by fire. This debris was then partly cleared away, partly levelled, and new floors laid above it.

MORE COMPLETE BURNING.

The third period ended with a similar but more complete burning, and this time the building was not restored. Fragments of the portico columns lay exposed on the surface of the forecourt and street until some of the mouldings on capital and base were worn quite away, a proof that there was traffic up and down the street long after the building had fallen into ruin.

Evidence has gradually accumulated during the excavations by which these periods can be dated. Coins and pottery prove the first to have lasted from about 70 to 110 A.D. The date of the second period can be fixed exactly, because in front of the portico entrance were found the shattered fragments of an inscription — the largest ever found in Britain — recording the dedication of the building by the Civitas Cornoviorum in the fourteenth year of the reign of Hadrian (130 A.D.). Besides dating the building the inscription gives valuable information as to the organisation of the British province. It is the most important historical discovery of the past twenty years.

Another find, almost as remarkable, dates the first destruction. In the gutter outside the east portico were unearthed piles of Samian bowls, dishes, and cups, 202 in number, many intact, and almost all capable of being repaired. With one possible exception this is the largest single find of the sort ever made. Almost all the articles bear the stamp of the maker and a study of them shows that when the fire occurred the stalls on which they were exposed for sale collapsed and shot them into the gutter. This was about 160-170 A.D. The second destruction is dated by coins and pottery to about the year 300 A.D. How long after 380 A.D., the date of the latest coin, the site was occupied cannot yet be determined.

ALLOY COINS IN FRENCH WEST AFRICA.

Visitors to France will be acquainted with the alloy coins issued by various Chambers of Commerce to replace the silver coins which are no longer minted. Supplies of these coins have now been sent out to the French West African Colonies, which have not been provided with metal currency for several years past, but have had to be content with notes, even for trifling amounts. For the requirements of the French mandated territories—Togo and Cameroon—special alloy coins are now being supplied in denominations of 2 francs, 1 franc and 50 centimes, bearing the name of the territory. It is unfortunate that these coins are somewhat similar in appearance to the alloy coins circulating in the British Colonies, and it is to be hoped this will not lead to serious difficulty. Those who have personal acquaintance with West Africa will appreciate the possibility of difficulty arising in consequence of the circulation of two coinages which may not be readily distinguishable by the native—one of which represents much less value than the other.

THE SILVER COINAGE OF THE ROMAN REPUBLIC.

N.B. The gens name and number placed before each coin are according to Babelon, Monnaies de République romaine. When ordering please quote gens, number and condition, thus:

Aburia 6, V.F. » 3 6.
Acilia 4, F.D.C. » 10 6.

ABURIA.

Caius Aburius Geminus, circa B.C. 112.

Aburia 1. Denarius. Head of Roma r., with winged helmet; below chin, ✕; behind, GEM. Α. Mars in quadriga galloping r.; in ex., ROMA; beneath horses, C. ABVI. B.M.C., 1, 147. V.F. » 3 6; E.F. » 7 »; F.D.C. » 10 »

Marcus Aburius M.f. Geminus, circa B.C. 112.

Aburia 6. Denarius. Similar. Α. Sol in quad. galloping r.; in ex., ROMA; beneath horses, M. ABVI. B.M.C., 1, 146. V.F. » 3 6; E.F. » 7 6

This moneyer was probably a brother of C. Aburius Geminus, and may have been one of his colleagues at the mint.

ACCOLEIA.

Publius Accoleius Lariscolus, B.C. 41.

Accoleia 1. Denarius. Bust of Acca Larentia r., dr., head closely bound with fillet, hair arranged in close locks above her forehead; around, P. ACCOLEIVS LARISCOLVS. Three statues of the Nymphae Querquetulanae in form of caryatides facing, supporting on their hands and shoulders a beam from which issue five trees. B.M.C., 1, 569. V.F. » 10 »; E.F. » 17 6; F.D.C. » 1 7 6

Acca Laurentia was the wife of the shepherd Faustulus and the nurse of Romulus and Remus; she was apparently the eponym of the gens Accoleia. The Querquetulanae virae are the nymphs who preside over the green forests and to whom were consecrated the groves of the Larès on Mount Coelius.

Var. a) Similar; but the head is not bound with fillet and a long lock of hair falls down her neck.

ACILIA.

Manius Acilius Balbus, circa B.C. 112.

Acilia 1. Denarius. Head of Roma wearing winged helmet; under chin, ✕; behind, BABVS; below, ROMA; the whole within laurel-wreath. Α. M. ACILI in exergue. Jupiter accompanied by Victory in quad. galloping l.; below horses, Macedonian shield. B.M.C., 1, 150. F. » 2 »; V.F. » 4 6; E.F. » 8 6

The moneyer was probably a grandson of M. Acilius L.f. K. n. Balbus the consul of B.C. 150 who commanded in the Macedonian wars, which terminated in the defeat of Perseus at Pydna, an event to which the reverse and the wreath on the obv. relate.

Marcus Acilius M. f., B.C. 100.

Pliny relates that a Peloponnesian named Archagathus, a practitioner of medicine, was the first person who made it a distinct profession in Rome, where he came during B.C. 219. Having received the right of citizenship, he was given a shop at the public expense in the cross-way or street Acilia. In consequence the Acilia gens claimed to have introduced the first physician into Rome.

SEPTIMIUS SEVERVS.

A.D. 193-211.

L. Septimius Severus was born in A.D. 146 at Leptis Magna in Africa; he adopted the army as a profession and in 193 was in command in Pannonia, where he was elected emperor on the murder of Pertinax. After conquering his rivals he achieved victories in the East, especially against the Parthians, and thereafter subdued a rebellion in Britain and secured South Britain against invasion from the north by a wall. He died and was buried at York.

JULIA DOMNA.

Julia Domna was the daughter of Bassianus, a Syrian priest of the Sun. She would probably have passed a life of obscurity, had not her horoscope foretold that her husband would become a sovereign. Septimius Severus heard of this and taken more by the prophecy than by her personal charms, which were not great, married her A.D. 173. Julia bore two sons, Caracalla and Geta. After the fall of Severus she made an attempt to maintain peace between her sons, but without success, for Geta was murdered in her arms. After the fall of Caracalla she starved herself to death.

CARACALLA.

A.D. 211-217.

Caracalla was the son of Septimius Severus and Julia Domna; his reign was a series of crimes, follies and extravagances; he put to death 20,000 persons and was in the end assassinated himself by one of his guards.

PLAUTILLA.

† A. D. 212. Fulvia Plautilla, the daughter of a Praetorian Prefect was married to Caracalla in A. D. 202. The nuptials were celebrated with the utmost pomp and magnificence but as the lady happened to be as haughty as she was handsome, her happiness was of short duration. She quickly became an object of aversion to Caracalla, who had never loved her, and was exiled to Lipari in the following year. After lingering in wretched affliction, wanting even the common necessities of life, she was murdered A. D. 212, by order of her inhuman husband, who despatched assassins for that purpose the instant that he was released from restraint by his father's death.

BERN.

Bern was founded in 1191 by Duke Berchtold V of Zähringen. A quarter of a century later it was made a free imperial city with coinage rights, by the Emperor Frederick II. The bear, an invariable type on the coins of the city, is found on coins of Orgetorix, of the first century B.C. But it is not certain that he is the same as the chief of the Helvetii of that name mentioned by Caesar in his Commentaries. Legend relates that the Duke determined to name the city after the first beast he should kill in a hunt over his territory; and as it fell out he began by slaying a bear. As in the case of Uri and Schaffhausen it is likely that some local characteristic of fauna or agricultural industry has decided the chief feature of the cantonal arms.

In 1529 the Bernese adopted the Reformation and as a consequence, St. Vincent disappeared from the types and legends of the coins and his name was replaced by that of Berchtold.

R. FOR MERIT within a laurel wreath. PRESENTED BY A GRATEFUL COUNTRY. 2" diam. E.F. 1 1 »

••• "The idea of making an honorary award to commemorate this war against the United States of America originated with the "Loyal and Patriotic Society of Toronto".

It was decided to issue a medal, the first design for which was submitted but was not approved. A later design was passed and the order was given in 1817 to Messrs Wyon to supply the medals in gold and in silver.

In the former metal 62 and in the latter 548 can be accounted for.

The issue, however, was never made. There was much discussion as to the distribution in regard to services which entitled individuals to the gift of the medal.

Eventually the medals were defaced and sold as bullion, and the proceeds were given to the funds of the Toronto General Hospital.

There is no record that any of the original specimens were saved from destruction.

One or two specimens in bronze and one in lead of a smaller medal of identical design are known to be in existence. There is however, no record of the origin of these in Wyon's books, and they are considered to be pattern medals".

Mr W. S. Coutts having purchased the dies from Messrs Wyon with the object of sending them to Canada had 100 silver medals struck by them and had each medal numbered. We are now able to offer the remainder of the one hundred medals at the above very low figure.

THE LONDON PLAQUETTE.

The designer has sought to portray the following features. London, as capital of the Empire, is represented by a gateway, held open by Britannia on the right and Industry on the left.

Though the gateway are to be seen the Houses of Parliament, from which the Government of the Empire proceeds. At the right of Britannia is the City Monument, representing History, and, the left of Industry, the Cenotaph-figurative of the Empire's Martial prowess.

THE ROMAN IMPERIAL COINAGE

VOL. I

AUGUSTUS—VITELLIUS.

BY

H. MATTINGLY M.A. and E.A. SYDENHAM M.A.

Cr. 8vo. Sewed. 280 pp. 16 plates

FROM THE PREFACE

The object of this handbook is to present, in a form serviceable both to students and collectors, the coinage of Imperial Rome, classified, as far as is possible, under mints and dates. The natural grouping under emperors takes precedence of all others and under each reign the classification by mints and dates is variously applied to suit the circumstances of each case. The time has not yet come for a full corpus of Roman coins; but this book aims at rehandling the whole material known to Cohen, correcting it where necessary and adding any coins that have been published since his date. As far as possible forgeries have been eliminated; where doubt exists as to authenticity it has been indicated in the notes. Descriptions have been cut as short as seemed compatible with clearness. A general introduction handles the chief problems of Roman numismatics, mint authorities, money system, mints, types, etc. Special introductions to each reign deal with special questions of types and arrangement.

The abandonment of the purely alphabetical arrangement of Cohen may perhaps grieve some readers. It is, however, a necessary step, if Roman coins are to be appreciated and understood. The authors, therefore, feel no need to apologise for having taken it; and they have done their best to facilitate the finding of any individual coin by supplying full indexes of types and legends, short indexes of emperors, mints and moneyers, and a general index which supplements the special indexes. They believe that if these indexes are carefully used their method of arrangement will soon win acceptance on its merits.

"I was very glad to receive THE ROMAN IMPERIAL COINAGE. It quite comes up to my expectation. The plates are excellent and I congratulate you on producing the book so well as such a price".

NOTES ON THE MYTHOLOGICAL TYPES

ON ROMAN REPUBLICAN COINS.

ACCA LARENTIA.

On a denarius of P. Accoleius Lariscolus, issued about 43 B.C. we see a female head, to right, with her hair coiled on the head; and on the Reverse three statues of the Nymphae Querquetulanae; the nymph on the right holds a flower, that on the left a bow. Together they hold a beam on which are five bushes or shrubs.

Both Obverse and Reverse represent ideas connected with the grove of the Lares, and may be easily associated with the name of the moneyer Lariscolus, which may be a shortened form of Lareiscolus, meaning worshipper of the Lares (Lares colens).

However, this simple explanation of the type did not satisfy Cohen, Morell, or Vaillant, who regarded the head as that of Clymene, and the nymphs as the sisters of Phaeton changed into arch trees.

Cavedoni and Borghesi regarded the types as symbols of the cult of the Lares, and the head as that of Lara or Larunda, the mother of the Lares, the nymphs on the Rev. as nymphs of the sacred grove. But Larunda is derived from λαλῆν, and the legend connected with that name has a far fetched connection with the Lares according to the myth in Ovid, Fast, II, 599.

The Etruscan word LAR is generally first met with in the name Lars Porsena of Clusium, or in Livy's reference to Lars Tolumnius (IV, 17).

The spirits of Heroes who had died were called Lares, the noble or heroic ones.

It is doubtful whether the spirits of women could become lares, and it may be probable that the head on the coin represented the Lar familiaris, or the first originator of the family, a title like that of the Greek ἡρώς ἐπώνυμος. May not the female head represent a romantic claim that the family was connected with the foster-mother of the great twins Romulus and Remus?

The temple of the Lares praestites was situated in the upper part of the Via Sacra, near the compitum, whence Lares were called Compitales. It contained images of Romulus and Remus, and before them was placed a figure of a dog, either as a symbol of watchfulness, or as the animal ordinarily sacrificed to the Lares. It is represented on a denarius of L. Caesius circa 104 B.C. There were two classes of Lares, the public and domestic. The Manes were connected with the place of burial, and the Lares with the home or hearth. The Lares represented only good men not the spirits of all the departed.

The grove of the nymphs where Acca Larentia, the foster-mother of Romulus was buried, was regarded as a symbol of the hearth of the city in its earliest days.

Arnobius circa 303 A.D.: We can, if it is thought proper, speak briefly of the lares also, whom the mass think to be the gods of streets and ways, because the Greeks name lanes "laurae". In different parts of his writings, Nigidius (circa 60 B.C.) (speaks of them), now as the guardians of houses and dwellings, now as the Curetes &c. Varro with like hesitation says at one time that they are the Manes, and therefore the mother of the Lares was named Mania; at another time, again, he maintains that they are gods of the air, and are termed heroes; at another, following the opinion of the ancients, he says they are ghosts, as it were a kind of tutelary demon, spirits of dead men". (Adv. Gentes, III, 41.)

This name Acca Larentia has been associated with three different mythical women, the mother of the Lares, the foster-mother of Romulus, and a courtesan who left much wealth to the state.

The Festival of the Larentalia was ascribed by some to the month of April, by others to December 23rd. It appears to have been a joyous festival with thanksgivings for the passing of the darkest days, and the returning light of the new year, hence perhaps it was associated with sacrifices to Jupiter, the Father of light. The good spirit which caused the earth to bring forth vegetation may have been called Lara, for Lar was the Etruscan word for Noble, Heroic one, or Powerful one.

Acca may be the same or similar in meaning to the Sanscrit word for Mother, confer the Greek 'Αχχά, a sort of ghost, with which nurses frightened children, and its use in Zenobius, I, 53 for a vain woman. There may have been a tradition that the foster-mother of Romulus was called Acca, Mother, and she may have been associated with the December Festival because her tomb was said to have been situated in the grove or spot in which the December feast to Jove and Lara was held; and her service to the founder of the state, Romulus, would be regarded as giving her the right to be honoured among the departed worthies of the race. The legend that the twins were reared by a (lupa) she-wolf must be very ancient, and may be compared with similar stories among primitive peoples. In more recent times men explained away the literal meaning by attributing to the word lupa another meaning, i.e. courtesan. In the early legend Acca was the wife of the shepherd, not his concubine.

The second mythical Acca must be a much later legend because we know of no traces of the Semitic custom of prostitution in the Roman temples of Hercules. Although the Romans worshipped the god of good faith, Fidius, in very early times, they did not call him Hercules until they had learnt the myths of Heracles from the Greek Colonists of Magna Græcia. Probably such a story as that told by Plutarch in connection with the temple of Hercules may have come from Corinth where there were courtesans in such temples, or a Phœnician town in Sicily.

The story of Acca Larentia is told by Macrobius (I, 8). "Since the days of Ancus, a solemn sacrifice has been consecrated to his god's manes, and to Jupiter because men of old thought that the souls of men were given by Jupiter". He quotes Macer lib. I of his history as his authority for the association of the name Acca Larentia with the wife of Faustulus, and notes that Ops the wife of Saturn was worshipped at the same time, thus recognizing the earth as the mother of mortals.

Plutarch in Quaest. Rom. (34) notes that sacrifices were offered at the time of year for breaking up the ground in preparation for the spring sowing, a time suitable for the cult of Saturn, the god of the under world, with which the Larentalia were associated.

This earlier Acca Larentia is mentioned in Plutarch's life of Romulus (c. IV). After speaking of the wild fig tree called Ruminale he says: "Here then the babes lay and the she-wolf of story here gave them suck (cf. Livy, I, 4, 6, 7). But some say that the name of the children's nurse, by its ambiguity, deflected the story into the realm of the fabulous. For the Latins not only called she-wolves "lupæ", but also women of loose character (ἐπίτριτοι) and such a woman was the wife of Faustulus, the foster-father of the infants, Acca Larentia by name. Yet the Romans sacrifice to her and in the month of April the priest of Mars pours libations in her honour, and the festival is called Larentalia."

In the next chapter Plutarch relates the story of the later Larentia in the same way as it is related in the Quaest. Rom., 35.

St. Augustine refers to the later legend in his 'City of God' (VI, 7), apparently copying the story from Plutarch who, in his thirty-fifth chapter of Roman Questions, relates the answer to "Why did the Romans honour this Acca Larentia so highly seeing that she was no better than a courtesan"? Remember that historians mention another Acca Larentia, the nurse of Romulus, whom they honour in the month of April. As for this courtesan Larentia she was, as men say, surnamed Fabula. A certain temple servant of Hercules having little to do played with dice and challenged the god to play with him, and who ever lost was to provide a feast and a courtesan for the winner. The servant lost the game and provided a supper and Acca Larentia as the courtesan. The god is said to have told her to ally herself with the first man she should meet. When she obeyed she met a rich elderly man named Taruntius and lived with him till his death. In his will he left her a large fortune which she left to the state, wherefore sacrifices in her honour were offered to her.

Her name Fabula or Favole, like those of Fauna or Flora, was associated in various myths with Hercules. All these mythical beings were associated with the idea of fertility. Hercules, at that late time when eastern ideas were common in Italy, may have been associated with the sun whose rays began to grow stronger from the end of December when this festival was held.

The Parentalia were probably celebrated early in the day, and the rest of the day was dedicated to Jupiter. Thus the two ideas of remembering the departed heroes of the race who were supposed to be resting in the bosom of mother-earth and the honouring of the god who gave souls to mortals were associated in one Festival.

The story told by R. Gellius is as follows (VI, 7): She in her will according to the history of Antias (circa 175 B.C.) made Romulus, the king, her heir; or as certain others have handed down, the Roman people heir to her possessions. On account of this service sacrifice is offered her on behalf of the state by the Flamen Quirinalis and a day named from her was added to the fasti.

But Sabinus Massurius in the first book of his Memorialia, following certain writers of history, says that Acca Larentia was the nurse of Romulus. That woman lost one of her twelve sons and Romulus gave himself in his place to Acca Larentia as a son and called her other sons the Arval Brothers. From that time the college of the brethren has remained twelve in number, of which priesthood the emblem is a crown of ears of corn and white ribbons (fillets).

Two ancient Calendars give an account of the legends, the Maffey and that of Præneste.

Concerning Dec. 25th "Feriae Iovi Accae Larentiae, some say this day was dedicated to the nurse of Romulus and Remus, a courtesan, others to a courtesan of Hercules to whom a public memorial service was given, because she made the Roman people her heir to much wealth which she had received by the will of Tarutius her lover."

Ovid wrote (Faste, III) "Who does not know how the infants thrived on the milk of a wild beast... I would not pass by thee in silence Larentia, nurse of so mighty a race, nor would I be silent concerning thy humble circumstances, oh, poor Faustulus!" Varro also (in Lib. I, 6, 23) witnesses to funeral rites being paid at the grove of Acca in Velabrum.

THE REVERSE TYPE.

On the above denarii we see three nymphs bearing a beam on their shoulders on which appear five shrubs or bushes, emblems of a sacred grove of oak trees.

From quercus an oak, quercetum, an oak wood, was derived Querquetulanus as a diminutive of quercetum, which was applied to the mons Coelius at Rome in early times.

Tacitus, Annals, IV, 65 "It will not perhaps be improper to mention in this place that the mount of which we have been speaking was in the early ages of Rome covered with a grove of oaks, and for that reason called Querquetulanus. It took afterwards the name of Coelius from Caelus Vibenna, an Etrurian chief who assisted the Romans, and for this was allowed to settle on that hill."

Festus said "the Querquetulanae women (virae) are thought to be the nymphs presiding over the verdant oak groves; they say this kind of trees was found within the gate which from that fact was called Querquetularia."

Pliny in speaking of the trees near Rome said (N.H., 16, 10) "In those days the pine and fir tree, and generally all that yield pitch, were held as strangers and aliens, because none of them were known to grow near unto the city of Rome". Different parts of Rome were named after the kind of tree which grew there, as the Beech grove of Jupiter Fagutalis; and the Collis viminalis from the osiers; so also we have the oak grove of the Porta Querquetulana. This oak grove was called "lucus Laruna", grove of the Lares. Augustus built a shrine to the Lares at the top of the sacred way. The nymphs were emblems of the powers of nature connected with the trees.

The word nymph is derived from the Greek νύμφη bride. There were nymphs of springs, hills, the sea, and various groves. The oak grove nymphs were called Δρυάδες. There were rain nymphs, meadow nymphs, and rock nymphs. The nymphs of the grove of the Lares might have been regarded as some feminine aspect of the Lares.

RUSSANGES, NICOLAS (I) DE (French). Mint-engraver at Paris; worked for Bayonne, 1498.

RUTLINGER, JOHANN (Dutch). Possibly a Son of Erat (or Eryte) Rutling, described in 1568 a "Duche person" "goldsmyth" and "denizen". Miss Heben Farquhar, The Phoenix Badge of Queen Elizabeth, Num. Chron., 1923, pp. 270-293 has collated all the information obtainable on this artist, who was a line-engraver, and became under-graver at the Tower Mint in the concluding years of Elizabeth and earlier portion of James I's reign. He was undoubtedly of foreign parentage, and Sir Sydney Colvin, Early Engraving and Engravers, has suggested that he may have been a native of Reutlingen, and known in England by the name of the locality whence he came. The earliest record of his official employment at the Mint dates from 1596-97. At Michaelmas 1599, when he obtained an allowance of £55 for two and three quarter years' service, he is described as "Rutlinger, alias Eareth, subsculptor infra cambium". His name appears also in 1599 as subsculptor ferrorum with George Tyson as impressor ferrorum. A document of 1600, calls him "John Rutlyngham (sic), one of her Majestys gravers in the Mint, a most exquisite man in that kind of profession". Rutlinger was responsible for the Irish crowned harps on the coinage of Elizabeth for Ireland, February, 1600-1. The chief-engraver, who cut the obverse dies was Charles Anthony. In 1601, we find that Rutlinger was "temporarily retired in favour of John Baptist van Landen who continued to assist Anthony until the end of the queen's life" (Symonds, Elizabethan Coinages of Ireland, Num. Chron., 1917). In the reign of James I, Mr. Symonds, referring to Charles Anthony's work in 1603 and 1604, continues "John Rutlinger had now returned and apparently worked with John Baptist van Landen until the latter's decease or retirement in 1606". After that year, Rutlinger and John Dycker were 'inferiores sculptores' with a salary of £40, until the former died in 1609, when Dycker worked for about ten years without a junior colleague.

Rutlinger was almost certainly in England in 1588 to 1589 when he engraved a map, published in the Mariner's Mirrour, 1588 signed Joannes a Rutlinger. A print, of which two copies are known, in the British Museum, is by this artist, and to him Miss Farquhar would attribute also the Phoenix Badge, as will be established from an elaborate comparison of the work of the print and badge. The combination of engraver of prints and dies and goldsmith was a common occurrence in those days. The Phoenix Badge was, undoubtedly, made privately by Rutlinger before he became attached to the mint in 1596, and may bear reference to the peace enjoyed by the Dutch refugees under the British Phoenix.

Miss Farquhar illustrates a famous Phoenix jewel of Elizabeth (Num. Chron., 1923, Pl. XIII, 1), which might refer to the Queen's visit to Norwich in 1578, but this is by a different hand, and De Bry is tentatively suggested as the author.

RYDEN, HENNING (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 281). Employed with Mr. J. M. Swanson as modellers and designers by the Whitehead and Hoag Company, Newark, N. J. Unfortunately the medals being usually unsigned it is not always possible to discriminate between the individual works of the two artists.

Ryden's dies are hand cut, and by him are the following productions of the firm above-named, issued in 1914: Spingarn Medal for Advancement of Coloured People; — Glenn Country Poultry Breeder's Association; Willows, California, Exhibition; — Centenary of Birth of Col. Samuel Colt, Founder of Colt Arms Company; — Centenary Grand Commandery of State of New York, 1914, with bust of Sir John B. Mullan; Æ. 51 mill.; — Dedication of New York State Monument at Andersonville, Ga; Æ. 51 mill.; — Establishment of Federal Reserve Banks; Æ. 70 mill. (two types); — Society of the Cincinnati; Æ. 51 mill.

Born in Barcelona; studied in Madrid; was awarded a Prize in 1805 by the Academy of San Fernando; appointed to cut the dies for the coinage of Ferdinand VII. He refused to serve Joseph Napoleon. In 1811 he became Engraver General to the Council of Regency, and in 1814 he was installed Chief-engraver at the Madrid mint, in the place of Pedro Sepulveda, who was a partisan of the French government. In 1820, he swore fidelity to the Constitution, but in 1823, on political grounds, he left Madrid, but returned later. For further information, confer A. Vives, op. cit., p. 521.

The medals signed SAA or SA are by SAA (q.v. suprà) and not by Sagau.

By Sagau are further: Medal to Duke de Albuquerque, 1810; — Promulgation of the Constitution in Cadix, 1812; — Infans Don Antonio Pascual, 1817; — Visit of Ferdinand VII to the Madrid Mint, 1825; — Dedication medal to Ferdinand VII., 1829; — Royal Society of Economics of Madrid; — R. SAWYER, EDWARD W. (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 343). "The American Numismatic Society has added to its exhibition a most interesting collection of thirty-one medals bearing portraits of Indians, recently presented by Mr. Edward D. Adams.

These portraits were modelled from life by Edward W. Sawyer, an American sculptor who has resided in Paris for a number of years.

In 1904 Mr. Sawyer took a trip out to Arizona for his health, and while there modelled a number of portraits, carefully selecting only full blooded Indians for his subjects, and in most cases those of the older generation. Four of these are in this collection: — Ne-I-So-Meh, of the Yuma Tribe, at Yuma, Arizona, Chief Tia-Yo-Ni, Nol-To-I and Est-Zan-Lopa, of the Navajo Tribe at Ganado, Arizona, Est-Zan-Lopa being a young girl who was a most skilful weaver.

In 1908 Mr. Sawyer came to this country again, and modelled more Indian portraits. Of these but one is in this collection, an Apache, at Agua Caliete, Arizona, whose name he did not get, but whom he selected as a good type of this tribe.

The remaining twenty-six are the result of a third visit, made expressly for this purpose, being on the various Indian reservations from December 1911 to December 1912. The medals bear the following portraits:

Apache: Naiche, hereditary chief, Fort Sill, Oklahoma.

Arapahoe: Ne-Aie-Ta-Ha-Wa, Han-Ni-Ait, as squaw, and Ba-Haw, all at Geary, Oklahoma.

Cheyenne: Tsh-Sha-A-Nish-Is, or Two Moons, one of the chiefs engaged in the Custer massacre, the father of John Two Moons whose portrait, modelled by Fraser appears on the new nickel five cent piece, Ma-Ki-Na-Ko, or Old Bear and Ho-Tua-Hwo-Ko-Mas, or White Bull, at Lane Deer, Montana.

South Cheyenne: Chief Che-No-Ni and Ma-Si-Ni at Clinton, Oklahoma, Noco-To-Mah, at Geary, Oklahoma.

Comanche: Timbo and Tah-Do-Ni-Pper, at Cache, Oklahoma. Crow: Fch-Spa-Di-F-Ash, Be-Sha-E-Chi-E-Di-Esha and Curley, who was one of Custer's scouts, at Crow Agency, Montana.

Kickapoo: Be-Me-Tha, a squaw and On-Ah-Shin-Nin-Nah, at McCloud, Oklahoma.

Osage: Kah-Wah-Se and See-Hah, at Pawhuska, Oklahoma.

Pawnee: Sah-Cooh-Ru-Tu-Ree-Hoo, Pee-Ru-Ths, a squaw, and Stah-Pe-U, a young girl, at Pawnee, Oklahoma.

Wichita: Chief To-Wak-Oni-Jim, at Anadarko, Oklahoma.

In addition to these, the Society has received, as a loan, from Mr. Sawyer, a life size model in bronze of the medal of Chief Sota, which has also been placed on exhibition.

The Indians of the older generation are rapidly passing away, and with them many of the original types and characteristics. Through mixture with other races and different conditions of life and occupation, the Indian is undergoing a change in appearance, and these portrait medals, depicting as they do many of the older type, are most valuable from a historical, ethnological and artistic standpoint.

and Mr. Sawyer is to be congratulated upon the good work that he has done."

(The Numismatist, August 1913.)

At the Paris Salon 1914 (Soc. des Art. fr.) Sawyer exhibited a series of Portrait-medallions, and a collection of portraits of Red Indians.

"Mr. Sawyer modelled nearly forty portraits of Indians within a period of less than half a dozen years. And the Indian is not an easy subject for the artist, if something more than a mere faithful likeness is desired. The inscrutability of his countenance, exceeded by few races of the world, cannot but prove baffling to any attempts to express either dominant characteristics or fleeting emotions of his soul. And yet there is not a lifeless portrait in the entire large group of these medals, while many of them are all that one could require of an artist in the intelligible expression of character. Mr. Sawyer's fine achievement, while a credit to his artistic abilities, possesses national and historical value that will in future be more highly valued." T. L. Comparette, Coins and Medals in the United States in 1913, Amer. Journ. of Num. 1913, p. 148.

In 1915, the artist exhibited at the Royal Academy, London, a case of Portrait-medallions in silver, and another consisting of portraits of American Indians.

Two bronze Medallions of Chief Sota Colala, Sioux Indian, and Be-Sha-E-Chi-Di-Esha, Crow Indian, as well as forty assorted bronze medals of various Indian tribes were exhibited by the artist at the American Numismatic Society Exhibition, 1923.

SCHAEFER, HANS (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 348). Further medals by his artist are: Medal struck for the Dog Show held at the Hunting and Shooting Exhibition, 1911; — Schubert Medal, commissioned by the Schubertbund; — After Toil (all three illustrated in The Studio, LV, 333); — Dr. Karl R. von Feistmantel, 40 years' Jubilee as President of the Chamber of Advocates of Lower Austria, 1912; — Plaque of the Hunting Exhibition in Vienna, 1910; — Hütterott Plaque, 1908; — Fischel Plaque, 1910; — Dr. Karl Ritter v. Feistmantel, 1912; — Count Larisch; plaque, 1911; — Lament of the Dead; plaque; — Dog Show in Vienna, 1910; — Centenary of the K. K. Society of Friends of Music in Vienna, 1912 (R. by A. Hartig); — Bergmannstag Plaque; — Director Alois Weishut, 1912; — M. Eva Schaefer, the artist's wife, 1913; cast Portrait-plaque; — 100th Anniversary of the Rifle Club of Panesova, 1913; — Portrait-plaque of Julius Blum; — An die Arbeit; a cast medallion, companion to "Nach der Arbeit"; — Max and Johanna Schiller; — Servian Victory Medal, 1912, etc.

SCHAEFER, KARL (Germ.). Contemporary Medallist, in the employment of the firm of Wilhelm Mayer, Stuttgart, circ. 1890. He cut the dies for medals commemorating the 90th Anniversary of Field Marshal Count Moltke, 1890 (sev. var.); — 25th Anniversary of the Franco-German War, 1895 (obv. modelled by H. Dürich, Cassel; R. by Prof. Christaller); — Commemorative medal of the 25th Anniversary of the "Schleswig-Holsteiner-Abend" in Berlin, 1904; — Naval Academy at Kiel, 1888; — Dog Show at Kiel, 1899; — Inauguration of the Kiel Canal, 1895, etc.

SCHÄFER, EMIL (Germ.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist of Dresden. I have seen by him a Portrait-plaque of Joh. David Koehler, 1913 (edited by the Dresden Numismatic Society, and struck by Glaser and Sohn at Dresden).

SCHAFER, MATTHAÜS (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 357). The monogram 16. S has been erroneously attributed to this Engraver, who lived in the seventeenth century (Imhof, p. 635, n° 31). Hampe, Bayer. Gewerbezeitung, 1897 (X), p. 32, suggests Michael Schmid or Martin Stuber.

SCHAPER, Professor F. (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 358). This artist's initials occur also on the obv. of a medal of Prince Bismarck, showing on R. the Bismarck Tower at Friedrichsruh, 1903 (R. by J. von Langa).

SCHARDINE, EGMONT VON AACHEN (Germ.). Mint-master at Frankfort-on-M., 1594.

SCHARFF, ANTON (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 358). Additional works: Alb. Lud. Kaufmann and Christian Lange, 1902; — Gottfried Semper, architect; cast Plaque; — Portrait-medal of Franz von Hauer, 1822-1892, of the Imp. and Royal Geographical Society of Vienna; presented to Capt. Rob. F. Scott; 59 mill.; silver; etc.

SCHAUPP, JOHANN CHRISTOPH (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 376). Worker in compressed horn and tortoise shell, Medallist and Engraver of gems, was born on 1. September 1685, and died at the age of 72 on 20. November 1757. He was twice married, first with a fellow-townswoman of the name of Wisshagg, and secondly to a lady of Basle of the family of Burkhard. Schaupp appears to have been self-taught.

In 1717 Schaupp was entrusted with the cutting of the dies for four Jubilee medals of Biberach.

This artist is best known by his series of 200 cameo-portraits cut in stone of Roman emperors, etc., to Francis II. The set comprises 99 Roman emperors, from Julius Caesar to Romulus Augustulus, 33 Oriental and Byzantine rulers, from Arcadius to Michael I, and 67 German emperors, from Charlemagne to Francis II. The three last gems, with portraits of Joseph II., Leopold II., and Francis II, were engraved by a different artist, as they are signed W.; many of the others bear the signature SCH., S.F., or SCHAUPP FECIT. To the collection is added a Portrait-cameo in cornelian of the artist himself, treated in the same way as the set of emperors, and bearing the inscription: 'J.C. SCHAUPP Edelstein-graveur zu Biberach 1745.' All these gems were cut in cornelian, after coins and medals of the depicted personages. The engraving is clever, but does not stand out as of particular merit. The artist is said to have been paid 3 Ducats for each gem.

The Collection which was made up to the order of a wealthy treasurer of Suabia, Hartmann in Ulm, passed through various hands, and was lately (1912) offered for sale to Messrs. Spink & Son L^d, 6 King St.

SCEEMAKERS, THOMAS (Brit.). Sculptor, 1740-1808; son of the sculptor Peter Scheemakers, born at Antwerp; exhibited at Royal Academy 1765-1804; died 1808. He won Premiums of the Royal Society of Arts in 1765 for Modelling in clay, and in 1766 for a Bas-relief.

SCHENKEL, F. (Germ.). Signed a medal commemorating the commencement of the World War; R. 50 mill.

SCHERFF (SCHARPF), STEPHAN (Swiss). Mint-master at Basle, mentioned 1438-39. He was later accused of underhand dealings as Mint-master at Frankfort-on-M. Cf. M.A. Ruegg, in Schweiz. Künstler-Lexikon, Suppl., p. 387.

SCHILLER (Germ.). Engraver of Stuttgart; has signed a medal of Leo XIII, 1887, and another commemorating a Tour in Sprickingen.

SCHILLING, ANDREAS (Germ.). Mint-engraver at Frankfort-on-M., 1623.

SCHLEHENBUSCH (SCHLEBUSCH), HANS HEINRICH (Germ.). Mint-master at Ranstadt and Ortenberg, 1617-22.

SCHLOSS, A. (Aust.). Engraver of a badge commemorating the Tolmino battle, 1917.

SCHLÖTER, HENNING (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 387). Mint-master at Zellerfeld under Dukes Christian, Augustus the elder, Frederick and George; also at Clausthal under Duke Frederick, 1636-1639, Magnus, 1632; George, 1636-1641; Anne Eleonore, 1639; John, 1628; Christian Louis, 1641-1655. His signature HS often accompanied by P or Σ occurs on a vast number of coins of that period. For a description of many of them, consult Fiala, Münzen und Medaillen der Welfischen Lande. Das neue Hans Lüneburg zu Hanover, 1913-1915.

SCHLÜTER, KARL (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 387). Mint-master at Hanover, 1839 to 6. March 1844; privy-mark S. This occurs amongst others on a Thaler of King Ernest Augustus of Hanover, 1840, etc.

SCHMAHLFELD, GEORG LUDWIG FRIEDRICH (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 389). By this artist are further: Marriage medal of Albert Prince of Wales, and Princess Alexandra of Denmark, 1863 (in conjunction with W. Christesen).

SCHMIDT (Austr.). Signature on a medal commemorating Austria's offers of peace; 50 mill.

SCHMIDT, CLEMENS (Germ.). Warden of the Mint at Wernigerode 1544, and Stolberg, 1545.

SCHMIDT, KILIAN (Germ.). Mint-warden at Stolberg, after 1551.

SCHMIDT, FRIEDRICH WILHELM (Germ.). Medallist and Mint-engraver at Brunswick, in the third quarter of the eighteenth century. His initials F.W.S. occur on a large medal of Duchess Elizabeth Sophia Maria of Brunswick, to commemorate the 50th Anniversary of her residence in Brunswick, 1760 (Lange 735).

SCHMIDT, RUDOLF (Austr.). Contemporary Medallist, by whom I have noted a medal on the Accession of Charles I, Emperor of Austria, 1916; iron, 50 mill.

SCHNEIDER, CHARLES (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 394). This artist exhibited at the Paris Salon 1912 several cameos: Oh! ne me laisse pas en vain m'épuiser et tendre la main; — Gueux de Lorraine, lapis lazuli; — Portrait de M. R. P, sardonyx; — Portrait of M. D. C; — 1913. A selection of engraved stones, etc.

SCHNEIDER, GEBRÜDER (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 395). In 1912 this firm issued a Medal of the Universal Eucharistic Congress in Vienna, 1912 (the work of the medallist MICHAEL SIX); — Centenary of Battle of Hermagor, 1913 (by Prof. Max Domanig).

SCHNEIDER, HANS (Austr.). Contemporary Medallist; has been working for Jauner in Vienna. His signature occurs on a medal of the Centenary of Mexican Independence, 1910.

SCHNEIDER, LORENZ CHRISTOPH (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 395). This Mint-master's initials occur also on Ducats of 1683, 1686 and 1688, with busts of Frederick William of Brandenburg (1681-88) and Frederick III (1688-1701) for the African Company of Guinea.

SCHOLZ, HEINRICH (Austr.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist of Vienna, by whom I have seen a fine Portrait-plaquette of the catholic poet E. Hlatky.

SCHOLZ, HELENE (Austr.). Contemporary Viennese Sculptor and Medallist. Her signature occurs on the following medals: General Archduke Eugene, 1915; Æ. 60 mill.; — Field Marshal Archduke Frederick, 8. December 1914; 55 mill.; — View of Teschen Castle, 1915. Æ. 55 mill.

SCHRECK, KONRAD (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 402). Konrad Schreck was appointed Mint-master in Berlin 1572, but in 1566 he had already engraved for the Court preacher, Coelestin, a gold portrait-medal of Prince Elector Joachim II. of Brandenburg. We also know that he worked at Augsburg in 1555 as an apprentice and died in Berlin in 1580. A medal, with his portrait, shows him in his 76th year. Another medal, undated, gives his portrait on obv. and that of his wife on rev. (illustrated).

Konrad and Anna Schreck.

Dr G. Habich (Die deutschen Medailleure des XVI. Jahrhunderts, 1916) gives the following list of Konrad Schreck's medallic works: — (1553) Kaspar Lindegg; model in honestone (probably executed in Augsburg); — 1556. Jakob Zobel, of Augsburg (Victoria and Albert Museum, London); — Berlin. 1556. Matthäus Flaccus (Fleck), a Berlin physician; — The same; R. Regina Schirmerin; — 1558. Margrave John George of Brandenburg; — Princess Electress Sabina of Brandenburg, stone model in Berlin; — 1560. Prince Elector Joachim II., facing bust, stone model; — The same; bust to l.; stone model; — Sigismund of Brandenburg, Archbishop of Magdeburg; — Matthäus Flaccus, facing bust; R. Regina Schirmerin, facing bust; — 1561. Joachim II. of Brandenburg; — Thomas Matthias (not Spon), minister of Joachim II.; — Wilhelm Becklin, of Magdeburg; — 1562. Prince Elector Augustus of Saxony; stone model; — (1562?). Princess Electress Anna of Saxony, née Princess of Denmark; stone model; a pendant to the previous; — Prince Elector Augustus of Saxony (illustrated); — Princess Anna of Saxony; bust l.; stone model; — The same; smaller; dated 1562; — 1562. Queen Dorothea of Denmark; stone model; — Undated. R. of medal with Danish arms; stone model in Nuremberg; — Wolfgang of Anhalt; stone model; — Joachim Ernest of Anhalt; — Markus Müller; stone model in Augsburg (illustrated); — 1563. Josef Graf and Margarethe Graf; — 1564.

Prince Elector Augustus of Saxony.

Markus Müller.

George II. of Liegnitz-Brieg (two varieties); — 1565. Georg Coelestinus, court preacher in Berlin; — Paulus Musculus, court preacher in Berlin (illustrated); — 1566. Balthasar Rodt and Margarethe Rodt; stone model; — Undated. Konrad Schreck and Anna

Paulus Musculus.

Schreck (illustrated). To these medals have to be added: 1564. Joachim II. of Brandenburg (Menadier 25), and on the ground of similarity of inscription: 1566. Duke William and Dorothea of Brunswick-Lüneburg (Fiala, Neu-Lüneburg, Pl. I, 1).

SCHUFTER, CUNRAT (Swiss). Mint-master at Basle, circ. 1342.

SCHUHMACHER, CASPAR (Swiss). Mint-warden at Lucerne 1737; died on 2. July 1748.

SCHULER, H. (Amer.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, by whom is the Peabody Medal, 1914 (issued by the Medallic Art Co, N. Y.).

SCHULTHEISS, JAKOB (Swiss). Mint-master at Basle, circ. 1620.

SCHULTZ, ANTON (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 407). Additional medals: Portrait-medal of Duchess Sophie Charlotte of Brunswick, 1684.

SCHULTZ, F. R. (Germ.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist; author of some Portrait-plaquettes of Prince George William Duke of Brunswick-Lüneburg, 1912, on the latter's death in a motor car accident.

SCHULTZ, OTTO (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 408). Additional productions: Marriage medal of Frederick Francis, Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin with Princess Alexandra of Brunswick, 5 and 2 Marks, 1904.

SCHWABE-SOTHERN, Miss E. H. MAUDE (Brit.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, residing in London. Exhibited at the Royal Academy, 1918: Case of Plaques.

SCHWAB, ANDRÉ PIERRE (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 410). This artist exhibited the following productions at the Paris Salon, 1912: La Lecture; — Les Aïeules; — Le laboureur qui trouve une médaille; — Au coin du feu: plaquettes in bronze; and seven Portraits; — 1913. Les Commères; — Le Chapelet; — "Alain le Pemp", rebouteur.

SCHWABE, HEINRICH (B.D.M., V, p. 411). Additional medals by this artist: Portrait-medallion of the German Empress, Augusta Victoria, undated; — Another, 1891 (issued by Lauer); — 7th Birthday of the German Crown Prince, 1889; — Portrait-plaquettes of the German Empress 1898, 1899; — Bayreuth Wagner Festival, 1886; — General Exhibition of Foodstuffs at Berlin, 1897; — Field Marshall Count v. Moltke (many varieties); — Prince Bismarck (many varieties), etc.

SCHWABE, NIKOLAUS (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 411). Additional productions: Coronation medal of Christian IV., 1597 (Lange 29 E); — Marriage medal of Christian IV., 1597 (Lange 29 F). Abraham von Nuis's successor was Nikolaus Schwabe. As Prof. Hauberg mentions, from documents, "Issenschnider Nikolaus Schwabe von Dresden" was appointed in 1596 by Christian IV of Denmark, as "Bildschnider" and "Contrafeiger". About 1600 he became Master of the Mint at Copenhagen and retired on 25. September 1629. His name occurs also as SCHWABIS and SCHWAB. The name SCHAUBEN (Vol. V, p. 376) is a mistake.

BIBLIOGRAPHY. — Dr. G. Habich, Die deutschen Medailleure des XVI. Jahrhunderts, Munich, 1916.

SCHWARTZ, ARNOLD (Germ.). Mint-master to Landgrave Ludwig V. of Hesse-Darmstadt 1627.

SCHWARZ, HANS (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 412). Dr. Habich (Die deutschen Medailleure des XVI. Jahrhunderts, 1916) has added important data to his former monograph on this Medallist. The activity of the artist had hitherto not been followed beyond 1526, his latest dated piece being thought to be the medal of the Prince Elector Louis V, Count Palatine. A fortunate discovery by F. F. Leitschuh (Kunstchronik 1911/12, no. 6) has shown that in the early thirties of the sixteenth century, Hans Schwarz is found in Paris in the circle of Jean Second (Johannes Secundus) and this fact enables Dr. Habich to ascribe to him several more medals of non-German personages; so the Portrait medallion of King Sigismund of Poland, 1527, of whom there exists the small medal illustrated here, and others (Gumowski, Medale Jagiellonow, Krakau, 1906; nos. 58-63); — King Christian I. of Denmark (Simonis, I, Pl. VI, 5) and model in wood with the erroneous legend CAROLVS. v. etc., in Nuremberg; — King Francis I. of France (Mitth. der B.N.G. 1911, Pl. E, 1) and another, with facing bust, Weimar; — King Henry VIII. of England; two sizes (Grueber, I, 32); — Charles Constable of Bourbon; — Jean Clouet; — Count Jan van Egmont; and Count Philip of Savoy.

Erman only knew of 53 medals by Schwarz. Dr. Habich has added 82 to the number. Connected with the Augsburg Reichstag Dr. Habich mentions 25 medals, dated 1517/19 and undated; of Nuremberg, 1519-20, 26 medals; Heidelberg and Worms, 1519/22, 29; Augsburg and Nuremberg, 1522/1527, 18; Undated medals, 31; and foreign medals, 12.

Vol. V, p. 419 read Sponheim for Spanheim in three references.

SCHWARTZ, Prof. STEPHAN (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 425). By this Medallist is also a Memorial medal of Prince George William, Duke of Brunswick and Lüneburg, 1912. This artist's work was represented in the Roger Marx Collection sold in Paris, June 1714, by two fine plaquettes: Elegy; 195 × 140 mill., and Solidarity; 75 × 53 mill.

Additional works by him: — 60th Birthday of Dr Franz Klein, jurisconsult of Vienna, 1914; — Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven; plaquette, 1907.

SCHWARTZE, JOHANN THEODOR (Germ.). Master-coiner at Stolberg, 1764.

SCHWATHE, HANS (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 431). To this artist are ascribed also: Portrait-plaquette of Schiller, facing; 1905; — The Kiss; a pretty badge; — The cruiser "Leon Gambetta" torpedoed by the U 5, 1914-1915; iron, 4 mill.; — The 30.5 Cm. Mortars, 1914-1915; iron, 40 mill.

SCHWEGERLE, HANS (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 431). Further works: Battle between Metz and the Vosges, 21. Aug. 1914; 34 mill. The artist modelled the Commemorative medal of the 90th Birthday of Prince Regent Luitpold of Bavaria, 1911, issued by the Bavarian Numismatic Society. — Count Ferdinand von Zeppelin, 1914-1915; 63 mill.; — Battle between Metz and the Vosges, 21 August 1914; Æ. 34 mill.

SCHWEIGER, GEORG (Germ.). A Nuremberg Gem-engraver of the middle years of the seventeenth century. He cut a portrait of Ferdinand III in 1643, as well as religious subjects (cf. J. Arneth, Sitzungsberichte der phil.-hist. Klasse der K. Akademie der Wissenschaften, Vienna, 1853, p. 641. — Dalton, Cat. of Engraved Gems, XLVII).

SCHWEIZER, J. OTTO (Amer.). Contemporary Sculptor, who exhibited the following medallic productions at the American Numismatic Society, 1923: General George Taylor, plaque; — The Artist's Mother, cast plaque, galvano gilt; — Swiss Relief Fund Memorial Tablet, cast plaque, bronze; — Charles E. Dana, struck medal, bronze gilt; — Morrison, plaque; — First Prize Singing Contest, Philadelphia, 1919, plaquette; — S. Weir Mitchell, cast plaque, bronze gilt; — Governor Martin S. Brumbaugh, struck medal, bronze; — Pennsylvania National Guard, cast medal, bronze, and another, struck, etc.

SCHWENZER, KARL (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 437). Additional medals by this Engraver: Portrait-medal of Field-Marshal Count Moltke, undated (74 mill.); — Alexander Humboldt, Gesellschaft für Erdkunde, Berlin; — Bismarck Medal; 74 mill. edited by B.H. Mayer, Pforzheim.

SCHWERDT, A. (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 439). Additional medals: Kiel Regattas, 1891.

SCHWERDTNER, CARL MARIA (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 439). By this artist is also a Box medal in steel, containing 6 medallions by S. Löffler printed in colours and commemorating events of the European War, 1914-1915; also: Archduke Eugene; Portrait-medal; 54 mill.; — General von Dankl; Æ. 65 mill.; — General H. Kövess-v. Kövessháza; Æ. 65 mill.; — Field Marshal Ignaz Trollmann; Æ. 65 mill.

SCHWERDTNER, JOHANN (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 441). Was still living in March 1913. Additional works by him: Dr Joseph Schindler of Graefenberg; — Dr Anton Drasche, of Vienna.

His signature J. WER is crossed by a sword.

SEARLE AND COMPANY (Brit.). A medal to commemorate the visit of King Edward the Seventh and Queen Alexandra to the City of London, in 1903, was issued by this firm.

SEATON, CHRISTOPHER (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 452). This Gem-engraver exhibited at the Society of Artists: 1760. St. Helen, from a picture of Guido; — Head of the late Viscount Bolinbroke; — Head of Mr. Pope, from a picture by Sir Godfrey Kneller; — Ditto from Antinous, from the bust; — A Sulphur of the Judgment of Hercules; — Head of Sir Isaac Newton, and a Cupid; — Sulphur of a Minerva; — 1761. A head of Hannibal; — Our Saviour and the Virgin, engraved from a bas-relievo; — A portrait of a Lady; — Jupiter and Leda; — 1762. Three impressions, 1. a lady's head, 2. the figure of Venus, 3. Jupiter and Leda; — 1766. A small frame, with emblematic figures.

SEBALD, MARTIN (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 453). There are medals signed by Sebald and Drentwett as early as 1857 and 1859.

SECOND, JEAN (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 453). Dr Simonis has ascribed in error to this artist, the medal of Johannes Dantiscus, Bishop of Culm, Charles V., and other medals of same work, which Dr Habich has now definitely proved to belong to CHRISTOPH WEIDITZ (q.v.).

An interesting article in connection with Jean Second has appeared in Revue belge de numismatique, 1914, pp. 140-180 (Victor de Munter, Jean Second et les Busleyden).

To Second must be ascribed, beside the Portrait-medal of Gilles Busleyden, another of Nicolas Busleyden, 1530, with bust to left, and legend: IMAGO NICOL. BVS. LI. AN. AETA. XXIII. PER IANVM SECVN- DVM; diam. 69 mill. Boxwood (Collⁿ of M. Paul Dansette, in Brussels).

SEEGER, FRANZISKA VON (Germ.). Contemporary Modeller, residing at Charlottenburg, by whom is a Portrait-plaquette of Prof. Adolf Brütt, Sculptor, 1911 (issued by Oertel, Berlin).

SEEL (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 456). Further interesting information concerning this family of artists may be culled in Karl Roll's

"Weitere Nachrichten über die Familie Seel" (Mitth. der Oesterr. Gesellschaft für Münz- und Medaillenkunde, 1912, p. 233, 263).

It would appear that the Seels (also SÖLL, SÖOL or SELL) originally came from the Tyrol. Peter Seel settled in Salzburg under the reign of the Archbishop Paris Count Lodron, 1632. He had six children, his eldest daughter being born before the artist went to Salzburg; his son, Paul, was born on 9 June 1642; the Grand Ducal Mint-master Melchior Feichtner stood him as godfather. In the year 1635 the Seal- and Gem-engraver was residing in the Tragassen Quarter. Peter and his son Paul were granted the right of citizenship of Salzburg on 24. May 1652. Mint records of 1631 show that in that year Peter Seel, a burgher of Linz, was one of the competitors for the appointment of Mint-engraver at Salzburg in room of Melchior Paz deceased; Johann Rudolf Sturm being 'Pfennigmeister' and Melchior Feichtner, Mint-master. Records of payments made to Peter Seel from 1650 to 1664 for dies and puncheons supplied are also preserved. Georg Pfründt was employed as Medallist at the Salzburg Mint in conjunction with Peter Seel, who died on 3. September 1669. He was succeeded by his son Paul, who had been working at the Mint since 1650.

Paul Seel was far superior to his father as an artist. He died on 14. November 1695. He was married three times, and had 20 children, most of whom died in infancy. His third wife survived him, and died on 5. April 1718.

Some of the best productions of Paul Seel as a Linc-engraver are described by Roll. But it is as a Die-engraver that the artist appears to have excelled. His medals comprise: Birth of Prince Palatine Joseph Clement, 1671; — Portrait-medal of Archbishop Max Gandolf Count Kuenburg (1668); — The same, as Cardinal (1686); — Archbishop John Ernest Count Thun (1687), and possibly also Charles, Count Lichtenstein, bishop of Olmütz, 1664-1695.

It is impossible to give here a list of the dies cut by Peter and Paul Seel, as they are very numerous, and I would refer to Roll's article above mentioned, which although it is most exhaustive is still incomplete.

SEFFNER, Prof. (Germ.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist of Leipzig, modelled Portrait-medals of Ferdinand Zirbel of Leipzig, 1913; — Dr Ferdinand Goetz, Leipzig, 1913, etc.

SEGER, E. (Germ.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist of Berlin. By him is a medal on the Centenary of 1813.

SEIDAN, Prof. WENZEL (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 463). Additional medals by this artist: Max von Weinzierl Medal, 1913.

SEIDEL, MAX (Amer.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist of St. Louis. His full signature occurs on a medal of Dr Geo. Engelmann, St. Louis, Semi-Centennial of St. Louis Academy of Medicine.

SEIDLITZ, JOHANN GEORG (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 467). By this Medallist is also a Marriage-medal of Duchess Wilhelmina Amalie of Brunswick, undated (1899).

SEIFERT (Austr.). Contemporary Medallist, whose signature occurs on a Centenary Plaque of the Tyrolian "Jäger" Regiment, 1816-1916; 80 × 66 mill.; and Badge of the 25. Austrian Army-Corps, 1914-1917; 40 × 30 mill.

SEIXAS, JOSÉ ISIDORO DE (Portug.). Goldsmith, domiciled at the Rua do Ouro, Lisbon. By him is a medal commemorating the Tercentenary of Camoens, 1880.

SELEUCUS (or SELEUCOS) (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 469). Besides the gem signed CEAEVK, with Bearded head of Hercules to r., in the Brit. Museum, already mentioned, there is another, in the same collection, showing a Head of Demetrius Poliorcetes to r., inscribed below the neck ΣΕΛΕ, and in front, ΚΑΡΠΟΝ. Both belong to the eighteenth century and the signatures are fictitious (Dalton, Cat. of Engraved Gems of the Post-classical periods in the British Museum, 1915, n° 1034).

SELIGMANN, HENRY (Germ.). Coin-dealer in Hanover; he edited in 1912 a Memorial medal of Prince George William, Duke of Brunswick-Lüneburg.

SELLAN Y GONZALEZ. GREGORIO (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 469). 1876-1893. Entered as apprentice at the Madrid Mint in 1852; in 1862. appointed Chief-engraver, and in 1876, Engraver general. Further medals by him: The Chilian War, 1866; — Prize medal of the National Exhibition, 1873; — Alfonso XII's visit to the Mint, 1875; — Inauguration of the Salamanca Railway, 1877; — Marriage of Alfonso XII. with Maria Cristina, 1879; — Mining Exhibition, Madrid, 1883; — The Queen Regent and the Cortes, 1885, etc. Vide Ant. Vives, o p. cit.

SALLENT (Span.). Medallist in Barcelona, in the early years of the nineteenth century. His signature occurs on a medal of 1802 commemorating the visit of King Charles IV and Queen Marie Louise to the Madrid Mint.

SELVI, B. (Ital.). Signature on a cast medal of P. Joseph Richa, 1878.

SEMENOF, A. (Russ.). Has signed a medal on the 50th Anniversary of the University of St. Petersburg, 1869.

SERANO, BERNARDO (Span.). Editor of medals, Bilbao. His name occurs on coronation medal of Alfonso XIII., 1902.

SERRES, GUILLAUME DE (French). Mint-master at Bayonne, 1554-7; letter S.

SÉVERIN, ARNOULD (Flem.). Mint-master at Namur, in conjunction with Jamar Dupont, 1407.

SEYSSES, AUGUSTE FÉLIX LÉONARD ANTOINE (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 486). At the Paris Salon 1912 this artist exhibited a plaque: Centenaire des Usines Dollfuss'-Noack; — 1920. A frame containing two Plaquettes.

SHARP, JOHN (B.D.M., Vol. V, 491). Symonds, "English Engravers of the Tudor and Stuart periods" states: "The earliest appointment in the reign of Henry VIII was on February 12, 1509-10, when John Sharp, who was afterwards knighted, received a grant as graver of the irons for gold and silver coins in the Tower, in the realm of England and in Calais, during pleasure, from Michaelmas then last. The office was to be exercised by himself or by a sufficient deputy, at a fee of £ 20 per annum. This occupant of the post can have influenced the work at the Tower in only a very slight degree, seeing that the dies in current use for the silver coinage were reproductions of his predecessors' skill, and that the types of the gold pieces were but little altered from those of previous rulers" (Num. Chron., 1913, p. 353).

SHAW, JAMES (Brit.). Wax Modeller; exhibited at the Royal Academy: 1776. Two portraits; — 1784. Portrait of a lady (Mrs. Shirley); — Portrait of a clergyman (Rev. Mr. Shaw); — 1786. Portrait of a gentleman; wax; — 1787. Mucius Scaevola; model in wax.

SHAW (Brit.). This name occurs on the reverse of the Paraguay bronze two Centesimos dated 1870.

SHEEN, ERNEST (Brit.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, residing in London. At the Royal Academy 1912 he exhibited Portrait-medallions of the late Cecil Rhodes, and the Rev. Father M. Hammond.

SHEPPARD, OLIVER (Brit.). This signature occurs on a medal of Dr David John Cunningham (1850-1909) of Edinburgh; 63 mill. Behind bust, incused: OLIVER SHEPPARD R.H.B. 1911.

SHIEL, RICHARD LALOR (Brit.). Master of the Royal Mint, London, from July, 1846, to December, 1850. It was during his tenure of office that the British Imperial "Godless" or "Graceless" silver florin was struck and issued for general currency. He was born in Bellevue House, in the county of Waterford, Ireland, August 16th, 1791, and died in Florence, Italy, on May 23rd, 1851.

HERACLIUS and H. CONSTANTINUS (610-641; 613-641).

Photiades (Catal., nos 277-278, pl. I), 1890, and Tolstoi (Monnaies byzant. (6), 1914, 679, pl. 50), both figure an interesting M of Alexandria of which I have seen 5 or 6 examples. I have now found the K coin of this issue which reads as follows:—

Obv. Two busts full face, inscription illegible.

Rev. K on l. $\begin{matrix} \text{A} \\ \text{N} \\ \text{N} \\ \text{O} \end{matrix}$, above +, on r. XIII.The year XIII agrees with Photiades, and with a specimen of the M belonging to Mr. Cunningham, who has furnished me with a cast. The exergue in my K has missed the flan.

HERACLIUS and H. CONSTANTINUS (610-641; 613-641).

Another interesting coin has come into my hands.

Obv. Two busts in robes, inscription blundered, but last part appears to read S [ΕΣΗ].Rev. K above +, on l. $\begin{matrix} \text{A} \\ \text{N} \\ \text{N} \\ \text{O} \end{matrix}$, on r. CI, below B, in ex. SE the tail of the bar being continued downward to form another S.This seems to represent the K of which the well-known SECHS M is figured by Wroth (pl. XXVI, f. 6).

CONSTANS II (641-668).

Obv. Standing figure with long robes, ΕΝ...ONIK, of the usual type.Rev. M above +, on l. $\begin{matrix} \text{A} \\ \text{N} \\ \text{N} \\ \text{O} \end{matrix}$, on r. CI, below B, in ex. NKI](the third and any subsequent letter being destroyed by a crush) The third letter probably an M.

The especial interest of this coin consists in the exergue for Nicomedia, which city is not supposed to have issued coins in this reign.

TRAVANCORE. RAMA VARMA. 1885-1924.

EIGHT CASH.

O. — An inverted conch shell encompassed by a plain circle. A branch of leaves and berries on the left, and another on the right, the lower portions of the branches being crossed below, and tied together by ribbon formed into a bow, with hanging parts. The whole within an ornamented rim.

R. — Upper legend: — CASH EIGHT. Lower legend in Teluga: — CASH EIGHT. An ornament on the left, and another on the right, between the legends. The monogram R V (Rama Varma) in ornamental capitals, encircled by a beaded circle. The whole within an ornamented rim.

E. — Plain.

The obverse of the coin bears the Royal device of the conch shell, which, in Hindu legend, was blown by Parsurama to call up the land of Malabar from out of the sea. The name Travancore is said to mean the place where the goddess of prosperity resides.

His Highness Sri Rama Varma, Maharajah of Travancore, who died on Thursday, August 7th, 1924, was born on September 25th, 1857, and succeeded on August 19th, 1885, under the singular "Marumak-kathayam" law whereby the succession follows the line of sisters and children by sisters of the ruler. Travancore, the southernmost Indian State, is somewhat smaller than Wales in area and has a population of more than four million people. The late Maharajah was a most enlightened ruler and the loving trust and confidence of his people was illustrated by the enthusiasm with which, in 1917, the Hindu ceremony of "Shashtyabdapurthi", or completion of the sixtieth year of life was celebrated. This was the first occasion on which such a celebration had been observed in Travancore since the middle of the eighteenth century.

SASSANIAN COINS. By Furdoonjee D.J. Paruck. — Large 4to. 536 pp. Text + LXVIII Plates, and Map in frontispiece. Bombay. The Times Press, 1924. Price £ 5.

Agents for Europe and America: Messrs Luzac & Co, 46 Great Russell St., London W.C.

May be obtained also direct from Spink & Son Ltd, 17 & 18 Piccadilly, W.I.

This sumptuous volume is another welcome addition to Oriental Numismatology, which of late has been making such strides.

Mr. Paruck realizing the need of a comprehensive Corpus of Sassanian coins, notwithstanding all the difficulties of the task, set to work, consulting every source of information, carefully collating the results of other independent investigations and above all gathering evidence from the coins themselves, thus aiming at accuracy in every detail. His reward of many years' painstaking labour is the standard work before us, which will win him also the gratitude of scholars and numismatists all over the world.

Well we remember the time when Longpérier's 'Essai sur les médailles des Rois perses de la Dynastie sassanide' (Paris, 1840) was practically the only reference book on the subject. Since that publication, many memoirs and essays have appeared in German, French and English numismatic and Oriental reviews, but the information was too scattered to be of use to the ordinary student. However Dr Mordtmann's, 'Erklärung der Münzen mit Pehlevi-legenden' (1854) greatly advanced our knowledge of the subject. In 1870, Dorn published a collection of plates of Sassanian coins, from the Bartholomaei Cabinet. A. de Markoff, in 1889, brought out a Catalogue of about 500 Sassanian coins in the Cabinet of the Institut des Langues orientales at St. Petersburg. Drouin, and more recently, J. de Morgan contributed valuable papers on the same subject. Our readers will recollect also that we published in 1921 Mr. W.H. Valentine's 'Sassanian Coins', which is a brief general guide, intended to assist the collector in identifying any Sassanian coins he may possess.

It is well-known that the coins form the most valuable source for the history and chronology of the Sassanian period, from circa A.D. 228 to the Arab conquest of Persia, A.D. 651. The type of the Sassanian coins which varies but little throughout its long history, was adopted from the coinage of Persia, and consists of the King's bust occupying the obverse and a portable fire altar on the reverse. In the course of time, from Sapor I's reign, we find the altar guarded on either side by ministering Mobeds, one of which is generally the King as the officiating pontiff.

"The headdresses of the Kings on the obverse have considerable significance in the attribution of the coins, and in most cases, even where the legends are hopelessly obscure or obliterated, we can place our specimens with the utmost certainty by the test of the form of the crown, which was officially adopted and usually retained throughout as the banner or special discriminatory emblem of the ruling monarch" (Thomas, p. 26). "Thus, during the reign of Ardeshir I, the characteristic Sassanian crown surmounted by a globe was introduced. Wings, as an appendage to the crown, first appear on the coinage of Bahram II (A.D. 276-263). Khusru II (A.D. 590-628) dispensed with the globe and adopted a peculiar form of winged headgear, which continued in use, without material change, to the end of the dynasty, and was copied by the Arab governors down to the closing years of the seventh century" (p. 21).

The inscriptions are in Pehlevi characters which Sylvestre de Sacy was the first to decipher (1793). The mint monograms do not appear on the drachms of the early rulers until Bahram IV. The usage of marking the regnal year on the drachms was established under Jamasp in 467, although a few coins are thus dated during the reign of Firoz I. Some of the adjuncts or symbols on the coins are connected with the Mithraic and Zoroastrian cults.

In the chapter on the 'History and Numismatics of the Sassanians' (pp. 73-122) Mr. Paruck gives us all the available information on the Sassanian rulers. The Chapter on Mints and Mint-monograms (pp. 123-264) is of particular importance. We find the names of no less than 148 mint-places registered.

Then follows a glossary of Names and Words used on Sassanian coins.

The descriptive Catalogue of Coins (pp. 305-498) comprises all the known coins and varieties of types including many unpublished ones.

The Sassanian Bibliography is listed in full.

Most valuable are the Plates, consisting of XXIII autotype plates, giving a faithful reproduction of the coins, XII Plates of Numismatic Pehlevi alphabet, legends, numerals in words and mint-monograms, and XXXII Plates of wood-block reproductions of Sassanian coins.

Mr. Paruck's work, which is dedicated to the memory of his beloved wife and co-worker Mithibaë, is a great achievement and will receive due recognition.

THE HISTORY OF MAGNA GRAECIA.

Professor Emmanuel Ciaceri of the University of Naples has published a most important and interesting first volume on Magna Graecia, to which all students of the beautiful coins of that region will give a hearty welcome. The first chapter on the ancient Greek writers from whose works we must glean our scanty knowledge of the origin of the cities of Magna Graecia is written in an interesting manner and throws light on many difficulties. Then follows a chapter on the various races and tribes which inhabited the region showing how the name Italia arose from the people of the gulf of Tarentum being called 'Ιταλῶτες'. The difficult question of the chronology of the foundation of the Greek Colonies is then treated clearly and thoroughly. Modern discoveries of Phœnician, Cretan and Minoan influences are noted and traditional Chronology is corrected by modern archaeological discoveries.

In this first volume the histories of the following cities are studied with great care:—

Tarentum, Metapontum, Sibaris, Crotona, Caulonia, Locri, Reggio, Terina, Lem, Velia, Posidonia and Naples, and the volume concludes with an account of Puglia and the Adriatic coast. Many will wish to read the work in an English translation, which would help those who are interested more in what Greek coins may teach us than in the mere collection of curios or works of ancient art.

BECKER THE COUNTERFEITER. By George F. Hill, Fellow of the British Academy. Part I with portrait and eight plates. Spink and Son Ltd., 17 Piccadilly, London. W. 1924. 72 pp. quarto, bound in boards, with linen back. 12 s. net.

It is a rare occurrence for a book on Numismatics to receive the compliment of a full page review in the popular press. This distinction, however, is given in The Illustrated London News of 31 January 1925. Naturally one would expect that a book which has attracted such notice would be something more than a treatise on coins; that it would have something of that human touch which makes its appeal beyond the select circle of students of Numismatics.

The fact that it is written by Dr. Hill, the Keeper of Coins and Medals at the British Museum, carries with it its own credentials for coin-collectors; and that its subject is Becker the Counterfeiter lifts it at once into the realm of universal interest. What did he counterfeit and why did he do it? Did he do it well and what did he get for doing it? Did Nemesis overtake him or did he somehow escape the net?

Every Numismatist of course knows Becker by name and that he counterfeited ancient coins. That he did it well his works bear witness and also the fact that "in many collections to this day there remain coins of his making masquerading as genuine".

While Dr. Hill disclaims that his book is a full dress biography it is nevertheless a concise account of Becker's career, well documented, but full of human interest from the first page to the last. He gives the tradition of the trick played on Becker which began the whole business, follows the ups and downs of his variegated fortunes, states the case for and against the question whether he intended to deceive, and explains his methods.

The feature of the book which will be of most interest to collectors is of course the list of Becker's productions, every one of which is illustrated in collotype. The present work deals only with Greek coins of which the number is 134.

A good many Museums and a few collectors possess a complete set of impressions of Becker's dies; and occasionally one meets with a copy of Pinder's book with its two plates. But now for the first time and for a few shillings the student may have before him a fully illustrated record of these famous productions.

The illustrations above will give an idea of the excellence of Becker's work, but the process used in the plates gives far better results.

We may be permitted to reproduce the last paragraph of the review in the Illustrated London News:

"So much to introduce Dr. Hill's most excellent book, which is issued that collectors may be in better position to identify Becker's work as a counterfeiter of ancient Greek coins, not only by means of the full list given, but with the aid of excellently reproduced illustrations from impressions struck off from the extant Becker dies; and in addition to list and plates, contains much new, informative, and interesting matter that will be read avidly by experts and by laymen. Dr Hill is to be congratulated on his "finds", and on his thoroughness; and so are the enterprising Messrs Spink, who are the publishers. There will be a compelling call for this and the promised companion volume on Becker's Roman counterfeits".

As we go to press the following notice reaches us and we beg to offer our hearty congratulations to Dr Hill :

The Paris Académie des Inscriptions et Belles Lettres has awarded the biennial Numismatic Prize of 1,000 francs to Mr. George Francis Hill, Keeper of the Coins and Medals Department in the British Museum, in recognition of his work on Becker, the engraver, and his work in general on Greek and Eastern numismatics. — Reuter.

THE ANTIQUARIAN QUARTERLY.

We have received a copy of the first number of a new magazine on general antiquities, entitled THE ANTIQUARIAN QUARTERLY. The magazine is artistically printed and contains well-illustrated articles on a wide range of subjects. These include Egyptian and Greek statuary, a Babylonian cylinder, Roman bronzes, scarabs, etc., as well as a useful causerie on recent excavations and museum acquisitions, and a most informing article on Treasure Trove, regarded from the legal stand-point of to-day. Though these articles are written with obvious attention to accuracy of detail, they are cast in a popular mould, the aim of the proprietors and editor being to interest specially the large class of collectors for whom no such magazine at present exists.

The magazine can be obtained of the Publishers, 5 to 7 King Street, St. James's S.W.I. at 2/9 post free, or 10/- per annum, post free.

Jan. 15 : Sir Charles Oman, K.B.C., M.P., LL.D., F.S.A., F.B.A. President, in the Chair.

Messrs. J.H. Chamberlain, C.C. Oman and M.S. Spink were elected Fellows of the Society.

Mr. H.P. Hall exhibited a series of seventeen first brass from Pertinax to Macrinus, and 3 bronze medallions of Florian and Maximianus Hercules all in remarkable condition; also two bronze Roman coins with altered reverses.

The President showed an aureus of Tiberius restored by Trajan; and Becker's imitation of Trajan's 'Horatius Cocles' denarius; and the new 100 para piece of the Turkish republic just issued.

Mr. Percy H. Webb brought a series of the originals of the coins later restored by Trajan.

Dr. Fairbairn showed a siege piece of Palma 1814.

Mr. F. A. Walters, F.S.A., showed a Richard III half groat mm. boar's head; and a groat of Henry IV of light coinage with HENRIC struck after RICARD; also a fine and well struck first brass of Postumus.

Lady Evans showed a silver gilt medal by Varin of Louis XIV and his mother.

Mr. W. H. Valentine showed four recent issues of Luxemburg (franc, 10 centimes), Denmark ($\frac{1}{2}$ krone) and Germany (5 pfennig).

Mr. Mattingly read a paper on the "Restored Coins of Trajan". This series is struck entirely in gold and silver, not in copper: the weights and style are of the age of Trajan, but the types are, or profess to be, those of an earlier time, restored by Trajan. For the Republican denarii the "restoration" is faithful down to small details, for the Imperial aurei, on the other hand, it is hardly more than nominal. The occasion of this issue was shown to be the calling in and the melting down of obsolete coinage by Trajan in the year A.D. 107. The reader discussed Mommsen's views of the measure and argued against him that there must have been a definite demonetization of some of the earlier coins. The motives that directed Trajan's advisers in making their choice of types to restore were then discussed. In addition to the general desire to represent Roman history as a whole, with Republic and Empire harmonized, considerations of history, legend, religion and family history were shown to have played a part. In the series of Imperial aurei, it was argued, a particular interpretation of history was offered and only those Emperors were admitted, whose memories were held in honour.

Sir Charles Oman drew attention to the deliberate inclusion among the Republican restorations of coins of Sulla and Pompey the Great: the Empire under Trajan could treat the old hatreds as dead. Tiberius appeared among the restored Emperors; Tacitus had not yet damned his memory in the "Annals".

BRITISH NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

Anniversary meeting, December 1st, 1924, for St. Andrew's Day, Sunday, November 30th. Mr. Grant R. Francis, President, in the Chair. Exhibitions. In illustration of Mr. Raymond Carlyon-Britton's paper:—

By Mr. F. A. Walters:—Edward IV. Groats; obverse with mint-mark, cross No. 1 of the paper, pierced, on the obverse, sun on the reverse. Angel, cross No. 3, obverse, only. Groat, cross No. 3, obverse and reverse. Henry VI, restored. Groats, obverse, cross No. 4, reverse, lys; cross No. 5, obverse and reverse. Edward IV. Groats; obverse, large annulet, reverse, No. 3; obverse, large annulet, reverse trefoil; obverse and reverse, small annulet; obverse, small annulet, reverse annulet enclosing pellet.

By Mr. R. C. Lockett:—Edward IV. Nobles, two varieties with mint-mark lys; angel of the period of the mint-mark cross fitchée. Henry VI. Angels, Bristol, reading HENRIC and HENRICVS, with mint-mark pierced cross. Half-angels, mint-mark lys, and lys after VI, queried to York; mint-mark, pierced cross. Half-groats of the Restoration coinage, plain cross, reading FR; pierced cross, reading FR, apparently an unrecorded variation.

General.

By Mr. R. M. Simon:—Two unusually clever forgeries of the series which passed the hammer until exposed by Mr. Lawrence in volumes II-IV of the Society's Journal.

By Mr. Ivo Pakenham:—Richard II. Half-groat struck from dies of Edward III on which that King's name had been altered to Richard's, obverse, ROGLIA and pellet over the crown; reverse, two saltires at the commencement of the inner legend, and unbarred N's in the word London.

By Miss Helen Farquhar:—One of the only two known portraits of Charles II struck in the form of an oval plaque of thin silver. The beauty of its art suggested the hand of John Roettiers. A collection of memorials of Charles I.

By Mr. Lionel L. Fletcher:—A Columbian farthing "muled" with the reverse of a coronation medalet of George IV. Bronze advertisement medal or token of "Harris, Surgeon, Redruth, 1840."

Mr. Raymond Carlyon-Britton contributed a short paper on The Sequence of mint-marks preceding, during, and succeeding the Restoration of Henry VI, in which one of his principal objects was to distinguish between the mint-mark cross fitchée with the stalk cut off, namely, his cross No. 3, and the "Restoration" cross, his cross No. 5. He brought evidence to prove that cross No. 3 was the last mint-mark of the first regnal period of Edward IV and that true coins bearing it all belonged to that time. The occurrence of this mint-mark in the form of "mules" during the Restoration of Henry VI, and upon a few of the earliest pieces of Edward IV's second regnal period was due to the use of old reverse dies. Also he explained that the angels of Edward's first period with the mint-mark cross No. 3 were those from which Henry VI copied the type of his angels.

He did not agree with the attribution to York of the very few angels known of Henry VI with mint-mark lys at the end of the reverse legend, which he contended were of the London mint. Should any product of the very small quantity of bullion coined during the period at York be found, it would, he thought, have the initial Q in the waves, corresponding with the B upon the Bristol pieces.

The President then read the Council's report.

THE JOURNAL.

The President, Mr. Grant R. Francis, has most kindly come to the assistance of the Editor, who has not yet sufficiently recovered from his accident to continue his duties, and has completed volume XVI, which is now being printed off for immediate distribution.

January 28th, 1925. Mr. Grant R. Francis, President, in the Chair. The President explained the position of the overdue volume of the Journal as indicated in the preceding notice.

Presentation to the Library. By the Deputy Master of the Mint:—The fifty-fourth Annual Report; for which a resolution of thanks was accorded.

Exhibitions and Papers. The Annual Exhibition of naval, military, and other British medals, and objects of similar interest, was held under the direction of Major W. J. Freer, and included the following:—

By Major Freer:—A series of thirty stars and medals ranging from the Battle of the Nile in 1798, to the New Zealand campaign of 1861-66, which will form the subject of a paper by him in volume XVII of the Journal.

By Mr. C. Winter:—A paper upon the Campaigns and Medals of the Honourable East India Company, which will be printed in the Journal; and on behalf of Mr. S. M. Spink he exhibited a very beautiful set of the medals of the Company in gold, silver-gilt, silver, bronze and tin for Seringapatam; and in silver for Egypt, 1801, the Isle of France, Java, Nepal and Ceylon.

By Mr. G. Hamilton-Smith:—Two groups of medals. 1. The gold medal of the East India Company struck at the Calcutta Mint, and the silver British medal awarded to Colonel Hugh Sutherland for Seringapatam. 2. The Order of the Bath, C.B.; the Guelphic Order, K.C.H.; the Seringapatam and Waterloo medals of Colonel Sir William Nicolary, Royal Staff Corps.

By Mr. Frank E. Burton:—Two parchment rolls, two helmets, a pair of epaulets, badge, gold and silver medals, and two prints of Thurland Hall, illustrative of a paper he read upon the history of the South Notts Yeomanry, which will appear in volume XVII of the Journal.

By Mr. Willoughby Gardner:—A paper upon two oval portrait-plaques in silver, by Simon Passe, of James I and Prince Charles, afterwards Charles I, which he exhibited. This paper also will be printed and illustrated in the Journal.

By Mr. Thomas G. Barnett:—A very interesting relic from the wrecked galleon S. Catarina, in the form of a gold finger ring with square bezel set on both the sides and shoulders with six table-cut rubies, and dated, inside, 1571. The ring was in perfect condition except that the central gem was missing.

KENT NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the Kent Numismatic Society was held at Maidstone Museum on Friday evening 9 January. Mr. W. H. Day presided, and others present included Messrs. H. Risch (hon. director), E. T. Clark (hon. secretary) and A. E. Horton (hon. financial secretary).

A greeting from France was received from Mr. J. Shirley-Fox, R.B.A., F.R.N.S., an honorary member, and Mr. Charles H. Rufus, Johannesburg, wrote that in his "Kent Messenger" he was interested in a report of the discussion on the origin of money at a meeting of the Society.

The officers were elected as follows: President, Mr. J. Shirley-Fox; vice-presidents, the Hon. H. A. Hannen, J.P., Messrs. R. Cooke, G. Foster Clark, J.P., J. Tomlin, G. E. Duveen, the Mayors of Canterbury, Maidstone, and Rochester; hon. director, Mr. H. Risch; hon. treasurer

Mr. W. Jacob; hon. curator, Mr. W. Savage, F.R.N.S.; hon. secretary, Mr. J. W. Bridge, M.S.R., F.R.M.S.; and hon. financial secretary, Mr. A. E. Horton. The Council was re-elected except that Mr. H. Munn takes the place of Mr. J. Hicks. An expression of gratitude was accorded the Hon. H. A. Hannen, J.P., for his long service as President, and Mr. Day, in proposing a vote of thanks to Mr. E.T. Clark, referred to his valuable work as hon. secretary, and also to his great interest in numismatics. In reply, Mr. Clark said all he had done had been a labour of love, and he had gained unique experience.

The annual report showed that the receipts totalled £18 5s., and there was a balance of £7 16s. 3d., whilst the assets were valued at £114 6s. 3d. Papers have been promised during the coming year on Gun Money, Heraldry, and Isle of Man coinage.

The President, Mr. Fox, wrote regretting his absence through being abroad, and stating that he had followed the work of the Society from its formation, and had been impressed by the keenness of its members. He sent the manuscript of his address, which was read by Mr. Day. Mr. Fox pointed out that it was not easy to analyse the fascination which the collecting of coins exercised upon the human mind. It usually attacked its victims quite young, as in his own case. To keep up the supply of young numismatists he had given coins to small boys who seemed likely to be interested and encouraged the young collectors. He predicted that one of the youths who had interested him would, before he was forty, become President of the Royal Society. The value of propaganda work of that kind he emphasised, as young blood was necessary to prosperity. One reason why coins were so attractive was that they were the most enduring objects made and used by man. They formed a complete chain from Greek art to the present day, and recorded perfectly the progress of art. Small boys should be catholic in their tastes, and grab at anything they could get. There was time for specialisation later. In connection with specializing, what a fine series of coins might be gathered together by a "Man of Kent" who concentrated on the Canterbury mint. Many of the coins, which dated from early Saxon to Henry VIII., would be rare. Though there were examples from two issues of Henry III., there were probably not more than a score all told, and others were hard to come by. Were he a Man of Kent he would take on the task, but being a man of Wessex he would stand aside in the hope that another member might attempt it (applause).

On the proposition of Dr. Edwards, the Clerk was asked to thank Mr. Fox for his address.

Mr. Bridge having written that he was unable to give his paper, Mr. Day submitted a paper on "Treasure Trove". He pointed out that, under Lord Halsbury's ruling, any treasure trove, gold or silver, plate or bullion, found in the earth or any other secret place, belonged to the Crown by right unless the owner was known. When found in the sea, or anything lost or abandoned, without trace of the owner, it belonged to the person who discovered it. Any person finding treasure must inform the Coroner of the district. Mr. Day wondered whether gold or silver which had been stolen was treasure trove, and contended that it was not. He then entertained his hearers by telling how old coins had been found at various times. A vote of thanks was passed on the motion of Mr. E. T. Clark.

The exhibits included a 5 Soldi of Napoleon, King of Italy 1810, and a Drilling of Humbert I. 1841 by Dr. A. Spencer Edwards; Elizabeth milled Sixpences, large and small busts, 1562, James I. 2s. 6d., 1624, Cromwell and Commonwealth Shillings, Commonwealth 2s. 6d., and George II. Shilling 1758, by Mr. A.E. Horton; Small Denominations of Elizabeth Silver, $\frac{1}{2}$ d., $\frac{3}{4}$ d., 1d., $1\frac{1}{2}$ d., 2d., 3d., 6d. and 1s., by Mr. E.T. Clark; and a set of Early Medical Staff Badges kindly presented by Mr. G. Elbourne.

The exhibit of paper currency in the Museum Cabinet was increased by a few highly interesting and possibly unique specimens, which include a Currency Note signed by General Gordon at Khartoum, and one signed by General Baden-Powell at Mafeking; a Sinn Fein cheque captured by the Irish Constabulary; two United States 5 Cent Bills; several One Pound Notes; a cheque on old Maidstone Banks; and an extraordinary Banknote for Fivepence issued by King's Bench.

A well-attended meeting took place on Friday evening, 13 Feb. 1925 at the Maidstone Museum, with Mr. W.H. Day in the chair. An interesting paper on "The King's Shilling" was read by Mr. E.T. Clark, illustrated by coins from his collection. The following coins were also exhibited: by Mr. J.W. Bridge, a heart-shaped 17th century tradesman's token of John Mansfeild, of Basingstoke, 1669, and a half-crown of Edward VI., 1551 (the first issue of a half-crown); Mr. W.H. Day, a Coorg (specimen) medal of 1837, and the Dutch postage stamps of the reign of William II., issued in 1852 and 1864, engraved by J. Wiener, the medallist; Mr. G.E. Dibley, a Greek obol in silver; Mr. A.E.

Horton, a James II. shilling of 1685, and a William and Mary sixpence of 1693 (these coins are the rarest shilling and sixpence in the British series); Rev. F.F. Key, a seventeenth century token of John Jeffery in Chattham, with cheese-knife. Mr. E.T. Clark was elected an honorary member as a mark of appreciation of the valuable services he had rendered as hon. secretary since the inception of the Society.

AUSTRALIAN NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

The ordinary meeting of the Society was held on Thursday, 18th September, 1924, at the B.M.A. Building, 30 Elizabeth Street, Sydney, at 8 p.m., the President (Dr. G.H. Abbott) in the Chair.

Apologies were received from Mr. Paynter and Miss Tietkins.

The following new members were elected: Mr. V. Read, Nashville, Q., and Miss Dorothy McLeod, Randwick.

Dr. G.H. Abbott read notes upon and exhibited a number of portrait coins of Roman Emperresses. All the specimens were in a state of excellent preservation, one (of Faustina II) was in gold and the remainder in silver or in bronze, some of the bronze coins being beautifully patinated. The emperresses represented on the coins included Livia, Faustina Senior, Faustina Junior, Lucilla, Crispina, Julia Domna, Otacilia and Salonina. As the doctor hopes to exhibit on a future occasion a more extensive collection of portrait coins of celebrated women, a detailed description of the specimens is not given.

Dr. Abbott also described and exhibited a number of very interesting coins of Judaea. Among the silver coins was one of the "thick" shekels about which G.F. Hill in his introduction to the B.M. Catalogue of the Coins of Palestine says:—"The date of the 'thick' shekel remains a question on which it is hardly possible to hold more than a 'wavering conjecture'; but the epigraphic argument has seemed weighty enough to depress the scale in favour of an attribution to the First Revolt". This remark of Hill is criticised by Forrer in the Numismatic Circular for August 1914, columns 505, 506. Other silver coins shown were a tetradrachm and some denarii of the second revolt, the denarii being restruck on coins of Rome. On one specimen part of the original Roman inscription was easily recognised. The bronze coins consisted of those of Alexander Jannaeus, Annius Rufus, Valerius Gratus, Pontius Pilate (two), Herod Agrippa I, First Revolt (two), Titus, Second Revolt (two). An interesting discussion followed the exhibition of the coins.

Special Exhibits.

Bronze Medal. Belfort Academical Institution, 1810, allotted to the Don of the School.

Bronze Medal. World's Columbian Exhibition, 1893, in Commemoration of the 400th Anniversary of the landing of Columbus, allotted to V. Christison. Mr. W.J. McNeill.

Roman Coins. B.C. 57-37.

— A.D. 72-96, in excellent state of preservation. Mr. D. Raymond.

Old book. The Numismatic Chronicle, 1839. Mr. F. Mills.

Paper money of Mexico. Mrs. Reynolds.

Three Indian Coins. Mr. F. Mills.

10 Cash. China Republic. Mr. D. Raymond.

The ordinary meeting of the Society was held on Thursday, 23rd October, 1924, at the B.M.A. Building, 30 Elizabeth Street, Sydney, at 8 p.m., the President (Dr. G. H. Abbott) in the Chair.

The report of the Victorian Numismatic Society was laid upon the table.

Dr. G.H. Abbott gave a very interesting description of a number of coins of Bactria.

The doctor, in his remarks, touched on the history of Bactria and pointed out the value of the bilingual inscriptions on the Bactrian coins in the translation of the inscriptions on certain monuments.

Dr. Abbott also exhibited a number of coins of Augustus.

Mr. E. Wills exhibited:

One Penny Token (Australia) John Allen of Kiama.

Pontefract 1/- 1646, CHAS. I.

Pattern $\frac{1}{2}$ and $\frac{1}{4}$, GEO. III, 1797, incuse, copper.

Bronze Proofs, 1d. and 2d. copper, 1797, incuse.

GEO. II. Young head, 2/6 rev. R and P, 1731.

— Young head, rev. Roses, 1739.

— Young head, plain edge, plain on rev. 1731.

— Old head, proof, 2/6, rev. plain, 1746.

- Old head, rev. Roses, 1743.
- Old head, Lima, rev. plain, 1745.
- Old head, rev. plain, 1751.

Mr. E. Wills, in exhibiting the 'John Allen' copper token, explained how he had been searching for this token for the past two years, and ultimately located it in London and then only after a good deal of negotiating was he able to secure this rare specimen. The John Allen, Central Stores, Kiama, N.S.W. token, was struck in 1855. There are supposed to be only two of them at present available, one in the Mitchell Library Sydney collection. It is suggested that these tokens were never placed in circulation. The President congratulated Mr. Wills on his good fortune in securing such a rarity.

Mr. W. J. McNeill exhibited:

Two square coins of India. 1 gold Mohur. 1 silver rupee and a gold Mohur Shah Jahan.

Mr. P. Larsen exhibited:

Coins of Augustus, First Roman Emperor, B.C. 27-A.D. 14.

Also as a Special exhibit:

A Tray of Ancient Chinese Coins.

THE NUMISMATIC SOCIETY OF VICTORIA.

The usual monthly meeting of the above society was held at 8 p.m. on Tuesday evening, November 11th, 1924, at 237 Collins Street, Melbourne, the president, P.C. Clements Esq., occupying the chair.

The usual routine business and correspondence having been attended to, the matter of the design for the proposed seal for the Society was brought forward, but after discussing several designs it was decided to leave the final decision till the December meeting.

Mr. Gardner then read some very interesting notes on silver coins of William and Mary.

The concluding meeting for 1924 of the above Society was held on Tuesday Evening, December 9th, at 237 Collins Street, Melbourne, the President, P.C. Clements Esq., occupying the chair.

A valuable donation by Mr. Le Souef, Deputy-Master of the Royal Mint, Melbourne, was handed to the Society, being 4 complete volumes of Spink's Numismatic Circular for 1913-1916 incl. This is one more of the many thoughtful and generous acts for which the Society is indebted to this gentleman, and the appreciation of the meeting was expressed by the President, and by a suitable letter of acknowledgment to be sent to the donor. The Society now possesses a full set of these excellent volumes from the date of its inception, the cost of binding them all having been kindly defrayed by the President. A rather rare token was exhibited by Mr. Schafer, that of Joseph Lane and Son, Bullion Dealers and Refiners. It appears that the wholesale disappearance of tokens is accounted for not only by the various acts passed for their suppression but in no small degree by the purity of the copper of which they were made rendering them particularly valuable for alloying. This latter fact is emphasised on the halfpenny issued by Joseph Lane and Son, Birmingham, which bears on the reverse "Refined Australian Copper for alloying sold". Obverse "Joseph Lane & Son, Bullion Dealers and refiners" round the edge, within the beaded rim; and "3 Great Charles Street, Birmingham" in 3 lines in the centre (see Andrews, Australian Tokens No. 673). This unusual specimen occasioned much interest among the members.

Mr. Fisher gave some very interesting notes concerning the James 1st shilling.

Mr. Clements referred in a few words to the "Godless Florin".

After much discussion, the matter of a design for a seal for the Society has been decided on, and will soon appear upon the Society's stationery and publications.

The President wished all members the "Compliments of the Season" which was heartily reciprocated by all present. After an enjoyable evening, the meeting closed.

In the early years of the Society it was the custom to dispense with the January meeting each year, but finding that it was the expressed desire of the members that there should be no break in the continuity of the monthly meetings, it was later decided to hold the January meeting as usual.

In spite of the holiday spirit in the air, the first meeting for 1925 held on January 13th at 237 Collins Street, Melbourne, was well attended; the President, Mr. P.C. Clements, occupying the chair.

Greetings were received from an old but active member at Mt. Gambier, S. Aust. — Mr. Crouch; and from Dr. Andrews of Sydney (our first President).

It was noted with regret that the Ex-President, Mr. Fisher, was unavoidably absent through ill health.

After the necessary business had been dealt with, an animated discussion ensued on an exhibit of countermarked tokens used in Victoria, shown by E.S. Anthony. Several of these are not recorded by either Chitty or Andrews.

VARIA.

COLLECTING AND COLLECTORS.

GREEK COINS: THE WEBER COLLECTION.

By George F. Hill.

Coin collectors, it has been said, like collectors of most other things, may be divided into two classes, those who collect for the sake of collecting, and those who are attracted by the beauty or antiquarian interest of the objects of their search, or are definitely accumulating materials for that classification which is the foundation of all science. Probably all collectors have something of both kinds in them, but as no one may be expected to admit that he belongs to the former class, we may perhaps ignore it here. Anyhow, Sir Hermann Weber, the great collector who formed the cabinet of Greek coins, of which the splendid catalogue is now being issued by Messrs. Spink in three volumes (the second now lies before us) had little of the merely acquisitive motive in forming his collection. As a physician he first became interested in the representations on coins of Aesculapius and other divinities of health. That led him on the other coins, and in the end he had made one of the most remarkable collections of its kind. Never content unless he had discovered what was to be known about his possessions, always ready to communicate his knowledge, especially to those who would make scientific use of it, he was the ideal collector.

Rare and Artistic.

It is not for everyone to rise to his level of acquisition; to do that one must be prepared, in the present state of the market, to pay on occasion anything from £500 to £1,000 for a great rarity that has also artistic merit. But even in the field of Greek numismatics — and Greek coins form the foundation on which all other branches of the study ought to rest — it is quite possible for the humble collector to get a great deal of pleasure for himself and incidentally, perhaps, add something to the sum of knowledge. If I were beginning as a collector I think I should start on Greek bronze. At the miscellaneous sales of the two leading London auctioneers those lots, the descriptions of which end in "and others", and which contain anything from 20 to 100 pieces, not infrequently reward the purchaser with one or two well-preserved coins and occasionally something quite out of the way. After a time one would begin to specialise on the bronze issues of, let us say, Sicily or the Greek cities of Southern Italy, or North-Western Asia Minor, which (before Roman times) are often of considerable artistic merit. There are other bronze series which have been more neglected by collectors, and of which long runs will not be found outside museums, such as Carthage or the Macedonian Kings. And the more neglected they have been, the better chance there is of some useful piece of information coming out of them.

"Anglo-Gallic" Gold Pieces.

But Greek coins are not everybody's choice. Roman coins are a well-worked field; as for English, if there are more coins to be looked for there are also more collectors already on the alert. Collectors whose holidays take them abroad, however, could find no better quarry than mediæval coins of Italy or France. The former will teach one more history than many text books, and history that is not merely local; the series of the French feudal lords have an interest perhaps more limited, but fascinating in its way, and the coins issued by our own kings for their French dominions are the only material records which it is possible for us in this country to possess of one of the most romantic periods in our history, not to mention the fact that the "Anglo-Gallic" gold coins of Edward III, and the Black Prince are among the most beautiful remains of Gothic minor art. The good mediæval, like the good Greek, coin is an epitome of the best features of the art of its age, and the great number of more or less accurately dated examples makes the study of one, as of the other, the very best training for the critical appreciation of the greater arts.

PALESTINE CURRENCY.

(FROM OUR JERUSALEM CORRESPONDENT.)

Since the British occupation Palestine has used Egyptian currency — the Egyptian pound or lira (of slightly higher value than the pound sterling), the piastre ($2\frac{1}{2}$ d.), and the millième ($\frac{1}{4}$ d.). But very soon it is to have a coinage of its own, based on the pound sterling, which, following the decimal system, will be divisible into 1,000 millièmes.

The names to be given to the new coins have proved a difficulty, since they must be such as shall be acceptable both to Jews and Arabs. The committee of learned Jews and Arabs, presided over by Sir Ronald Storrs, Governor of Jerusalem, met on January 26 to decide on suitable names. The two sides, after a good deal of discussion, agreed on most of the names to be used in Arabic and Hebrew, but failed to find a common name for the new millième. The Arabs wish to revive the word felus (pl. felas, which is ultimately derived from the Latin folius, money-bag) to denominate the coin of smallest value; the Jews insist on p'ruta, the "widow's mite" (λεπτόν) of St. Mark XII, 42.

For the rest agreement was found possible on names identical or sufficiently similar in the two languages. Thus, the pound will be dinār in both Arabic and Hebrew. The gold dinār was the principal coin in the Palestine Arab period following the reform of the coinage by Abd el-Melek (A.D. 696). The name will be rather baffling for those who have the New Testament in mind, for it is the word δυναρίον (which the English versions render "penny", though its value was nearer a shilling). The sheqel (for which Arabic has the equivalent mithqal) is to do duty for the 2s. piece; and 1s. will be mahatzith (half) sheqel in Hebrew and nuss (half) mithqal in Arabic. The equivalent of 6d. will be dirhem in Arabic and drakhmōn in Hebrew, both words being derived directly or indirectly from the Greek δραχμή. The name in Hebrew is not altogether suitable; the Jews in New Testament times had a coin, approximately of this value, called a zūz; but drakhmōn is being adopted for uniformity's sake, despite the fact that the name (for Jews) is painfully reminiscent of the bad days when "two drachmæ" was the toll inflicted by the Romans on every Jew, the fiscus Judaicus, towards the upkeep of the temple of Jupiter Capitolinus at Rome.

A further coin is to be struck of one-fifth the value of the dirhem. The Arabs have no name ready; the Jews propose simply Hamesh prutolh (five prutas). This coin is very important for the small purchaser. Hitherto the ordinary handy small coin, the "penny" of Palestine — the coin you pay for a newspaper or a packet of pipe-cleaners, or that you give to a beggar or even put in the collection — has been a piastre, $2\frac{1}{2}$ d. The new "fifth of 6d." coin will, so at least it is hoped, fulfil the duty of the piastre. Every visitor to Egypt and Palestine has discovered how rapidly his small change melts away owing to this habit of treating the piastre as if it were of no more value than the penny.

The new currency will probably come into use during the present year.

ROMAN REMAINS AT RICHBOROUGH.

MORE THAN 8,000 COINS FOUND.

Under the supervision of Mr. Walter Klein, who is now acting under instructions from the Office of Works, some interesting and important discoveries of Roman coins have been made during the excavation of the ruins of Richborough Castle, near Deal. It is officially stated that in all some 8,500 coins have been found within the last few weeks during the removal of the top soil to a depth of 3ft.

The coins were probably brought to Richborough for the payment of troops and other purposes. Many of the coins were issued by individuals who assumed the reins of government in the troubled period after the control of the central imperial authority had been relaxed. In some cases the coins were perhaps little more than tokens such as were issued by traders. The Anglo-Saxons in the earlier days of their occupation of Britain had little use for coinage, and the quantities of Roman coins left at Richborough were perhaps regarded by the new invaders as mere pieces of metal that it was not worth while troubling to remove.

An interesting point about the castle is the large amount of work of the fourth century in the period following the reign of Constantine the Great. A considerable proportion of the coins found are those of the sons of this Emperor. Hundreds of coins of Arcadius (A.D. 378-408), who, after the division of the Empire, was Emperor of the East, have been found. A gold coin discovered only a few days ago is the second gold coin of Arcadius to be found at Richborough, and both were in as fine condition as when issued from the mint. Handcuffs with human bones inside and a number of daggers and spear heads have also been found.

BRITISH MUSEUM ACQUISITIONS.

COIN STRUCK BY MENELAUS OF SALAMIS.

BABYLONIAN CYLINDER SEALS.

There is a fragrance of long-drawn-out, old world struggles in the acquisitions made on Saturday by the trustees of the British Museum, for they include a unique example of one of the small gold coins struck by Menelaus, King of Salamis, shortly before the island of Cyprus, after long efforts to maintain its independence, passed under the dominion of the Ptolemies.

The island lay on the trade route between Macedon and Syria, and also on that between Egypt and Syria, with the result that it long acted as a bone of contention between Macedonia and Egypt. The date of the coin must be in the neighbourhood of 310 B.C. because in 306 Menelaus was defeated by Demetrius Poliorcetes at the battle of Salamis, Cyprus eventually passing to Ptolemy in 294.

The coin is one of a selection made from the cabinet of a collector who was long resident in the island, and who got together a large number of small varieties of coins that are very useful from the standpoint of numismatics as a science and that come from such cities as Citium, Paphos, and Salamis. Other coins from the same collection include those struck by the Latin rulers of Cyprus and by the Genoese. Further there is an excessively rare silver gros, unfortunately in bad condition, struck by Catherine Cornaro (1474-89).

An electrum stater of Miletus of the Seventh Century B.C. that has been added to the Museum collection is unique, and completes, so far as is known, the whole of one issue, for the only coin that can be classed with it is already in the possession of the Museum. The coin is the ordinary Miletus type with the crouching lion on it. The collection also included some groups of bronze coins struck by the Ortuks in the Twelfth Century, which are remarkable as Mohammedan coins in containing on them human heads, furnishing numismatic evidence of outbreaks of unorthodoxy. Though the Persian coins of to-day now have on them representations of animals and even of human beings orthodox Mohammedan art is solely decorative and even the portrayal of animals is forbidden.

EGYPTIAN AMULETS.

This month's additions to the Egyptian Department include a number of early amulets from Egypt, several types of which were not previously in the national collection. They were purchased at the recent sale of the collection of Captain the Hon. Richard Bethell, who for many years specialised in that type of object. One of them, a prehistoric form of a cow's head, the emblem of the goddess Hathor, is of interest as being the earliest known example of the head of the goddess.

The amulets are made of amethyst and other hard stones with the eyes inlaid with shell. They include hippopotamus heads and figures of jasper and lapis with a number of little votive or prophylactic emblems, such as forms of human legs, arms, and hands. All of them present considerable interest, because of their age, particularly the prophylactic amulets of the sixth dynasty of about 2700 B.C. Others of a later date, which include a couple of little green agate tortoises, have been presented by Dr. Alan Gardiner.

The trustees have also purchased selections from a very fine collection of Babylonian cylinder seals of the early period which the owner has very generously ceded to the Museum for a sum probably very considerably below their market value. These are mostly of a mythological archaic pattern. Of the more interesting patterns one is not pierced, as is usual with cylinders, but has a crouching ox as a handle, while the scene shows a shepherd feeding his animals who are enclosed in a curious kind of fold, and another of a very great antiquity has a cult scene with a god standing on his sacred animal before two large jars.

Another group of seals has devices which do not appear to be native Babylonian, but to contain a sort of Maltese Cross which is generally associated with the Kassites who dwelt on the east of the Tigris. Somewhat later in date is a seal inscribed with the name of Shulgi, the celebrated king of the Third Dynasty of Ur, of about 2300. Lastly, mention may be made of a cylinder of unusual shape coming from Umma, and bearing the name of the local god.

PALLETES OF 4,000 B.C.

The Department is also enriched by a donation from Captain Bethell of two slate palletes of the pre-dynastic period, of about 4000 B.C., or earlier, on which are very interesting scratched sketches of antelopes and other animals. They constitute a remarkable example of prehistoric art. There is, too, a faience figure of a mouse or rat of the twelfth dynasty represented as sitting up in the act of eating. The figure is a brother to the three which were exhibited by the late Earl of Carnarvon at the Burlington Fine Arts Club.

An interesting addition to the Manuscript Department consists of a Missal written out in 1240 by a monk, of the Camaldese Order, of the name of Consilius, who was attached to the Monastery of Fonte Buono, founded by St. Romuald in about 1012. After a preamble in which he writes, "I Consilius have received from James, penitentiary of the Order, letters addressed to the Abbots named below in order that they might contribute from their funds for the making of this book", he goes on to state in detail the various items of expenditure involved. These include £ 14 in parchment, £ 17 for the writing, and £ 15 for the painter Marius. The volume is in fine large manuscript, and in addition to the illumination work contains an attractive drawing of the Annunciation.

NUMISMATICS AT THE MATINÉE.

It is not often that numismatics find their way on to the stage, but at the Grand Scout Matinée promoted by the Duchess of Rutland and the Countess of Huntingdon at Leicester last month, and given under the patronage of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, in a tableau representing "Universal Peace" as contributed to by the Boy Scouts, the central pedestal was inscribed PAX ORBIS TERRARVM, borrowed from a coin of the Emperor Otho, while a truly numismatic conception was that of Britannia (Miss Betty Manners) giving her hand to the Boy Scouts in the person of Mr. Hugh Goodacre, the Boy Scout Commissioner for Leicestershire and author of "The Bronze Coinage of the Late Roman Empire". It may also be noted that amongst the performers was the Hon. Eleanor Norton, a daughter of the well-known numismatist Lord Grantley.

This very interesting type has been the cause of very much numismatic discussion. One explanation of the obv. and rev. legends is that while the state was rent with discussions, revolutions and misfortunes of every kind, these pieces were struck by his enemies as a satire against Gallienus, whose weakness and little anxiety about public calamities caused him to be regarded as a woman; the crown of reeds was included as ridicule. The other explanation is that this piece was struck in honour of Gallienus, to whom he owed the restoration of Africa; and that the wreath worn by Gallienus is made of corn.

KEEPER OF COINS AND MEDALS, THE BRITISH MUSEUM.

Quarto, 72 pages, with portrait of Becker and 8 plates of Greek Coins, bound in boards, with linen back.

EDITION OF 300 COPIES ONLY.

Part II with plates of Roman and Mediaeval coins will follow but the biographical matter will not be repeated.

THE BRUUN COLLECTION OF COINS

This famous Collection, which embraces Saxon, English, Scottish and Continental series has been entrusted to us by the late Mr. L. E. Bruun's executors for cataloguing for auction sale.

The Catalogue has now been prepared and the sale will take place in London, 18-27 May next.

The Coins will be on view at our rooms (15 to 18 Piccadilly) up to Saturday 9th May and collectors will be able quietly to examine this beautiful collection at their leisure. A previous appointment would facilitate matters.

Commissions faithfully executed.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTICES OF MEDALLISTS

Coin, Gem, and Seal Engravers, Ancient and Modern, with References to their Works.

Most of the previous articles have been revised and republished in the "Biographical Dictionary of Medallists". The references to that work in these supplementary articles will be indicated by the letters "B.D.M." together with the number of the volume and its page.

SHREVE & CO. (Amer.). A firm of Engravers at San Francisco. Produced the medal presented to the American Numismatic Association by the Panama-Pacific Exposition officials in commemoration of the San Francisco Convention, 1915. The medal is illustrated in The Numismatist, 1915, p. 352.

SICARD (French). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist; author of a Portrait-plaquette of the naturalist Fabre; R. View of Serignan, etc.; 70 × 55 mill.

SICKEL, VALENTIN (Germ.). Mint-master at Ellrich, 1571.

SIDLO, F. (Aust.). Contemporary Engraver, whose signature occurs on a circular badge of the 4th Royal Hungarian Honved Inf. Reg., 1915-1916; 40 mill.; also on a rectangular Badge of the reinforced 215th Austro-Hungarian Division, 1917; 39 × 34 mill.

SIEGEL, JOHANN VIKTOR WILHELM (Germ.). Mint-master at Stolberg, 1808.

SIEGWART, H. (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 499). The letters H.S. occur on a Portrait-medallion, uniface, by this Medallist, of Albert von Haller, 1908.

SIEMERING, W. (Germ.). Contemporary Sculptor, by whom I have noticed a Portrait-plaquette of Prince William of Prussia and Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, on their Marriage, 1881.

SIEVERS, JULIUS (Germ.). This Engraver's signature occurs on a gold Prize medal of William IV.; R. INGENIO ET STUDIO; signed on truncation: SIEVERS.

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN
GENERAL LIBRARY

SIGISMUND III. King of Poland, is said to have been a Goldsmith and Die-engraver in his spare moments, and amongst his probable works is a Portrait-medal of Franz Bernhard Mniszek, Castellan of Neu-Sandez and Starost of Sansk († 1661). Cf. D. Hallama, Mitth. der Oest. Ges. für Münz- u. Medaillenkunde, 1913, p. 136.

SILCHER, FRIEDRICH (Amer.). Contemporary Sculptor; exhibited a cast plaquette, bronze gilt, at the American Numismatic Society, 1923.

SIMON (French). Moneyer at Crépy, under Mathieu d'Alsace, Count of Flanders, 1170-73.

SIMON, ABRAHAM (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 510). The medal (obv.) represented at top of p. 512 is that of Sir John Hotham, whereas the medal at bottom of p. 513 is that of John Campbell, Earl of Loudoun, 1645, the rev. of which is shown at top of p. 512.

SIMON, BARTHOLOMÄUS (Germ.). Mint-master at Ortenberg (Nassau-Dillenburg) circa 1622.

SIMON, DESIRÉ (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 514). Exhibited at the Paris Salon 1914 (Soc. des Art. fr.) a Portrait-medallion in patinated bronze of M^{lle} Germaine Simon.

SIMON, JEAN HENRI (B.D.M., Vol. V, 1912, p. 514). M. Alphonse de Witte has dedicated to this artist a very valuable and full monograph in 'La Gazette numismatique' XVI, 1912, pp. 1-16.

Chevalier Simon trained a number of pupils, but none of them attained great efficiency. François de Graeve of Ghent was perhaps the best.

SIMON, THOMAS (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 519). Additional works by this Engraver Charles II. Pattern Broad, Æ, 1660; obv. Laureated bust in armour and mantle to r. with collar of the garter; below, s; R. MAGNA OPERA DOMINI. 1660. Square shield, crowned; inscribed edge: VERGINIAM CAVEAS. TVTAMENE SOLVITO. ZONAM. THO. SIMON.

Pattern Broad of Charles II., Æ. 1660.

SINCK (or ZINCK), PIERRE (Flem.). Mint-master at Antwerp, 1587-1593.

SINIA, OSCAR (Belg.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist of Brussels, who in conjunction with Rosa Vaerwyck modelled the medal of the 'Vieille Flandre' at the International and Universal Exhibition of Ghent, 1913; 55 mill.

SIRLETTI (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 540). Also SIRLETTI.

SIX, MICHAEL (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 542). Not a Dutch, but a German Sculptor and Medallist. Author of a medal of the Universal Eucharistic Congress in Vienna, 1912; — also Heilige Klemens Maria Hofbauer; — The German Infantry; iron, 90 mill.; — Red Cross medal (Our Infantry), undated; iron, 90 mill.

SMAKAL (Bohem). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, residing at Prague. His signature occurs on a medal commemorating the Second International Pharmaceutical Exposition at Prague, 1896 (in Boston Medical Collⁿ).

SMEETS, THÉO (Belg.). Contemporary Sculptor of Liège, and the modeller of the Member's badge of the Liège Archaeological Institute (struck by A. Michaux).

SMET, JAN (Flem.). Mint-master at Maestricht, 1502-1516.

SMETH, LOUIS ANTOINE DE (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 552). Born at Brussels on 5th October 1883; — step-son and only pupil of J. Devreese.

Among his medallic productions I have noted: La Musique (Prize of the Société Hollando-Belge des Amis de la Médaille); — Badge of the Golf Club of Spa; — Commemorative medal of the Exhibitions of Roubaix and Turin; — Badge of the Royal Agricultural Society of Belgium; — Medal of the International and Universal Exhibition of Ghent; Section of Photography; — Portrait of the Engraver Leopold Wiener (Jeton of the Société Hollando-Belge des Amis de la Médaille); — Combined Portraits of T.M. Albert and Elizabeth, King and Queen of the Belgians (Medal struck at the Ghent Exhibition. Specimens were presented to their Majesties); — Portrait of the Sculptor Godefroid Devreese; — Portrait of Sir Horace Cecil Monro, Permanent Director of the Local Government Board; — Portrait of Oscar Engelbert, a Belgian manufacturer; — Portrait of Marthe De Smeth; — Belgian Red Cross Medal of Cap Ferrat Sanatorium; — Portrait of Gaekwar Fatchsing Rao of Baroda 1778-1789 (one of a series of nine Plaquettes of Rulers of Baroda, issued under the direction of M. H. Spielmann Esq., and modelled by various artists).

2. Fatchsing Rao Gaekwar I 1778-1789.
By L.A. de Smeth.

Beside these works, M. de Smeth has modelled many other Portrait-plaques, medals and pendants executed for Committees, Societies, etc.

M. Ed. Laloire in Médailles de Belgique, III, 1911, describes the following medals by this artist: Badge of the Comité des Fêtes de La Panne; — Jeune Nantaise; a pendant; 29 mill.; — Prize medalet for matches of the Spa Golf Club; 30 mill.; — Presentation medal to M. Edmond Peny by the town council of Morlanwelz-Mariemont; — La Musique; plaquette, 55 × 59 mill. (in commission for the Société Hollandaise-Belge des Amis de la Médaille d'Art); — Plaquette du Salon d'Art, organised by the Association belge de Photographie at Ghent Exhibition, 1913; — Plaquette, "La Reconnaissance"; 60 × 50 mill. (Fonson & Co); — Portrait of the medallist Godefroid Devreese, 1913; 82 × 120 mill.; — Souvenir of the Universal and International Exhibition at Ghent 1913 (struck in the Exhibition Buildings by the firm of Fonson & C^{ie}).

SMITH & HARTMANN (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 554). Additional medals: John Pintard, 1857; — Edwin Forrest; — John C. Fremont; — Medal of the Nassau Water Works, Water introduced in the city of Brooklyn, 1859, 34 mill.; obv. signed F.B.S. & H. and rev. F.B. SMITH AND HARTMANN.

SMITH, CHARLES W. (Brit.). Contemporary Sculptor and

Medallist, whose signature I have noticed on a Portrait-medallion, exhibited at the Royal Academy, 1915.

SMITH, F.A. (Brit.). Gem-engraver; exhibited at the Royal Academy: 1832. Hercules subduing the lion; an impression from an intaglio; — 1833. Shakespeare's seven ages; from the bas-relief by Mr. Behnes, an impression from an intaglio.

SMITH, JOACHIM (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 533). Won Premium of the Royal Society of Arts in 1758 for a Medallion Model in wax; Premium in 1761 for a Composition for Modelling Portraits in miniature. Dossie says that he practised his invention successfully for some years. Some of his models were reproduced by Wedgwood and by Tassie. (Sir H.T. Wood, Journal of the R. Society of Arts, 1912, p. 752.)

Smith exhibited at the Society of Artists from 1760 to 1783, and at the Free Society in 1761 and 1762.

SMITH, NATHANIEL (Brit.). Modeller; pupil of Roubiliac; assistant to Nollekens; was awarded Premiums in 1758, 1761 and 1762 for Modelling Figures in clay; Premiums in 1759 (two) for Drawings; Premium in 1760 for a Bas-Relief. (Sir H.T. Wood, Journal of the R. S. of Arts, 1912, p. 752.)

SMITH, THOMAS (Brit.). Seal-engraver, who in 1760 was awarded the Premium of the Royal Society of Arts for an engraved gem.

SMITH, THOMAS (or THEOPHILUS) (Brit.). Sculptor of the nineteenth century; exhibited various medallic works at the Royal Academy: 1828. Wax portrait of Peter M' Intosh, veteran Highlander; — Wax portrait of Mr. Samuel Joseph, Edinburgh; — 1829. Medallic portrait of Miss Mary Augusta Carr; — others of R. Evans, Esq., composer, etc.; — 1830. A medallic portrait in wax of J. Debelle, Esq., aged 90; — 1831. A post-mortem wax medallic portrait of the late Mrs. Depree; — Wax medallic portrait of a lady; — 1833. Posthumous medallic portrait of the late James Depree, Esq.; — 1834. Medallic post-mortem portraits of His late Majesty George IV and H.R.H. the Duke of York; — Medallic portrait of the lady of William Rhoads, Esq., of Chichester; — 1847. Medallic portrait of a friend; — Medallic portrait of the much lamented W. Clowes, Esq.; — 1850. Wax medallion post-mortem portrait of a lady; — Wax medallion portrait of Peter McLeod, Edinburgh; — 1877. William Poole, Esq.; medallion, etc.

SNEYERS, JEAN BAPTISTE (Flem.). Mint-master at Antwerp, 1702-1720(?). His son of same name, acted in the same capacity also from 1724 to 1728.

SOLA Y CAMATS, J. (Span.). Medal-engraver of Barcelona. The signature SOLA occurs on a Scholastic medal of Barcelona, 1908, and Prize medal of the Barcelona Exhibition, 1888; whereas the full signature is found on the following productions: Commemorative medal of the Inauguration of the Monument to Columbus, at Barcelona, 1888; — Fourth centenary of the Discovery of America, 1892; — Exhibition at Porto Rico, 1893; — The Law of 7. February 1885, etc.

BIBLIOGRAPHY. — Ant. Vives op. cit., p. 521.

SOLER Y FORCADA (Span.). Contemporary Sculptor, in the service of the School of Arts of Barcelona. His signature: S. FORCADA occurs on a medal dedicated to Ramon Battle, 1903. (Vives, n° 601.)

SOLDANI-BENZI, MASSIMILIANO (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 565). In Num. Chron., 1919, p. 63, Dr G.F. Hill has published a Portrait-medallion of William Villiers, Earl of Jersey, 1703, by this Medallist. It is signed M.S., and dated MDCCIII. "Like John Inglis, whose medal by Soldani is also dated 1703, Villiers must have been in Florence then, since Soldani is said not to have worked outside that city after 1686."

SOMMER, PHILIPP (Germ.). A clever Wood-carver, who is best known for his imitations of German Renaissance Portrait-models in box wood. Among these we find Wolfgang Babel; — Wolf Zwirlenn; — Konrad Schiesser.

SONNENSCHN, JOHANN VALENTIN (Germ.) 1749-1828. Sculptor and Modeller in wax and terra cotta, born at Stuttgart on 22. May 1749; was educated under the sculptor Bossi at the Academy of Arts there, and at the cost of the Duke of Württemberg. After working for some years in the service of Duke Charles, he went to Zurich, probably on the advice of Lavater, in 1775, remaining in that city until 1779, in which year he settled at Berne, where he died on 22. September 1828.

Besides numerous works of sculpture, portrait busts, statuettes, etc., Sonnenschein is also the author of models, plaquettes, and wax reliefs, many of which are still preserved in various public and private collections in Switzerland, including: Portrait-medallions in the National Museum at Zurich of Füssli, Joh. Jak. Breitinger, Joh. Conr. Gessner, Heinrich Hess, Joh. Caspar Lavater, Joh. Jak. Bodmer, and Salomon Gessner; all in terra cotta, 100 mill. diam.; Relief Portrait of a Schulthess of Bern in his official robes (Friedr. von Sinner?), dated 1780; terra cotta, 53×44 cm.; — Jupiter and Io, oval terra cotta relief; 55×70 cm.; — The Sacrifice of Iphigenia, oval terra cotta relief, 60×75 cm.; — Leda and the Swan, oval terra cotta relief, 38×48 cm.; — Eros and Psyche, oval terra cotta relief, 34×28 cm.; — Battle of Donnerbühl, oval terra cotta relief, 1811, 60×75 cm.; — Battle of Laupen, oval terra cotta relief, 60×75 cm.

For further information cf. O. Breitbart, Johann Valentin Sonnenschein, Anzeiger für Schweizerische Altertumskunde, 1911, p. 272 sq. where many of the works are illustrated; also H. Türler's article in Schweiz. Künstlerlexikon, III, p. 177.

SORRANDO, JEAN DE (French). Mint-master at Bayonne, 1557-1562

SORRANDO, JEAN DE (French). Mint-master at Bayonne, 1558-59: letter N; again 1559-61: eagle.

SOSSIONDO, AUGIER DE (French). Mint-master at Bayonne, 1592.

SOSTRATUS (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 576). Dalton (B.M. Cat. of Engraved Gems of the Post-classical Periods, 1915) describes the following xvi.-xviii. cent. gems in the National Collection bearing this fictitious signature: Onyx (n° 133), Satyr seated to front, holding a part of a Maenad's drapery; she stands with her back to the spectator, looking at him, with a thyrsus in her r. hand (CQCTPATII II); — Onyx (n° 189), Meleager and Atalanta (CQTPATOY); — Sard (n° 770), Victory with a sword, standing over a recumbent bull, which she is about to sacrifice (COCTIA-TOY); — Chalcedony (n° 792), Head of Medusa, to r. (CQCO-CAE).

SOTO, JOSÉ MARIA (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 577). Engraver to the Peruvian Mint, which office he was holding in 1821 on the Proclamation of Independence. His signature occurs on a Proclamation medal of Ferdinand VII, at Lima, 1808, and of another, at Talma, same date.

SOUNES, W. (Brit.). Medallist of the first half of the nineteenth century; an honorary exhibitor at the Royal Academy: 1820. A study; — 1832. Akenside; an impression from a medal die; — 1841. Impression from a medal die; and similar exhibits in 1846 and 1847.

SOSA, EDUARDO ESTANISLAU DE (Portug.). Medallist and Die-sinker of Lisbon. By him is a commemorative medal of the Tercentenary of Camoens, 1880, with bust copied from Freire's trial piece of 1830.

SOSA, JOSE DE (Portug.). Contemporary Medallist of Lisbon, by whom is a Commemorative medal of the Tercentenary of Camoens, commissioned by the Committee of Festivities at Porto, 1880 (signed: J. DE SOUZA).

SPANGENBERG, CHRISTIAN PHILIPP (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 580). To this Engraver Fiala ascribes tentatively a medal signed C.S. commemorating the Battle of Dettingen, 1743.

SPECKTER, O. (Germ.). Designer of a number of Hamburg medals, engraved by Wilkens and Lorenz, 1841, 1843 and 1863.

SPENCER, JOHN (Brit.). This name appears on the reverse of a medal commemorating the granting of a Charter of Incorporation to the town of Haslingden, Lancashire. It was struck in 1891, and he and his agents alone were authorised by the Incorporation Committee to sell it.

SPICER, NEHEMIAH (Brit.). Gem-engraver of the third quarter of the eighteenth century. He won Premiums of the Royal Society of Arts in 1762, 1763 and 1764, and a Gilt Palette in 1768 for Gem engraving. No further record of his work has been found. (Sir H. T. Wood, Journ. R.S. of Arts, 1912, p. 752.)

SPICER-SIMSON, THEODORE (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 600). At the Royal Academy, 1912, this artist exhibited two cases of medals, in gold and bronze.

The Roger Marx Collection, sold at the Hôtel Drouot, Paris, June 1914, included a Portrait-plaquette of Dr. Henry Frantz by him.

Further productions : Medal of the French Participation in the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, 1915; — American Foundation for French Wounded (1916); signed on obv. upon outer feather of left wing of spread eagle : SPICER-SIMSON; — Award Medal for Electrical Research; with bust of Charles Ira Young, 1912; 64 mill.; — Medal of the American Fund for French Wounded. One variety has on rev. NEW ENGLAND | BRANCH | —. — | AMERICAN | FUND | FOR | FRENCH WOUNDED. Another with same obverse has on rev. the American shield enclosed by laurel-wreath, and bearing 13 incused stars and 6 raised stripes. Upon it, incused : APRIL.VI.MCMXVII. Inscription : THAT.GOVERNMENT.BY.THE.PEOPLE.SHALL.NOT.PERISH. These medals had an extraordinary success; — The Entry of the United States into the World War, 1917, etc.

At the American Numismatic Society Exhibition, 1923, this Artist had two Portrait-medallions, cast, of Katherine Gabaudan, and William H. Schuchardt, 1919, and a Portrait, galvano gilt.

SPORRONG & CO. C.E. (Swed.). A workshop of brass-work, gilt and plated buttons, etc., founded in modest circumstances in the first half of the eighteenth century, greatly developed by C.E. Sporrong from 1842, gradually extended to medal-engraving, and reconstructed in 1892 under the style of C.E. Sporrong & Co, Stockholm. A great number of prize medals for exhibition, rifle and sporting societies, and most of the medals engraved by Per Engström have been issued from this establishment.

The firm has also executed the Finnish war medals, modelled by Prof. Gallen Kallela, and engraved by H. Gelotte :

Among artists who have modelled medals issued by Sporrong & Co. are Prof Eric Lindberg (R. of the medal for the Olympic Games at Stockholm, 1912), Sven Kulle, Otto Strandman, Svanti Nilsson, Eric R. Radberg (Prince Charles of Sweden, General Bildt, etc.), Prof. Gallen Kallela (General Mannerheim), etc., Carl Milles (Gustav Wasa Medal 1923), etc.

SPRANGER, BARTHOLOMAUS (Germ.). Caster and Modeller, 1546-1612. To him is attributed amongst others a plaque on the Adoration of Venus, sometimes ascribed to Antonio da Brescia. (Vide Cat. of Maurice Faure Collection, L. and L. Hamburger, Frankfort-on-M., 1913, no. 618).

SPRINGER, JOSEPH (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 645). By this Medallist I have seen also a badge, dated 1916, representing a column of army motor vans; 30×29 mill.

STABLER, HAROLD (Brit.). Sculptor and Medallist; won First Prize in Competition instituted by Sir Arthur Evans in 1916 for an artistic medal commemorating the Battle of Jutland Bank. In judging the Competitive models, Dr G.F. Hill, Keeper of the Department of Medals, British Museum, and Mr. Eric Maclagan, of Sculpture, Victoria and Albert Museum, acted as assessors with Sir Arthur Evans. The dies were engraved direct in steel.

Jutland Medal, by Stabler.

STACH, GEORG B. (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 648). This Engraver's signature S occurs also on a medal commemorating Frederick Duke of York's Visit to the Hartz mining district, 1781.

STADLER, C. (Germ.). A Circumcision medal in Messrs Merzbacher's Sale, January 1914, signed 1624 sc and ascribed to C. Stadler, shows on obv. Christ blessing the children.

STAEDELIN (or STEDELIN), KARL DAVID (Swiss). Gold and Silver-smith, Mint-master, son of Anton David S., born at Steinen (canton Schwytz) on 16. January 1783, died on 17. April 1843. In 1805 he was Mint-master at Aarau and 1820 officiated in a similar capacity at Lucerne.

STAMPFER, JAKOB (B.D.M., Vol. V, p. 652). Dr Emil Hahn, assistant-keeper of coins and medals at the Swiss National Museum has recently published an exhaustive monograph of this artist (in Mitteilungen der Antiquarischen Gesellschaft in Zurich, Bd. XXVIII, Heft I) from which much new and valuable information may be culled. I must refer my readers to the work itself for further details concerning the life and artistic activity of Stampfer, and will content myself here with adding a revised list of medallic works, compiled from sources which were accessible to Dr Hahn:—

Haller of Zurich, remarkable for their delicate execution; a number of varieties described by Dr Hahn.

Of the above works, the following nos are signed HS 2, 3, 4, 8, 10, 12, 13, 15, 17, 19, 22, 23, 27 and 28.

The following medals, which have been attributed to Stampfer by various authors, are either not by him or ascribed to him without sufficient ground: — 1540. Hans Offenbeck, Regensburg; 32 mill.; — 1535. Berchtold von Haller; 52 mill.; — 1552. Wilhelm Froehlich; 43.6 mill. (Dict., V, p. 655); — Undated. William Farel; — 1566. Heinrich Bullinger; R. VENI. INEBRIEMVS. etc.; — 1566. Medal of the city of St. Gall with Arms; 41.3 mill. (Dict., V, p. 658); — 1567. Josias Simler, theologian and historian of Zurich, 1530-1562; 35.4 mill.; silver, cast and chased.

By Jakob Stampfer are also: 1. 1566. Large silver Seal of the city of St. Gall (Hahn VIII, 1); — 2. The artist's own private seal, in use from 1555 (Hahn VIII, 2); — 3. Seal of Jacob Wirtz; 32 mill. (Hahn VIII, 3); — 4. Seal of Hans Thoman Wirz; 32 mill. (Hahn VIII, 4); — 5. Seal of Jörg Schwitzer; 33 mill. (Hahn VIII, 5); — 6. Seal of Georg Rubli (Hahn VIII, 6); — 7. Seal of Burgo-master Bernhart von Cham (Hahn VIII, 7); — 8. Seal of Christoffel Murer (Hahn VIII, 8); — 9. Seal of Hans Lux Escher; 34 mill. (Hahn VIII, 9).

It is interesting to follow in Dr Hahn's monograph the life of Jakob Stampfer as Warden of the Zurich Mint, member of the guild of goldsmiths, judge, and bailiff. As a Medallist, we may compare his style with that of Ludwig Krug of Nuremberg. Peter Flötner and F. Hagenauer also influenced his art. Had the artist travelled abroad and looked for orders from foreign countries he might have won as much fame as his contemporaries Hagenauer, Weiditz and the great German Medallists of the Renaissance period.

medallion, silver; — 1901. Portrait-medallion. Besides these medallions, numerous works in metal.

STEFANO (Ital.). A Milanese Gem-engraver of the sixteenth century, mentioned by Agostino del Riccio.

STEIDLE, A. (Germ.). Contemporary Portraitist and Medallist, residing in Stuttgart. Author of Portrait-medallions in bronze. Dr F. Parkes Weber has seen one, dated 1911, of Stadtpfarrer Martin, of Baden-Baden.

STEPHANUS HOLLANDICUS. Vide STEVEN VAN HERWIJCK (B. D. M., Vol. II, p. 530; V, p. 674; VII (Suppl.), p. 445 sqq.).

STERNBERG (Roum.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, residing at Jassy. His full signature occurs on a Portrait-medal of Dr K. Lippe of Jassy (Roumania); with Zionist-Hebrew inscription upon reverse.

STETTNER, JOHANN THOMAS (B. D. M., Vol. V, p. 683). From Mr. Gebert of Nuremberg I have obtained the following additional information, which corrects and completes what I have already written on this Engraver.

The artist died on 27. July 1872, nearly eighty-seven years old, at Triesdorf near Ansbach, where he is buried.

His coin-dies comprise: A. signed: Treble, Double, and single Ducat 1806; Half Ducat-Klippe undated (1806). — B. Unsigned: 6, 3 and 1 Kreuzer; Silver Pfennige 1806 and 1807, several varieties. All these coins were struck at the Nuremberg Mint.

By him are the following medals: 1806. Nuremberg incorporated into Bavaria; — Undated (1807). Box Medal (Schraubmedaille), Wittelsbach 2466; — 1807. Box medal, Wittelsb. 2470; — Undated (1809). Box Medal, Bransen I, 893; — 1811. Proclamation of the House of Orange (2 var.); — 1813. Box Medal, Wittelsb. 2494; — Box Medal, Victories of Napoleon I. until 1814; — 1813. Proclamation jeton of the House of Orange in Amsterdam; — Jeton on the Battle of Leipzig; — Undated (1814). Box Medal, Prince Wrede; — Undated (1814). Box medal Pope Pio VII (his captivity in Paris and return to Rome); — 1814. Jeton, Battle near Brienne; — Jeton, The Allies entering Paris; — 1816/17. Jetons on the Great Famine (about seven signed varieties, besides which are also a number of unsigned imitations); — Box Medal, The Great Famine and Good Harvest; — 1817. Medal on the Jubilee of the Reformation (unsigned); — Another, similar (Box Medal); — 1819. The Bavarian Diet, Box Medal (Witt. 2514); — 1823. Medal on the Marriage of Crown Prince Frederick William of Prussia (Witt. 2813); — 1824. Medal on the Jubilee of Reign of King Max Joseph of Bavaria (Witt. 2526); — Undated (1826). Prize Medal of the Nuremberg National Festival Committee; — 1828. Medal on the Tercentenary of Albrecht Dürer; — 1830. Medal on the Tercentenary of the Augsburg Confession (with busts of Luther and Melancthon); — 1840. Medal on the Inauguration of the Albrecht-Dürer Monument at Nuremberg; — Undated (1840). Portrait-medal of Crown Prince Maximilian of Bavaria (Witt. 2840); — Undated (1842). Marriage of Crown Prince Maximilian of Bavaria (12. October 1842), Witt. 2841; — 1841. Silver Schützenzeichen der Schützenmeister der Haupt = Schützengesellschaft Nürnberg.

Stettner engraved all these dies for Lauer, at whose works they were struck. There were no other Die-sinking Works in Nuremberg at the time, and even Lauer's were then very small.

STEVENS, ALFRED (Brit.). 1818-1875. Artist; son of a house-painter; enabled to study art in Italy, 1833-42, by private liberality; was employed by Thorwaldsen at Rome, 1841-2; teacher in School of Design, London, 1845-7; employed by Hoole and Co. of Sheffield; gained first prize for designs in metal-work at the 1851 Exhibition; executed Wellington monument at St. Paul's Cathedral (unfinished); designed vases and lions at British Museum (Dict. Nat. Biog., LIV, 217).

Mr A. E. Knight, in reviewing Vol. V of the Dictionary, points to my omission of Stevens's name, and says: "Stevens is surely the foremost English sculptor of modern times — perhaps of any period — and his medallion work, though rare, is at once the envy and admiration of his artist contemporaries. A wax model, for the reverse of the National medal for the Department of Science and Art, is one of the most valued treasures of the South Kensington Museum, where also is deposited the plaster cast of his beautiful design for the Local Medal of the same Department". (The Connoisseur, XXXV, 147).

STEVENSON, JAMES A. (Brit.). Contemporary Sculptor of London; exhibited at the Royal Academy, 1916, a Portrait-relief in bronze of Henry Tanner, Esq.

STUART JAMES (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 702). In rectification of my previous notes concerning this artist, I am now able to supply the following information, from Sir Sidney Lee's Dictionary of National Biography, LV, 86 :

James Stuart, painter and architect (1713-1788); known as 'Athenian Stuart'; originally employed in painting fans for Lewis Goupy; visited Rome, 1741, and Greece, 1751, with Nicholas Revett, the result of their expedition to Greece being published in 'The Antiquities of Athens', 1762, which led to the introduction of Greek architecture in London, Lord Anson's house in St. James's Square, built by Stuart, being perhaps the first of that style; he was a fellow of the Royal Society, and a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries, also a member of the Dilettanti Society; architect and authority on classical art.

We read also in 'Medallic Illustrations of the History of Great Britain and Ireland', Plate CLXXVII, letterpress: "In 1754 a number of persons established themselves into a Society for the encouragement of Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce, and in 1756 it was proposed that medals of gold, silver and copper (with proper devices) should be occasionally bestowed by the Society as a token and honour for services connected with the promotion of Commerce, Manufacture and the Arts. In 1758 Richard Yeo submitted two gold medals, one of the value of £10.10.0, the other of £8.10.0. These were not accepted, and James Stuart was requested to furnish other designs, which he did. Thomas Pingo received the commission to make the dies, whilst Edward Pinchbeck furnished the gold and silver of which the medals were to be struck. The value of the gold medal was not to be less than five nor to exceed eight guineas. Pingo was paid eighty guineas for cutting the dies and puncheons. Stuart was the first to receive a medal in gold for 'designing the medal'. James Stuart above mentioned, painter and architect, known as 'Athenian Stuart', is supposed to have been the author of the numerous clever copies of medals of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries relating to the defeat of the Armada, and of the prominent statesmen and others of the time of the Commonwealth, more especially the portrait medals by Abraham and Thomas Simon."

UN CHIROGRAFO DI CLEMENTE VIII

E LA MEDAGLIA DEL GIOVEDÌ SANTO.

Nella Biblioteca del defunto Conte Nicolò Papadopoli Aldobrandini esiste un breve documento acquistato perchè portante la firma autografa del Pontefice Clemente VIII che, pur essendo nato a Fano¹, era della Famiglia Aldobrandini di Firenze, all'estinguersi della quale ne assunsero il cognome i Conti Papadopoli che ne discendevano per linea materna.

Consta di due carte di mm. 280×210: la prima carta è scritta per 10 linee sul recto, mentre sul tergo della seconda c'è la seguente annotazione: Marzo 1600 / Clemente 8° suo Chirog.º orig.º / diretto a Mons.^r Cerasio Thes.^{re} gnale / che facesse pagare a Giorgio Rancetti / s.^{di} 100 mta p. le medaglie d'oro / et argento che doueva distribuire / alli 12 poveri et altri nel / Giovedì santo.

Il testo, poco più lungo del titolo, suona così:

Mons.^{re} Cerasio nos. Thes. Gnale. Ordinerete a Vin. Giustiniani nos. dep.º / gnale, che paghi a Giorgio Rancetto scudi cento di moneta q^{li} seli / fanno pagare p. le medaglie d'oro, et d'argento, ch'egli deue fare / da destribuirsi da noi alli dodici poveri, et ad altri, nella solennità / dl pross.^{mo} Giovedì S.^{to} et così pagati uogliamo gli siano fatti buoni ne / suoi conti dalla nos. S. Vin. Giustiniani V. S. sarà contenta essequir quanto ne / sop.^{to} / ordine di S. B^{ne} si contiene. Di casa q. di di Marzo 1600 l Tib.^s Cesarius thes.^s Gen.^s

Il giorno è rimasto in bianco tanto nel chirografo pontificio che nell'ordine del Tesoriere, ma è anteriore al 28 Marzo in cui nel 1600 cadeva il Giovedì Santo.

Dal nome del Pontefice a quello del Tesoriere e del Depositario Generale e dell'artista Giorgio Rancetti, questo documento non ci dice nulla che non sia già conosciuto. Però ha la sua lieve importanza in quanto serve a chiarire un punto che parrebbe ancora controverso, quello cioè dell'epoca in cui si cominciarono a coniare le medaglie che si solevano distribuire dal Papa il Giovedì Santo ai dodici poveri ai quali, seguendo l'esempio del Redentore, egli lavava i piedi post missarum solemniam.

Il Martinori nella sua recente opera Annali della Zecca di Roma, dice testualmente così: "Nella Pasqua dell'anno 1617 Paolo V fece coniare una medaglia da distribuire il Giovedì Santo, durante la funzione della lavanda dei piedi. È la prima di tal genere che in seguito non si tralasciò più di coniare per quella cerimonia²". Non so come al Martinori sia sfuggita questa affermazione così recisa sulla priorità della medaglia di Paolo V. Il Bonanni³ nel descrivere la medaglia n. XXXIII di Pio V che porta al rovescio la figurazione del Cristo che lava i piedi ai discepoli, discorre a lungo della cerimonia della lavanda dei piedi, della sua origine e delle formalità che l'accompagnavano fra le quali il dono di due aurei o doppio aureo e di due argentei o doppio giulio a ciascuno dei dodici poveri, dono che fu poi sostituito da quello di una medaglia d'oro e una di argento di pari valore. Dopo di questa ne descrive un'altra d'Innocenzo IX collo stesso rovescio e la leggenda: TV DOMINVS ET MAGISTER, osservando però che siccome questo Papa fu eletto il 29 ottobre e morì il 30 Dicembre del 1591, non potè fare la lavanda dei piedi poichè il Giovedì Santo cade nel mese di Marzo o in quello d'Aprile : si tratta dunque di medaglia alla quale fu apposto il rovescio di un altro Pontefice. Proseguendo ne descrive una di seguire questa nota : "Conosciamo esemplari di questo scudo di Perugia in oro, argento, mistura, rame e piombo, non possiamo credere che appartengano tutti all'emissione ufficiale, poichè il valore segnato corrisponde soltanto all'esemplare di argento : gli altri quindi rappresentano saggi o prove, ma stante la coniazione frettolosa e tumultuaria di queste monete, che ci narra il Cinagli (402 nota 2), non è ammissibile che se ne facessero tante svariate prove, tra cui alcune in oro. E pertanto da credersi che il conio non sia stato spezzato, volendo ammettere come certo il racconto della coniazione, e che con esso in appresso si siano battuti esemplari nei vari metalli⁴". La nota che ho riportata testualmente si appoggia, pur non prestandovi intera fede, sul racconto del Cinagli. Ora tale racconto, dopo i documenti già posti in luce⁵, va relegato fra le non poche leggende cui diede origine il vertiginoso

In Trésor de Numismatique et de Glyptique, Médailles des Papes, Tav. VI, 2, è riportata anche una Medaglia di Leone X col rovescio di Gesù che lava i piedi a un Apostolo e la leggenda: Exemplum dedi vobis — Tu Dominus et Magister. La descrissero in seguito l'ARMAND, Les Médailleurs Italiens, II, p. 114, 28 e il MARTINORI, op. cit., VII, p. 23.

Fac-simile della fede di battesimo di Clemente VIII, dal Libro dei battezzati di quell'epoca esistente nella Chiesa Cattedrale di Fano.

Clemente VIII dell'anno V del Pontificato con la leggenda TV DOMINE ET MAGISTER, diversa dunque e anteriore a quella di cui è oggetto il presente chirografo datato nell'anno nono, poichè Clemente VIII fu eletto nel mese di gennaio del 1592. Finalmente descrive quella di Paolo V citata dal Martinori, il quale aveva riportato anche tutte le altre¹. Un altro vecchio scrittore che si occupò di medaglie pontificie, il Venuti² nel descrivere la medaglia di Paolo V per la lavanda dei piedi con l'anno XIV del Pontificato, aveva osservato che il rovescio mostrava di essere anteriore a quel tempo non solo ma aggiungeva di averne veduta un'altra con l'anno I del 1606.

Dunque il nostro documento, pur non dicendo nulla di nuovo, viene a confermare quanto avevano detto e osservato quei vecchi scrittori.

Il fatto poi che di queste medaglie non rimangano che pochi rarissimi esemplari si spiega facilmente pensando che il numero era assai ristretto e per di più venivano destinate a povera gente cui premeva convertirle subito in moneta corrente.

La rappresentazione del rovescio, Cristo che lava i piedi agli Apostoli, pur variando per il numero e la disposizione delle figure, si conserva immutata fino a quelle di Pio IX di cui ci diede notizia il compianto Mons. Salvatore Ferraro³.

Il giorno 11 agghiacciatore dell'anno VII° (1 Dicembre 1798) usciva il Decreto seguente⁶.

Libertà REPUBBLICA FRANCESE Uguaglianza

Perugia li 11 Agghiacciatore (Glaciale) anno 7° Repub°.

I Commissari del Direttorio esecutivo della Repubblica Francese inviati nella Repubblica Romana, Decretano ciò che segue :

Art. 1. Provvisoriamente, e fino a che non sia decretato altrimenti, il Consolato è autorizzato a far coniare nella Zecca di questa Città, delle monete dette le Madonnine, con tutte le materie, che sono proprie di questa specie di Moneta, le quali esistono, o potranno provvedersi dal medesimo.

Art. 2. Egli sarà egualmente autorizzato a far coniare coll'argenterie delle Chiese esistenti nelle Casse dei diversi Questori, o che vi saranno versate, dei Scudi da dieci paoli, con il conio designato qui appresso.

Art. 3. Lo Scudo coniato in esecuzione dell'articolo precedente, avrà per impronta da una parte un'Aquila colle ali spiegate, tenendo un fulmine ne' suoi artigli, e un ramo di oliva nel rostro, col motto Repubblica Romana; dall'altra parte vi sarà scolpita una corona di quercia, nel mezzo della quale vi sarà scritto Scudo, nel contorno si leggerà Perugia Anno 7.

Art. 4. È permesso a qualunque proprietario di materie di Argento il farne coniare scudi, secondo il conio sopradescritto. I proprietari ne riceveranno il valore in scudi effettivi a titolo legale senza alcuna detrazione.

Art. 5. Tanto la fabbricazione delle Madonnine, quanto quella dei Scudi si farà sotto la direzione, o soprintendenza immediata del Ministro delle Finanze.

Art. 6. Le specie coniate in esecuzione del 1° e 2° articolo saranno versate nella Cassa della Questura del Dipartimento del Trasimeno, che fa le veci della Gran Questura.

Art. 7. Il Questore del Trasimeno invierà alla Commissione

Per contro il 9 Piovoso dello stesso Anno settimo (28 Gennaio 1799) veniva emanato quest'altro Decreto :

In Nome della Repubblica Romana una e indivisibile.

Estratto dai Registri del Consolato nella seduta del dì 9 Piovoso anno settimo Rep.

Il Consolato, considerando che manca nella circolazione un rappresentativo che l'alimenti ed accresca, decreta in esecuzione della Legge degli 8 Pratile anno 6°, ciò che segue :

Articolo I. Oltre la zecca di Roma vi saranno altre due zecche aperte.

Articolo II. In conseguenza la zecca di Perugia resterà in attività e quella di Ancona vi sarà messa al più presto possibile.

Articolo III. Tanto alla zecca di Perugia che a quella di Ancona non si batterà altra moneta fuori di quella di rame di uno o di due baiocchi, a tenore dell'articolo 1 della detta Legge degli 8 Pratile.

Articolo IV. Le due zecche di Ancona e Perugia saranno provvisoriamente organizzate dalle Amministrazioni Centrali come lo erano prima che fossero chiuse; ma semplicemente per la fabbricazione ordinata nell'articolo precedente.

Articolo V. Le Amministrazioni Centrali invieranno al Ministro delle Finanze l'organizzazione che esse avranno stabilita e dopo il suo rapporto il Consolato vi provvederà definitivamente.

Articolo VI. Tutte le altre zecche non menzionate qui sopra saranno al momento chiuse sotto la responsabilità delle Amministrazioni Centrali.

Articolo VII. Viene proibito agli Amministratori e a tutte le Autorità inferiori di permettere ai particolari di battere moneta.

Articolo VIII. Il Ministro delle Finanze è incaricato dell'esecuzione del presente Decreto.

ZACCALEONI.

Il Segretario,

In Roma ed in Ancona, per il Bellelli Stampatore Nazionale¹.

Col primo di questi decreti si ordinava la battitura dello scudo d'argento di cui parliamo, col secondo invece si proibiva la lavorazione dell'argento nella zecca di Perugia, quindi lo spazio massimo di tempo entro cui avvenne l'emissione di tale moneta fu di circa due mesi. Però, prendendo in esame gli avvenimenti succedutisi in questo breve periodo, vedremo che il termine viene accorciato. Sappiamo infatti che i Consoli e i Commissari Francesi della Repubblica Romana, davanti alle truppe del Re di Napoli che si avanzavano su Roma, presero la via della fuga dirigendosi a Perugia, dove trasportarono la sede del Governo, il giorno 6 glaciale dell'anno settimo (26 Novembre 1798). Il 28 glaciale o 18 dicembre dello stesso anno, e cioè soltanto ventidue giorni dopo, essi riportarono la sede del Governo a Roma annunziandolo con un proclama in detta data. Il tempo adunque che corse dalla pubblicazione lde decreto che istituiva il nuovo scudo repubblicano da conarsi in Perugia, ossia nella nuova sede del Governo, al giorno in cui il Governo stesso si restituì nella vecchia residenza fu di soli diciassette giorni. Questi parrebbero anche pochi alla fabbricazione dei coni, alla raccolta e preparazione del metallo e alla coniazione degli scudi sia pure in limitatissima quantità : però non sarà inopportuno rilevare che col secondo decreto emanato il 9 piovoso o 28 gennaio si stabilisce che "la zecca di Perugia resterà in attività" ma non vi si batterà altra moneta all'infuori di quella di rame. Dunque noi possiamo arguire che fino a quel giorno all'incirca la zecca fosse rimasta effettivamente in attività anche per la coniazione dell'argento. In ogni modo il tempo in cui avvenne la emissione dello scudo va da un minimo di diciassette a un massimo di cinquantotto giorni : tempo come si vede ristrettissimo e che giustifica pienamente le anomalie dei pezzi conosciuti, alcuni dei quali conservano l'apparenza della fusione dovuta forse alla affrettata preparazione del metallo per la quale non si avevano mezzi e strumenti adatti. La scarsità assoluta poi e relativa del metallo stesso rende ragione della poca quantità conata, come l'averne battuto qualche pezzo in oro si dovette a qualcuno dei Consoli o dei più fanatici per il nuovo Governo, non potendosi negare che ciò avvenne allora e non posteriormente, come sembra credere il Serafini, perchè ce ne serbò memoria non dubbia un contemporaneo competente, il Vermiglioli¹.

È ovvio poi che la rarità della moneta, già grande per la povertà della emissione, sia diventata anche maggiore ad opera dei possessori che cercarono di sbarazzarsene al più presto come di ricordi di governo poco beneviso e che potevano farli passare per simpatizzanti con esso.

La grande rarità della moneta viene quindi spiegata ragionevolmente senza bisogno di ricorrere alla leggenda che i documenti non noti a tutti sfatano completamente.

Per fortuna qualche raccoglitore contemporaneo ne salvò alcuni esemplari dalla distruzione. Quello riprodotto in testa a queste parole appartiene alla Raccolta del Conte Nicolò Papadopoli Aldo-brandini passata al Civico Museo Correr di Venezia. È d'argento e insieme con una prova in bronzo proviene dalla Raccolta Morosini, contemporaneo veramente benemerito perchè riuscì a conservare con questi altri pezzi unici o rarissimi di quell'epoca. In tale raccolta ce n'era anche un esemplare in oro che il Conte Papadopoli rimpiangeva assai di non avere acquistato per una erronea valutazione del prezzo che gli fu richiesto. Esso passò ad arricchire una collezione finita all'estero ma non figura nel catalogo della vendita che ne fu fatta a Parigi, e non so dove ora si trovi.

THE MONEYSER GEOFFREY AND NORTHAMPTON MINT.

From the time when Ruding wrote his "Annals of The Coinage", down to the present day, a considerable amount of controversy has centred around the question of the social position of the moneyers, in Anglo-Saxon and Norman times. Some writers have sought to elevate them to the rank of nobles, while others, depending upon a passage in Eadmer (Life of St. Dunstan), have relegated them to the position of serfs.

There can be little doubt, however, that the moneyers of a Royal mint, were frequently men of considerable social position and wealth; and when the social position of a moneyer can be demonstrated it is of interest to place the evidence upon record.

One of the moneyers at Northampton mint, in the reign of Henry I., was Gosfridus, or Geoffrey, whose name appears upon type XIV (Hks., 262), only. This type is assigned by Mr. Andrew (Henry I., pp. 89-95), to A.D. 1128-1131.

The few known varieties of Geoffrey's coins are as follows : —

1. Obv. ✠ HENRIEVS RE :
Rev. ✠ GOSFREI : ON : NORh :
2. Obv. From the same die as No. 1.
Rev. ✠ GEFFREI : ON : NORhA :
3. Obv. ✠ HENRIEVS R (:) :
Rev. From the same die as No. 2.

That the above was the order in which the coins were struck can be quite clearly demonstrated. Upon the obverse of No. 1, no flaw is visible, but by the time that No. 2, was struck a flaw had developed in the obverse die, which is clearly shown upon the coin, to the right of the King's bust and extending from the upper ray of the star to near the level of the top of the arch of the King's crown.

The flaw probably extended still further and necessitated the making of a new obverse die (No. 3), with which was used the reverse die of No. 2.

Variety No. 1, was unknown until the discovery of the Canterbury hoard, which disclosed either five or six specimens, one of which is in the National Collection, and two are in the writer's cabinet. Of variety No. 2, only two specimens are known, one being in the National Collection and the other (from the Canterbury hoard), in the writer's cabinet. Variety No. 3, appears to be unique, and is in writer's collection. It is described by Mr. Andrew, Coinage of Henry I., p. 324; the coin was then in the collection of Major Carlyon-Britton, who subsequently presented it to the present writer.

This moneyer was the Geoffrey de Gunetorp (Gunthorpe), who, as we find recorded in the Pipe Roll, for 1129-30, rendered an account of 10 marks of silver on a Treasury plea, of which he had paid £4, and owed four marks; a fine probably for some offence committed by Geoffrey himself, or by his subordinates at Northampton mint.

Mr. Andrew (Henry I., p. 323), says "Gunetorp, i.e., Gunthorpe, is near Oakham (Rutland); and there, no doubt, was the Royal moneyer's feu". The place, however, from which Geoffrey took his name, was Gunthorpe, in the parish of Paston, Northamptonshire, and two miles from Peterborough.

Geoffrey was one of the military knights of the Abbey of Peterborough, and one of his manors — probably his principal manor, and at which he resided — was situated at Gunthorpe.

In 1070, Turolf, a Norman, was appointed by the Conqueror, to succeed Abbot Brand, at Peterborough, which caused a rising of the people of the adjoining fenland, tenants of the Abbot, and others, who, with Hereward at their head, attacked and burnt the Abbey, and Turolf, to combat the activities of these rebellious Saxons, and to protect his Abbey against further attack, enfeoffed a number of stipendiary knights, upon whom he bestowed no less than sixty-two hides of the Abbey's lands.

Geoffrey was probably a son of one of the original knights enfeoffed in 1070; that he was a nephew of the Abbot of Peterborough, and that he held eight hides of the Abbey's lands in Northamptonshire, for which he rendered three knights' service, we know from the following passage in an interesting document entitled Descriptio Militum de Abbatia de Burgo, in possession of the Society of Antiquaries, and which Dr. Round (Feudal England), dates between 1100 and 1120: —

"Gosfridus nepos Abbatis tenet .viii. hides in Hamtonascira, et inde servit se .iii. militum".

The locality in which these eight hides lay is not given, but in the margin is written "Gunethorp", and in a later hand, of the time of Henry III., is written, also in the margin: —

"Thomas filius de Roberti de Gunthorp tenet octo hydas terræ in Northamtonscire; scilicet in Gunthorp, Suthorp, Stoke, Hemmington et inde facit servitum trium militum plenus".

The above Robert and Thomas de Gunthorpe were probably grandson and great-grandson of Geoffrey, and the latter entry, which identifies a manor at Southorpe, as part of the Gunthorpe fief, and its connection with the previous entry, enables us to identify Geoffrey "the Abbot's nephew", with the Geoffrey of the following entry in Domesday: —

"In Southorpe (Sudtorp), Geoffrey (Goisfridus) and two other knights hold $4\frac{1}{2}$ hides of the Abbot", and also enables us to identify this Geoffrey with Geoffrey de Gunthorpe, the Northampton moneyer.

Gunthorpe is not mentioned in Domesday, and $6\frac{1}{2}$ hides of Geoffrey's fief appears to be unaccounted for, but in the Northamptonshire Survey, compiled temp. Henry I., we find that: —

"In Wadenhoe... there also Geoffrey de Gunthorpe (holds) two hides of the fee of the Abbot of Burh", and also that: —

"In Armston, Geoffrey de Gunthorpe (holds) two-thirds of half a hide of the same fee".

In Domesday, we find it recorded that: —

"In Armston (Mermeston), and Kingsthorpe, five knights hold of the Abbot five hides of socland", but the names of the holders are not given.

The above entry, temp. Henry III., mentions land at Hemmington, as forming part of the Gunthorpe fief, and in Domesday, we find it recorded that: —

"In Hemmington three knights hold of the Abbot $2\frac{1}{2}$ hides, and the soc belongs to Oundle", but, as before, the holder's names are not recorded.

Geoffrey, the moneyer, died before the latter part of 1145, for in the Charter, or Bull, granted by Pope Eugenius III, in December of that year, to Abbot Martin, of Peterborough, we find in the account of the lands of the Abbey, held by the military knights, the following entry: —

"Feodum Gaufridi infantis, Gunthorp, Suthorp, and terram quam habet in Stoke, cum appendiciis eorum", which shows that Geoffrey, had been succeeded by his son Geoffrey, who was then under age.

REVIEWS.

MANUEL DES POIDS MONÉTAIRES par A. Dieudonné, Conservateur du Département des Médailles et Antiques de la Bibliothèque Nationale. 8vo. ; 184 pp. + XVI Plates.

J. Florange, and L. Ciani, Paris, 1925 (40 frs.).

Readers of the Numismatic Circular who have appreciated the series of articles by T. Sheppard and J. F. Musham which appeared in our columns on "Money Scales and Weights" (N.C., January 1920 to December 1922) will welcome the publication of M. Dieudonné's very able Manuel des Poids monétaires, recently published.

This is a first attempt at a general treatise on the subject, which, judging from the extensive bibliography cited by the author, has received a good deal of attention from numismatists and antiquaries in various countries.

Money weights were used to check and discover lack of weight of coins; also to determine the values of foreign coins in home currency.

Some are known of ancient times, Babylonian, Greek, but chiefly Roman and Byzantine. A few have come down to us from the early mediaeval period, but Dieudonné ascribes the real beginning of money weights to about 1330.

Money weights are easily procurable and not costly. They are the natural corollary to a numismatic collection and teach us much on the history of coinage.

The first part of M. Dieudonné's work deals with the theory and doctrine of money weights and contains invaluable information. The second part is devoted to the description of money-weights, first of France, then of Great Britain, Portugal, Spain, the Southern Netherlands, the Rhine Region, the Northern Netherlands, Italy, and Central Europe.

The most prolific makers of money scales and money weights were the Flemish, who sold their goods all over the world.

M. Dieudonné gives over 6 pages of names of makers whose initials or names occur on weights or boxes of money scales.

These few indications will suffice to show that the latest Manual of M. Dieudonné should find a ready sale in this country also, and we would recommend it very warmly to every student.

THE COINAGE OF SIAM. The Coins of the Bangkok Dynasty, 1782-1924.

By R.S. Le May, M.R.A.S. 8vo. 67 pp. + XI Plates.

Paper read at an ordinary general meeting of the Siam Society on the 20th May 1924.

Some two years ago Mr. R.S. Le May was approached by the Hon. Secretary of the Siam Society, Mr. Michell, and entrusted with the preparing of a paper on the subject of Siamese coins.

We have now before us the result of Mr. Le May's studies, forming an important monograph of 67 pages, devoted to the coins of the Bangkok dynasty, 1782-1924.

In his research work, the author has been fortunate in securing the collaboration of H.S.H. Prince Piya, the foremost collector of coins in Siam for more than thirty years past. Thanks to this collaboration and the accurate scientific study by Mr. Le May of all available information and documentary evidence, a body of material has been accumulated which will prove of great value to the numismatist first and also to the historian.

The aborigines of Siam Proper were the Lawa whose capital was at Lawo. Neither they, nor the successive empires which held sway over the land, are known to have issued coins. We have to come down to the XIVth cent. for the first evidence of a coinage.

The Kingdom of Siam, with its capital at Ayuthia, was founded by a branch of the same race that established Sukothai, namely the "Thai", and from 1350 to 1767, the coinage followed the type of the Sukothai. The example set by this Ayuthia period was continued until the beginning of the sixties of the last century; in the reign of King Mongkut (the 4th of the Bangkok dynasty).

Of the 20 reigns of Ayuthia, as many as 17 representative types of 'bullet' ticals are extant, which however it is impossible to classify in chronological and reign order, for want of effigies or dates.

In the third reign of the Bangkok Dynasty (1824-1851) the first gold 'bullet' coins were minted. In the fourth reign (1851-1868) gold coins, both of the 'bullet' and flat shapes were issued, and flat silver and copper coins first came into use.

Mr. Le May gives us the marks by which we can identify the coins, from the reign of Somdet Phra Phutta Yawt Fa (1782-1809), to the present day.

King Mongkut (Somdet Phra Chawm Klao), 1851-1868, issued a vast amount of coins, and modernised the currency.

In the reign of Chulalongkorn (1868-1910) a nickel coinage was introduced.

Under the present king, Somdet Phra Paramin Maha Vajiravudh (1910-) the style and title of the Dynasty was changed, and each King of the dynasty is known officially as Rama, and the present King is styled Rama VI. The only coins issued so far of this reign are :—

Silver 1, $\frac{1}{2}$ and $\frac{1}{4}$ Ticals.

Nickel 10, 5 and 1 Satangs.

Bronze 1 Satangs.

The highest denomination of silver ticals of King Mongkut was the 4 Ticals, and there are of him also 2, 1, $\frac{1}{2}$, $\frac{1}{4}$, $\frac{1}{8}$ and $\frac{1}{16}$ Ticals, as well as subsidiary coins in nickel $\frac{1}{4}$, $\frac{1}{8}$, $\frac{1}{16}$, $\frac{1}{32}$ and $\frac{1}{64}$ Ticals.

There is however a series of commemorative coins, not issued for currency, made on the occasion of the cremation of Somdet Phra Deb Sirindhra, the mother of King Chulalongkorn, and consisting of 1 Chang (80 Ticals).

10 Tamleung (40 Ticals).

5 Tamleung (20 Ticals).

2 $\frac{1}{2}$ Tamleung (10 Ticals).

1 Tamleung (4 Ticals).

and 2 Ticals.

They are also silver 'bullet' coins, and were minted in 1880.

The author gives us XI Plates of illustrations, enabling us to identify the various issues of currency and banknotes. Also six types of cowrie-shells used in Siam from time immemorial as currency, three types of brass or bronze Pees, and six types of porcelain Pees, issued originally as gambling counters, but also as small change for general purposes, of course without the authority of the government.

It is a great boon to have such a work as Mr. Le May's, which facilitates the identification of a coinage about which so little was known hitherto.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETIES, MUSEUMS, &c.

ROYAL NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

Feb. 19 : Sir Charles Oman, K.B.E., M.P., LL.D., F.S.A., &c. &c. President in the Chair.

Mr. L.G.P. Messenger exhibited a third brass of Carausius, rev. VICTORIA AVGG, apparently restruck on a coin of Tetricus.

Mr. G.C. Haines showed a small bronze coin of Justinian I. rev.  no mm., not in the B.M. Catalogue.

Mr. L. Fletcher showed 10 Russian copper coins of Peter the Great, 4 of the old type and 4 Kopecks and 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ poluskhas of the new coinage.

Mr. Fredk. A. Walters, F.S.A. showed a groat and penny of David II of Scotland of the Aberdeen mint.

Dr. George F. Hill gave an account of a collection of Renaissance medals which he had recently purchased and described the many hitherto unknown pieces contained in it. One of the most remarkable were a portrait medal of Edward Courtenay, Earl of Devonshire, made very shortly before his death in Italy.

Dr. Hill also read a paper on Alexander of Bruchsal, who was employed at the English mint from 1494 to 1509, and showed that he was not a native of Brussels as had been suggested but of Bruchsal in Baden. Biographical data were supplied from various autobiographical records by M. Tournier who also had discovered a portrait medal of the engraver by himself, a cast of which was exhibited.

March 19 : Sir Charles Oman, K.B.E., M.P., LL.D., F.S.A., F.B.A., &c. &c. President in the Chair.

The President exhibited a series of silver coins of the York mint from Edward I to Richard III.

Mr. Fredk. A. Walters, F.S.A. exhibited a portrait testoon of Mary Queen of Scots of 1561 in very fine condition.

Mr. William Gilbert showed an aureus of Nero Drusus (Cohen 3) being lot 113 from the recent Recamier sale.

Mr. Gilbert also showed a 17th century token of Ross in Ireland (Williamson 695) overstruck on a token of Nicholas White of High St. Dublin (Williamson 415). This piece is interesting in that it helps to prove the above Ross token was an Irish piece—which was doubtful.

Mr. Lawrence exhibited a series of coins to illustrate his paper.

Mr. L.A. Lawrence, F.S.A. read a paper on "The York Mint in Plantagenet Times". Notice was taken of the earlier constitution of the York Mint or mints under Saxon and Norman kings. The mint then probably worked both the Royal and the Archiepiscopal branches concurrently, the difference between the coins being known by the moneyer's names. On the removal of the moneyer's names from the coins in Edward I's time the difference was shown by a quatrefoil in the centre of the reverse. Edward III allowed Archbishop Milton to work his mint in spite of there being no Royal mint in 1331. From that time the coins would seem to indicate that the Royal mint at York was only opened when large coins were wanted and with them the Royal mint also issued pennies without the quatrefoil. During the time of working of the Royal mint, the archbishop's branch would appear to have been closed, as quatrefoil pennies are not to be found in strict agreement with the Royal pennies.

York was the great factory for supplying the country with its penny coinage and closure of the Royal mint caused the immediate opening of that of the Archbishop. The quatrefoil is present on all York pence of succeeding kings until the whole type of the penny was changed in the reign of Henry VII. Under Henry V, there are two non-quatrefoil pence — one is connected with the early issue of large coins (Royal) quite early in the reign. The other has no corresponding large coins and must therefore belong to a period when the Archbishop's mint was in the hands of the king's receiver. — This receivership apparently took place when (a) there was a Sede Vacante and (b) when the Archbishop did not function, through an excommunication, imprisonment or sequestration of the revenues. In all these cases it was necessary to show that the coins were from the Archbishop's mint and this was done by removal of the quatrefoil or when initials were on the obverse, by the removal of these or the quatrefoil.

The conclusions seem to be that only Royal pennies were issued when groats were being struck and that all other pennies were issued by the king's receiver for the reasons given above.

Vice Presidents : Mr. H. Mackay and Mr. A. Rider.

Hon. Secretary : Mr. Frank Varley.

Hon. Treasurer : Mr. A. Rider.

Hon. Editor : Mr. T. Sheppard, M.Sc.

Council : Messrs. H. Crowther, Croft, Brigg, Hutton, Charlesworth, Thornton, and Armstrong.

The presentation of the Society's Annual Medal to Mr. J.F. Musham F.E.S. was then made. The President (Mr. J. Digby Firth F.L.S.) in making the presentation, alluded to his association with that gentleman in various branches of Science, as naturalist and antiquary, and called attention to Mr. Musham's varied interests and active participation in the work of various Scientific Societies in Yorkshire and Lincolnshire. As a numismatist Mr. Musham had always evinced a keen enthusiasm in the work of the Yorkshire Numismatic Society, of which he was the popular president in 1920-1921. Amongst many highly interesting papers he has contributed, the following deserve special mention:—

1. "The circulated copper and bronze pence of Queen Victoria 1837-1901.
2. "Coins as media for Workmen's marks".
3. "Agriculture and its effect on the distribution of recent coins".
4. "Notes on Coin Weights".
5. "Further Notes on Love Tokens, suggesting an additional title to the present nomenclature of such items".

Reference was made to Mr. Musham's collaboration with Mr. T. Sheppard M.Sc. in their joint monograph on "Coin Scales and Weights", which would no doubt prove to be a valuable work of reference to all interested in this particular branch of numismatic study.

Mr. Musham suitably replied, thanking the members for the honour they had conferred upon him, and remarking in a humorous manner on the inspiration he derived in deciding him as to the course he might pursue in selecting the least known branches of numismatic study.

During the afternoon Mr. Thomas Pickersgill gave an interesting account of the coinage of William III, explaining the different varieties and mint marks, and exhibiting specimens of all varieties and mint marks, and exhibiting specimens of all varieties of coins ranging from the farthing to the crown piece. Other exhibits were made as follows:

By the President: New issues in silver, nickel, and bronze of Danzig Free State, Poland, Bolshevik Russia, Denmark, Norway, Latvia, Belgian Congo, East Africa, and Brazil.

By Mr. J. F. Musham F.E.S.: Engraved Love Tokens.

By Mr. A. Knight: Newark Siege Sixpence of 1646, showing the original silver plate mark in one corner of the coin.

By Mr. Frank Heeley: A collection of over 20 old Continental portrait Thalers, also two victory Thalers issued in Germany after the Franco-German War of 1871.

By Mr. H. Armstrong: An engraved silver token.

By Mr. Bruze Senior: Turkish silver coin, finely engraved and made into identification disc during the late war.

By Mr. M. Eschwege: Chinese Republican Dollar, Copy of the Charles I Oxford crown, Pilgrim Fathers Centenary half dollar (U.S.A.) Shell-money necklaces with gold and coral mounts, a collection of South American bronze Commemorative and Masonic medals, and a collection of Roman objects, including fibula, spoons, beads, etc., from Neston, near Chester.

The retiring President (Mr. J. Digby Firth F.L.S.) kindly entertained the members to tea, for which he was warmly thanked on the motion of Mr. A. Knight, seconded by Mr. F. Heeley.

KENT NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

Mr. W.H. Day presided at the meeting in the Maidstone Museum, on Friday 13 March, 1925, when a further paper on "The King's Shilling", by Mr. E.T. Clark, was read by Mr. Risch, as Mr. Clark was unable to be present. The paper dealt with the varieties of shillings issued during the reigns of Queen Victoria, Edward VII and George V. A vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Clark for the interesting series of papers he has given on this subject. Mr. J.W. Bridge exhibited the rare 18th Century Folkestone token, also a Roman Coin of Constantine I., the reverse of which illustrated the legend of Romulus and Remus (the founders of Rome) and the she-wolf. Mr. E.H. Clark exhibited a Stanley cast Isle of Man penny of 1709. It was decided to offer prizes for the three best collections of coins, showing the most intelligent tabulation and arrangement, open to scholars of the Elementary Schools in the Borough. Particulars of this competition will be given shortly, and the prize-winners' exhibits will be shown in the case of the Kent Numismatic Society of the Maidstone Museum.

An ordinary meeting of this Society was presided over by Mr. Risch at the Maidstone Museum on Friday evening 17 Apl., when Mr. E.T. Clark read some notes on Bracteate coins, and a paper was given by Mr. H. Collins on "Heraldry" which dealt with the origin of the coats of arms, and how they came to be used on our English coins.

The following coins, etc., were exhibited: Mr. J.W. Bridge, An Anglo Saxon penny of Ethelred II from the Oxford mint. The 18th Century Tradesmen's token of Gravesend and Stone. Mr. E.T. Clark, A silver oncia of Emmanuel Pinto, Master of the Order of S. John of Jerusalem at Malta. Mr. H. Munn, A helmet badge of the 17th Lancers from the Zulu Campaign of 1879. Mr. Risch, A tray of Henry III silver pennies, from various. A William and Mary "Plague" halfpenny. Mr. F. Skinner, A 20 groszy coin of the New Polish currency.

AUSTRALIAN NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

The Ordinary Meeting of the Society was held on Thursday, 29th January, 1925, at 8 p.m. at the B.M.A. Building, Sydney. In the absence of the President, the Hon. J. Lane Mullins, V.P. took the chair. The Minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

The Report of the Victorian Numismatic Society for December, 1924, was laid upon the table. A letter from Mr. H. Priestley, presenting a number of copies of the Numismatic Circular was read, and a resolution was passed thanking him for his gift and wishing him a pleasant time in his trip to the Old Country. Mr. P. Larsen presented the Society with four coin trays for use at the Meetings of the Society. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Larsen. The Hon. J. Lane Mullins described some portrait medals of Victoria and exhibited a number of medals and rubbings of others.

Mr. P. Larsen exhibited a tray of Coles Arcade Medals.

Mr. E. Wills exhibited a pattern 5/-piece. GEO.V. 1910.

Special Exhibits. By Mr. E. Wills: Geo. III. Proofs and Patterns.

Mr. F. Mills exhibited some interesting coins.

Mr. P. Larsen exhibited some Anglo-Indian Coins of GEO. III.

The Ordinary Meeting of the Society was held at the B.M.A. Building, 30 Elizabeth Street, Sydney, on Thursday, 26th February, 1925, Dr. G.H. Abbott (President) in the Chair. A letter from Mr. A. Chitty, of Victoria, forwarding a copy of a book entitled "Incidents in the life of E.W. Cole" was read and it was decided to thank Mr. Chitty for the present. A letter from Mr. R. D. Lawrence was read offering 30 coins for sale. A Report of the Victorian Numismatic Society for December 1924 was submitted to the members. Mr. C.J.V. Weaver read an interesting paper on "Deserters from the Currency" showing to what uses coins are frequently put. During the Great War, Germany and Austria used practically the whole of their Bronze and Nickel Coins for munition work. Another use to which Copper Coins were put in olden times was as weights, the George III two-penny and penny pieces weighing two and one ounce respectively. Coins were often used as decorations of various kinds. It will be remembered how a certain showman at one of the Sydney seaside resorts decorated his vest with sovereigns, then again in the game of "two up" coins come into use. Many other instances of Deserters from currency were related by Mr. Weaver.

Mr. E. Wills exhibited a complete set of Queen Elizabeth Coins from the crown to the silver half penny. This was a very beautiful exhibit and greatly admired. All coins were in beautiful condition.

Mr. C.J. Weaver exhibited: Commonwealth Penny, used as a Washer for the Rubber Heel of a Lady's Shoe. Dr. G.H. Abbott exhibited an Ancient Money Balance for weighing Sovereigns and Half-sovereigns. Mr. P. Larsen exhibited several trays of English Silver Coins. EDWARD III to ELIZABETH, these were in good order.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETY OF VICTORIA.

There was a large gathering of members at the monthly meeting of the Society held at Detmold Chambers, 237 Collins Street, Melbourne, on Tuesday evening, Feb. 10th 1925, Mr. P.C. Clements, the President occupying the Chair.

The usual business and correspondence having been attended to, the appointment of Auditor was proceeded with. Mr. L.H. Walters, who has for several years audited the books and accounts of the Society, was unanimously re-elected to this position.

Nominations for Office bearers for the year 1925-26 were received and members freely availed themselves of their privileges in this respect.

The paper for the evening was provided by the President, who chose as his subject the Victoria Cross—a full history of the origin, manufacture and distribution of this highly prized decoration was given. On a recent visit to the Royal Mint, Melb., members were privileged to see two of these rather rare specimens in the collection. Questions were asked and answered at the conclusion of the paper which was highly appreciated.

Mr. E.S. Anthony exhibited a coin of Justinian I, and commented on that Emperor's reign and its effect on modern times.

FORGOTTEN MONEY SLANG.

BY BASSETT DIGBY.

Money slang has fallen upon evil days. I was quite startled recently when an omnibus conductor asked me if I had six coppers for a tizzy. A tizzy! Why, I have not heard that delightful word since I was a boy, when it was quite as often used in London as tanner. Now and again too, twenty or thirty years ago, a sixpenny bit used still to be known as a kick or a bender. Two or three decades before that it was a tester or a cripple, half a hog, a sow's baby, a pig, a fye-buck, or a lord of the the manor. A buck, of course, is American slang for a dollar, and has been so for a long while.

A 5s. piece, in my young days, was still called a cartwheel, but no longer a taskeroon or a bull. How meagre is our slang for a shilling in these times. A mere bob. Yet at the time of the Crimean War bob was only one of a number of terms, such as twelver and breaky-leg, gen and tevis, stag, deaner, hog and levy.

One still says, "Oh, that put the kybosh on it!" meaning "knocked it on the head" or "rendered it impossible". Kybosh used to be the slang word for one-and-sixpence, but the amusing or dramatic incident that once brought it into the limelight — and the English argot — appears to have been quite forgotten.

The sovereign had a lot of slang names with seemingly equal chances of survival — a portrait, a yellow boy, a goldfinch, a canary, a james, a couter, a foont, a poona, a bean, a quid and a thick 'un; yet only the last two are now used.

At the other end of the scale, coppers has now become the most respectable of all modern money slang. Bishops and judges who would never ask the bookstall man at Waterloo to change a flimsy, a quid, a bob, or a tanner — let alone defile their dignified lips by requesting the courtesy of five tizzies for two-and-a-kick! — have no hesitation about saying, "Oh, do you mind coppers?"

Coppers nowadays comprise both pence and ha'pence, but they used to mean only pence. If you wanted ha'pence you asked for browns or mags or poshes or raps. When you exclaim, in annoyance over some contretemps, that you don't care a rap, that rap, though you do not know it, is simply the slang word for a ha'penny in your grandfather's time.

For the word money itself, in Mid-Victorian England, actually more than 40 slang terms were in common use. Few are the survivors. Chink, tin, and dibbs survive merely in schools, those strongholds of conservatism. Rhino is seldom heard except in old-fashioned comic songs. Brass has retreated to the Midlands and the industrial North. The ready and the needful alone are pretty generally understood to mean money.

SOVIET GOLD COINAGE.

PLACATING THE PEASANTRY.
(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

Riga, March 18.

The Soviet authorities have published the new design for the Chervonetz gold coins which they begin minting next week.

They intend to complete 3,000,000 pieces before June, and a further 3,000,000 before October. The financial experts have definitely decided to circulate these coins in 1926, and the Press boasts that Soviet Russia is thus second only to Great Britain in restoring the gold standard.

In view of a recent speech of Zinovieff's, in the course of which he remarked that the peasants' jealousy of the townsmen had reached such a pitch that the former even objected to the badge bearing the hammer over the sickle rather than the reverse, it is interesting to note that, whereas on the silver coins issued in 1924 the hammer appears above the sickle, on the newly-designed gold coins the sickle is shown over the hammer. The design on the gold Chervonetz appears to be a sop for the peasantry, and although the usual legend urging the workers of the world to unite appears on the reverse of the coins, proletarian interests are represented only in the distant background of the obverse, the foreground of which is monopolized by a sturdy peasant sower.

- This coin is a rare type in a class attributed by M. Babelon to Corcyra. This example should be compared with his no. 1293 (pl. XL, fig. 12). This attribution can at best be uncertain, because the type is not uncommon on the Asiatic coinage; and it is rendered even doubtful by the weight which does not correspond with that of the certainly Corcyrean examples.*

SCHAFFHAUSEN.

Schaffhausen joined the Swiss Confederation in 1501. The name in its original form is connected with 'ship' rather than with 'sheep'. The arms of the town with the ram must consequently be regarded as a comparatively late assumption.

ST. GALL.

Both canton and town have taken their name and arms from the ancient abbey, founded in the seventh century by St. Gallus one of the many Irish missionary scholars who traversed western Europe in the darker ages. In 1529 the town adopted the Reformation and hence forward the abbey and the town were quite separate.

TICINO (TESSIN).

Till 1798 this district was governed by the confederate cantons. At this date the inhabitants declared themselves independent and formed themselves into the two cantons of Bellinzona and Lugnano. In 1803 they became united as the canton of Ticino or Tessin; except for a few small coins of the town of Bellinzona, there was no issue of money previous to the year 1813 when the new canton was admitted to the confederation.

(Milford Haven, Naval Medals, II, 741, Medina, 17). Very rare. E.F. 12 10 »
 * In the Spring of 1806, Sir Home Popham, who was in command of the naval forces at the Cape of Good Hope, without any authority from the home government sailed from the Cape, taking with him all the naval force, and 1500 troops. The armament arrived off Buenos Aires on the 24th June. No time was wasted, and on the 28th the land forces surprised and captured Buenos Aires, while a feint was made by the fleet against Monte Video. But the inhabitants secretly organised an insurrection which broke out on August 4th, and was assisted from without by the militia of the surrounding districts. The British garrison, after a stout resistance, was overpowered; and the survivors were made prisoners of war, though Sir Home Popham escaped with the squadron, and anchored for a while at the mouth of the river. The Volume contains a series of articles which have been appearing for some years in The Numismatic Circular, reprinted in convenient form, and contains nearly one hundred illustrations. In addition there is a lengthy chapter on English Coin Weights, in which details will be found of one of the most complete collections of Coin Weights in the country.

The Money Scales date from Roman Times to the reign of Queen Victoria, and include particulars of over three hundred different kinds. The Coin Weights date from Edward III. to Victoria. The volume contains 231 pages.

NOTES ON THE MYTHOLOGICAL TYPES ON ROMAN REPUBLICAN COINS.

MYTH OF LAVINIUM.

On a denarius of L. Papius Celsus issued about 45 B.C., the Reverse type represents a wolf on one side of a fire and an eagle on the other.

This type refers to a legend told by Dionysius of Halicarnassus, who was born about 60 B.C., and died soon after 7 A.D. He went to Rome about 19 B.C. Strabo says he was one of his contemporary authors. The legend he relates is found in Vol. I, p. 47. "While Lavinium was being founded, they say the following prodigies befel the Trojans. A fire having spontaneously broken out in a grove, a wolf, bringing dry wood in its mouth, cast it on to the fire, and an eagle, flying up, fanned the flame by the motion of its wings; but a fox, striving to counteract these, bringing its tail moistened with water from the river came up and sought to extinguish the fire which was burning. At one time the animals kind-ling the fire prevailed, at another the animal which sought to quench it. At last the two (i.e. the wolf and the eagle) won the day, and the other unable to do any more departed.

Aeneas, seeing this, said the colony would be famous and an object of wonder very widely known, but that as it increased, it would be hated by its neighbours, and a trouble to them, yet it would prevail over its enemies because by the favour of heaven it would have the goodwill of a divine power much more efficacious than the envy of men. They say that such manifest portents occurring to the Trojans pointed to the future fortunes of the city, and that memorials of these exist in the market place of Lavinium, viz. bronze figures of these animals preserved from very distant times".

Probably the myth was invented to explain or account for an ancient group of bronze statuary. The eagle was regarded as a symbol of Jupiter, the wolf of Mars and the fox an emblem of Rome's ancient enemies famed for swiftness and cunning. The fire represented the growing glory of Rome. Lavinium was then regarded as the cradle of the race. The names Lavinium and Lanuvium are so similar that in many MSS they are confused. The gens Papia rose to power and distinction in Lanuvium and came to Rome after the Latin wars were over. Some have asked why then should the denarius of L. Papius Celsus have the type of the group ~~same in~~ Lavinium. The answer may well be suggested by the Obverse, which bears a head representing Triumphus as below, the legend TRIVMPHVS. This may represent of Julius Cæsar, and the Reverse type may have without regard to the locality of the statue represented on account of the legend being regarded as a prophecy of the fame and glory of the Roman people. The coin is associated with Lavinium in regard to its type, and not connected in any other way with the coin than be it be one, that the moneyer's ancestors came from there.

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN

Lavinium was situated about three miles from the sea and about seventeen miles from Rome. According to legends it was founded by Aeneas and named after his wife, the daughter of the King Latinus. There is a tradition that Ascanius, son of Aeneas, moved to Alba, but the religious authorities of the mother city prevented the success of his enterprise.

The old form of the name was Latvinus. Latinus was the name of Lavinus and the name was that of a tribe, the Latini, the name. Strabo speaks of Lavinium as shewing only the city, but as still retaining its sacred rites and sacred character. It had been preserved since the days of Aeneas. Besides the eagle, the wolf and the fox, a bronze statue of the thirty young ones was still in evidence in Strabo's time. The ancient site is now identified with Pratica. The myth of Lavinia whom the city was named is only known to us from Virgil. We see her only in one place in Bk. VII kindling the altar of her father's palace. She is then last mentioned in Bk. XII, crying "Tua est Lavinia conjux".

THE MYTH OF AMALTHEA.

The horn of Amalthea was a symbol of plenty found on the denarii of the Republic. It is seen on an aureus of Augustus the Reverse of which it appears with the legend L LONGVS. A similar type with the same legend appears on an aureus of M. Lepidus; on an aureus of Sulla with the legend Q for Quæstor; on a quadrans and a sextans of Sulla, a coin of the same moneyer with EX SC Ex senatus consulto.

Amalthea is represented on coins of Synnada, carrying Zeus, with a goat at her feet; on coins of Laodicea in Phrygia, Amalthea is also represented nursing Zeus. Aegæ in the gulf of Issus Cilicia, Amalthea occurs nursing infant Zeus and cornucopiæ, or a goat standing by. Gardner's Num. Com. Paus., II, 85.

Both the name Amalthea and the emblem, the cornucopia, have many varied lines of thought to those who study natural history. Some regard the horn as the most ancient form of cup used not only in Greece but also by our own ancestors, and regard it as a natural symbol of fertility. There then arises the question of whether the horn was that of a bull or a goat. In lands like Crete for instance, where a breed of goats existed bearing horns large enough to be thus used, the horn would naturally have been regarded as a goat's horn, but in other lands where herds of cattle were the most numerous, the horns of bulls would have been used more as drinking cups.

The cup filled to the brim was imagined to be like a horn from which a river flowed, and, as many rivers began their course as a mountain torrent flowing with irresistible force and the roar of many waters, such streams were compared with the rush and roar of a bull. The idea became a common symbol found in very many passages of Greek literature. The bull's horn myth was later explained by regarding land which was very fertile as a horn of plenty if its shape or plan was that of a bull's horn. In this way Diodorus Siculus and Strabo in the passages quoted in illustration of this idea explained the reason for giving the name Amalthea to the lands about which they wrote.

As the ancients saw in the forms of constellations in the heavens symbols of earthly myths so we see Taurus, the Bull, and the goat's horn, Capricorn, among the signs of the Zodiac. It has been imagined by some that as the over-flowing of the Nile occurs when the sun enters Taurus there is some connection with the idea of the Ammon, king of a part of Libya married Rhea, daughter of Uranus, sister of Saturn and the other Titans. In visiting his kingdom Ammon found near the Ceraunian mountains a singularly beautiful maiden who was called Amalthea. He loved her and became by her father of a child of wondrous beauty and strength. He gave to Amalthea the rule over all the neighbouring country, the shape or contour of which was like the horn of a bull, and was called the horn of Hesperus. This land by reason of the fruitfulness of its soil produced not only many vines but also all sorts of fruit trees. Amalthea took the government of this land to which she left the name of the Horn of Amalthea and from this all fertile lands have been so called.

According to Ovid, Fasti V, 115, Amalthea was a Naiad of Ida in Crete who had a she-goat with two kids, and horns very long and curved backwards. This animal suckled the infant god but broke one horn on a tree. The nymph picked this up, and presented it wreathed with grass and filled with fruit to Jupiter, who, when he obtained the sovereignty of heaven made both the goat and the horn constellations. This was afterwards known as Capricornus.

Callimachus, Hymn to Zeus, mentions the myth "For thou didst suck the full breast of the goat Amalthea".

Apollodorus (I, 1, 5) who flourished at Athens about 140 B.C. "The nymphsAdrasteia and Ida reared the child (Zeus) with the milk of Amalthea at Dicte (Crete). Apollodorus, II, 7, 5, "Amalthea had horns like a Bull and one of these had the quality of supplying in abundance whatsoever food or drink one could wish for".

TADDIO, A. (Ital.). Signature on a medal of the Milan Exposition, 1904.

TAFT, LORADO (Amer.). Contemporary Sculptor; exhibited at the American Numismatic Society, New York, 1923, a struck medal in bronze, of James Whitcomb Riley, 1849-1916.

TAGABY, J. (Austr.). Contemporary Sculptor of Vienna, by whom I have seen a Christening Plaque (edited by Mayer and Wilhelm).

TAGLANG, HUGO (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 6). By this Engraver are further: Portrait-medal of Sven Hedin and Otto Nordenskjöld.

TAGLIONI, L. (Ital.). (B.D.M., Vol. VI, 1916, p. 8). A series of medals, diam. 41 mill. of P. Ovidius Naso; — Bernini; — Vitruvius; — Torquato Tasso; — Flavius Gioja. The obverses of these medals are by V. Catenacci and the reverses by A. Arnaud (R.J.E.).

TAGORE, ABANINDRA NATH (Indian). Designer of a medal for His Excellency the Governor of Bengal. The design was sent to the Calcutta Mint in the form of a wax plaque from which the Mint Engraver completed the medal, which bears the following Sanskrit inscription in Bengali characters: — JANANI JANMABHŪMIŚ CA SVARGAĀPI GARĪYASĪ (A mother and one's native land are more important than heaven even). I have to thank Mr. John Allan, M. A., of the Department of Coins and Medals, British Museum, London, W.C., 1, for kindly supplying the inscription and its translation (Hy. Garside).

TASSIE, JAMES (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 22). Consult also Strickland, A Dictionary of Irish Artists, II, pp. 422-427. I have come across an unregistered Portrait-medallion of Lord Duncannon, after Natter, by this artist.

Tassie exhibited at the Society of Artists in 1767 and 1768.

TASSIE, WILLIAM (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 32). Exhibited at the Society of Artists from 1771 to 1791.

TASSINI, MARCO (Ital.). (Dalton Cat. of Engraved Gems of the Post-classical Periods, 1915, p. xxxv) remarks: "A monument in S. Maria Novella at Florence bears the inscription Marcus Francisci Pauli Tassini Gemmarius sibi posterisque suis faciendum curavit, with the date 1496. Gori and Giulianelli maintain with probability, against Mariette (Traité, § IV, 20), who is less confident, that Gemmarius can only mean a gem-engraver (Giulianelli, Memorie, p. 125). In this case the name of Marco Tassini must be added to the list of fifteenth-century engravers."

TAT, GABRIEL (French). Mint-master at Turin, 1539-47: letters G.T.

TAUER, ARTHUR (Germ.). Proprietor of the Medallie Mint, Otto Oertel, of Berlin.

Prepared dies for a medal on the Second Centenary of Frederick the Great's birth, 1912 (for the Mint of Otto Oertel).

TAUPIER, JEAN (French). Mint-master at Nantes, from 1534: a heart.

TAUTENHAYN Junior, JOHANN JOSEPH (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 40). Additional works: Portrait-plaquette of Hofrat Prof. Dr Anton R. von Frisch, 1914; 70 × 55 mill.; — Franz Schubert, 1797-1828; — Commemorative Plaquette of the Eucharistic Congress in Vienna, 1912; — Dr Anton Kerschbaumer, on his 80th birthday, 1913; — Centenary of the War of Independence, 1913; — Uniface medal of the "Leopoldineum" (Hospital for Wounded Soldiers) in Vienna; 46 mill.; — 1902, Alfred Grünfeld, Æ. 71 × 51 mill.; — 1907, Franz Schneiderhan, Rv. Statue of Liberty in N.Y. harbour, Æ. 60 × 44 mill.; — 1908, Emil Ritter von Foerster, Æ. 70 × 58 mill.; — 1911, Otto Wagner, Æ. 81 × 56 mill.; — 1916, Ferdinand Fellner, Æ. 70 × 44 mill.

TAVERNA, TORTORINO (Ital.). A Milanese Gem-engraver of the sixteenth century, and reputed to be a good engraver of cameos. Probably a brother of GIULIO TAVERNA (q.v. Vol. VI, p. 41) who excelled in rock-crystal. Duffield Osborne illustrates on Pl. XXX, 14 of his Engraved Gems a gem, signed M. ARVNTINI. TAV., perhaps the signature of some member of the Taverna family of Milan, though seemingly of neither Tortorino nor Giuliano. The stone is thus described: "A hero, in tunic and cloak, wearing a helmet with a crest and plume. He is ploughing with two oxen with garlands about their necks, and gazing, with raised arm, toward twelve birds flying above them. A Renaissance picture of Romulus seeing the twelve vultures and also marking out with a furrow the bounds of the city he is to build" (p. 385).

TAYLOR, Dr B.F. (Amer.). Secretary and Treasurer of the Louisiana State Board of Health, New Orleans; chief Coiner for the Confederate States, and responsible for the issue of the Confederate Half Dollar, dated 1861, of which only four specimens were struck. The designer was A. H. M. Petersen.

An interesting account of this coin is given in The Numismatist, 1918, pp. 395-6, from which we extract the following: "Between January 26 and May 31, 1861, the state of Louisiana and then the Confederate States coined double eagles and half dollars at the New Orleans Mint from the regular United States dies after the mint went out of the control of the Federal Government. In April Mr. Memminger, Secretary of the Confederate Treasury, ordered designs for a half dollar submitted for approval. Among those sent, the design of A. H. M. Petersen of New Orleans was accepted. This new die, constituting the reverse, was used in conjunction with the regular United States 1861 obverse. Four specimens only were struck on a screw press, as the relief of the new die was too high to be successfully undertaken on a regular coining press. Orders then came to discontinue further operations on account of the difficulty of obtaining bullion, and nothing further was done with the new coinage".

THORNTHWAITE, JOHN, JUNR. (Brit.). Wax Modeller; exhibited at the Society of Artists: 1772. Various models; — 1773. A model of His Royal Highness the Duke of Gloucester; in wax; — Two models of Ladies; — Model of a Gentleman; — 1776. A head in coloured wax.

THRONDSSEN, IVAR (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 87). Mint-engraver at Christiania, 1878-1918; born in 1853. His productions include: Medal on the Centenary of 1814, with bust of King Haakon VII in a medallion on obv. and medallions of seven Norwegian notabilities around representation of a Building &c.; 61 mill. ; — Centenary commemorative medal of the Norwegian University of Dronheim, 1911; — 25th Year Jubilee of the Sulitelma Copper Company, Norway, 1917; — Centenary of the City of Grimstead, Norway; — Norwegian Athletic Club, with bust on obv. of King Haakon; — 1917, Kings of Norway, Sweden and Denmark, $\text{Æ. } 40 \text{ mill.}$

"Throndsen resigned his position as Chief-engraver to the Norwegian mint in 1918, an office he had held for forty years. He was at his best in designing medals, some of the most widely known commemorating the Accession of King Haakon and the 1914 Jubilee Exposition. He has designed nearly 400 medals, and usually employed subjects from the Greek and Norse mythology, subjects which the younger generation perhaps not always fully understood, but which bear witness of an artistic genius. He has designed 37 medals for the 17th of May Celebrations, the first one in 1880 and the last one in 1917. It is not Norway alone that has been benefited by Mr. Throndsen's genius as a designer of medals. He has received orders from as widely different points as America and South Africa. Mr. Throndsen is 65 years old". (The Numismatist, 1918, p. 358, where a sketch of him in his studio is given.)

TURNER, E. (Austr.). Engraver, whose signature occurs on a Badge of the 28th Austrian Infantry Division, 1916; $\text{Æ. } 41 \times 26 \text{ mill.}$

TIBALDI, C. (Ital.). Engraver of Naples. A medal of Dante (Scuola Dantesca of Naples, 1867) bears his signature.

TICHY (Austr.). Signature on a Badge of the 16th Royal Hungarian Honved Infantry Regiment, 1914-1917; $\text{Æ. } 44 \times 31 \text{ mill.}$

TIENEN, GERARD VAN (Flem.). Counterfeiter of money, at Malines, about 1374-75.

TIFFANY & CO. (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 94). Additional productions by this firm: — Challenge cup for schools; award medal, 1871; — Discovery of the open Polar Sea; — Presentation medal of the New York Chamber of Commerce to Cyrus W. Field; — Tercentenary of New York City, 1914; $\text{Æ. } 77 \text{ mill.}$; — Unveiling of Statue of Joan of Arc, 1915; spade-shaped plaque, 35×28 mill.; — Brady Memorial Medal, American Museum of Safety. Award to Boston Elevated Railway, 1914; 77 mill. (several varieties); — 1858, Laying Atlantic Cable, Æ. 69 mill. — 1907, Jamestown Tercentenary, Æ. 62 mill. — 1915, One Hundredth Anniversary of Peace among English Speaking Peoples, Æ. 64 mill.

TJAM SAM KO (Chinese). Counterfeited Dutes of Java, 1797.

TIOLIER, PIERRE JOSEPH (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 102). The Engraver-general of the Paris Mint, 1802-1816, was also responsible for the coinage of King Jérôme Napoleon for Westphalia, minted at Cassel and Clausthal 1808-1813.

TIPA (Ital.). The brothers Tipa of Trapani, Sicily, "forged merrily ancient gems" in the eighteenth century. Cf. Duffield Osborne, Engraved gems, p. 191.

TOBON-MÉJIA, MARCO (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 107). Exhibited at the Paris Salon 1914: Plaquette of the Santarrosa Schools; — Prière; — Portrait; — Portrait of Dr Restrepo, president of Colombia; — Medal of Antonieta Gonzalez y Perez; — L'Eveil de la Columbie; — Muse; — Portrait, after Piero della Francesca; — Head, after a drawing by Leonardo da Vinci; — and other plaquettes and medals.

TODMAN (TO DMAH) (Brit.). This signature occurs on Prize Medals of the Brighton and Sussex Horticultural-Agricultural Society, established in 1833. Mr J.H. Daniels, of Brighton, has one silver and two bronze specimens awarded in 1827 and 1828 respectively. One of the bronze pieces has a plain edge, the other has an edge with double groove; they were awarded for the successful growing of peaches, red currants, etc.

TOLSA, MANUEL (Span.). Sculptor of the latter end of the eighteenth century and beginning of the nineteenth. Pupil of the Academy of San Carlos, Valencia, and San Fernando, Madrid. Appointed Professor to the Mexican Academy, 1790. In Mexico he executed the equestrian statue of King Carlos IV, 1803, which is represented on various medals by Gil and other artists.

TOMKINS, W. (Brit.). Gem-engraver. Exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1799, 1801, 1804, 1806, 1808, 1809, 1810, 1811 and 1812, chiefly intaglios, which are not described in the Catalogue.

TONELLI, DOMENICO A. (Ital.). Sculptor; exhibited a Portrait-medallion in bronze at the Royal Academy, 1889, and another of Miss S. Martin, 1890.

TONNELIER, GEORGES (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 112). Exhibited at the Paris Salon 1914: L'amour essayant ses ailes, statuette agate saphirine de l'Uruguay.

TORELL (or TOREL), WILLIAM (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 114). This famous goldsmith did the images of Queen Eleonora, one still at Westminster Abbey. He also probably engraved her seal, which is very like her effigy. He was working certainly from 1290 to 1300 and was a goldsmith of London. The fullest account of Torel is probably in W.R. Lethaby's "Westminster Abbey and the King's Craftsmen", 1908.

TORFF, EMIL (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 114). Additional medals by this artist: Centenary of Franz Liszt, 1911; — Plaquettes and medals of Liszt, Æ 60 mill. — Wagner, Æ 60 mill. — Humperdinck, Æ 60 mill. — Mozart, Æ 60 mill. — Beethoven, Æ 60 mill. — Haydn, Æ 60 mill. — Bach, Æ 60 mill. — Chopin, Æ 60 mill. — Fritz Reuter, Æ 120×52 mill. — Tannhäuser, Æ 60 mill. — All issued by the Aves Münze (A. Werner und Söhne) Berlin.

TORRENT (Span.). Engraver of the reverses of medals commemorating the Marriage of Alfonso XII. and Maria de los Mercedes, 1878; obv. by E. Noney y Galves.

TORRES CASINA (Span.). Designer of the medal engraved by G. Sala, and published by Feu, commemorating the Exhibition of Villanueva y Geltru, 1882.

TRAVANI, GIOACCHINO FRANCESCO (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 129).

This artist is also the author of a Portrait-medal of Pope Clement X, anno IV (1674); R. INTERCEDITE PRO NOBIS—ROMA. The two Apostles; diam. 35 mill.

TRENT, NEWBURY A. (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 132). Exhibited at the Royal Academy 1914 a silver Portrait-plaque of Gerald du Maurier.

TRENTACOSTE, DOMENICO (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 132). By this Engraver are the dies for the Jubilee Coinage of Italy, 1911.

TRAUTZL Prof. (Austr.). Sculptor and Medallist of Vienna. By him is a medal on the Protection of Arts; iron, 50 mill.

TRESTED, RICHARD (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 132). Mr. Edgar H. Adams gives the following supplementary details on this Die-sinker in The Numismatist, August 1913, p. 403.

"Perhaps less is known of the above than any of the other early New York die makers, yet at one period he was about the only maker of dies in New York City. The only information left behind him that seems to be obtainable are the store cards bearing his name and the one other token which contains his signature, viz., the celebrated and extremely rare Castle Garden token.

"Some years ago, when the collection of Benjamin Betts was disposed of by Lyman H. Low the statement was made in the catalogue by Mr. Low in reference to Mr. Trested's store cards that "Richard Trested's Directory record extends from 1847 when at 35½ White Street; to 1859 at 68 William Street, where the three cards were probably issued. His name last appears in 1860 at 38 William Street. Chas. I. Bushnell publishes the above tokens in his list of New York cards in 1858, but the cutting of the dies for the Castle Garden token (which bears Trested's name) unquestionably antedates the earliest year here given."

"Mr. Low was both right and wrong in his surmises. He was right in thinking that the Castle Garden token was cut very much earlier, but wrong in the statement that Mr. Trested's Directory record extended from 1847. It is not probable that the Trested referred to in 1847 was a die cutter, although he may have been a son of Richard Trested.

"The first mention of Richard Trested's name is found in the Directory of New York City for 1821; which contained his advertisement. It read:

"R. Trested, Engraver, No. 70 William Street, Engraves Office, Society, and Notary Public Seals, Medal, Military and Ornamental Dies, Visiting and Professional Cards, Stamps, Types, and Ornamental Punches, Door Plates, Book Binders' Tools, &c., &c.

"Ladies and Gentlemen's Visiting Cards elegantly embossed with borders, either to their present or new plates.

"A rich assortment may be seen by applying as above.

"In the 1823-4 Directory we find Mr. Trested at 68 William Street; in that of 1825, 1826, and 1827, at the same address, but in 1828 and 1829 his addresses are given as 68 William Street and 76 Maiden Lane.

"In the Directory of 1829 and 1830 his name is no longer to be found, and in its place is that of "Trested, Ann, widow of Richard, 95 Delancey."

There is no further mention of the name Trested in the Directory until that of 1844-5, when we see again the name of Ann Trested, widow of Richard, 246 Seventh. Again no mention till 1848-9, when we find that of Richard H. Trested, plater, 35½ White Street, home in Brooklyn.

"Noticing the coincidence of Wright and Bale's first address with that of 68 William Street, I conjectured that this new firm had bought the business of Richard Trested, and a search of the New York newspapers of 1829 resulted in the discovery of the following advertisement, which appeared in the New York Morning Courier and Enquirer of May 25, 1829:

"The public is respectfully informed that the Business of Engraving and Die Sinking, which was formerly conducted by Richard Trested, deceased, will be conducted by Wright and Bale, at the old establishment, 68 William St., New York."

"Thus will be noted the first business adventure of a firm of die sinkers that played such an important part in the production of medals during the first part of the nineteenth century in this city.

"Not only did they purchase Mr. Trested's business, but a study of their early works will reveal the use of the punches used by the former. In particular we call attention to the rare medal of Benjamin Franklin, on one side of which is the business advertisement of Wright and Bale, at 68 William Street, and also the excessively rare store card issued by John Stevens of Hoboken, the only known specimen of the latter being in the collection of the American Numismatic Society of New York City, as also is the very rare little store card issued by John Barker, Maiden Lane, New York, with the bust of Washington on the obverse.

"Mr. Trested undoubtedly cut the dies for the very rare and desirable Castle Garden token, which bears the name of "Trested". He also did the lettering on the Erie Canal medal designed by Durand and Wright.

"No other works of his are definitely known except the store cards, all of which are rare".

TREU, PHILIPP JAKOB (Swiss). Medallist and Public Notary at Basle (1761-1825); is said to have played an important role as Medallist during the passage of the Allies, by reproducing the features not of the allied monarchs only, but of their suites also down to the most menial officials. He had previously worked for Napoleon, and modelled amongst other works a small bronze bust and a Portrait-medallion in alabaster of the King of Rome, for which he received due recognition. The Basle Museum preserves a collection of impressions in plaster by him. Beside these the following noteworthy productions by the artist are recorded: Bronze Bust of the King of Rome (signed: F.C. Napoléon, né à Paris le 20 mars 1811, sculpté d'après nature à Meudon au printemps 1812 par Treu de Bâle); — Portrait-medallion in bronze of Archduke John of Austria (dated 1815, executed in Paris); — Medal of Burgomaster Bernhard Sarasin, in silver; — Alabaster Medallion with the Artist's own portrait; — Portrait-medallions of the three allied Monarchs, 1814, modelled on the occasion of the Passage of the Allies, etc.

TREZZO, JACOPO DA (B. D. M., Vol. VI, p. 132). M. Jean Babelon has recently consecrated to this artist an interesting monograph (Jacopo da Trezzo et la construction de l'Escorial. Essai sur les arts à la cour de Philippe II. 1519-1589 [Bibliothèque de l'École des Hautes Études Hispaniques, fasc. III. Bordeaux, 1922]). From this we cull the following details: Jacopo Nizzola belonged to a family which came from Trezzo, a small town on the Adda, and according to the custom of the time he took the name of his place of origin. He was born in Milan about 1514; nothing precise is known of his parents nor of his youth. One may presume that he was a pupil of the same Master as Leone Leoni. He practised the art of the jeweller and gem-engraver and lived in Milan until about 1554. At this date he entered into the service of Philip II. He may have been a member of the first embassy sent to Mary Tudor in December 1553 with jewels and gifts. He sojourned in Brussels from 1556 to 1559 and left afterwards for Spain in the monarch's train. He entertained close relations with Philip II and worked also for Don Carlos and Joan of Portugal. Amongst the King's advisers in the matter of art and building he became one of the most influential and collaborated in the construction of the Escorial.

He was one of the principal authors of the Capilla Mayor of San Lorenzo, the conception of which was due to Juan de Herrera. Jacopo da Trezzo was entrusted with the architectural work, stone decoration, gilding, and general direction on the spot, whilst the decorative part and bronze statues were given to Leone Leoni. The castings were made in Milan by Pompeo Leoni to whom have to be given also the statues of the Mausoleums.

The workshop of Jacopo da Trezzo was situated in Madrid, rua Jacometrezo, where he employed about fifty workmen. It was furnished with machinery of his invention to saw and work hard stones.

Towards the end of his life, Jacopo da Trezzo was assisted in his work by his nephew, Jacopo el Moço, the son of his brother Francesco. His daughter married the sculptor Clemente Birago, who succeeded his father-in-law at his death, which took place suddenly on 23. September 1589.

Eight of the medals of Jacopo da Trezzo are signed; those of Isabella Gonzaga, 1552; — Philip II. and Mary, 1555; — Kevenhuller, 1572; — Ascanio Padula, 1577; — Juan Herrera, 1578, and a certain Paulus, the surname ending in LIONE as far as can be ascertained on the only specimen known of this medal. The signature occurs as IAC. TREZZO; — IAC. TREZ.; — IAC. TREZZO F.; — IAC. TRE.; — IAC. TR. The medal of Philip II signed IAC. TRICI. F. is not the work of Trezzo, as M. Babelon points out, but a satirical medal on the defeat of the Armada, probably executed in Holland.

The style of all these medals resembles that of Leone Leoni, but is less vigorous, and the composition of the reverses is too much studied.

M. Babelon suggests the attribution to Trezzo of the fine medal of Mary of Austria, which is evidently by the same hand as that of Hippolyta Gonzaga of 1550. These two medals and that of Dona Juana cannot be given definitively to Trezzo until undoubted proofs turn up to confirm this attribution. The same may be said of the Granvella medal, which Plon gives to Pompeo Leoni, that of Montagu, and the fine medal of Gianello della Torre, while M. Babelon is inclined to ascribe all three to Trezzo.

M. Babelon also gives to Trezzo the cameo representing Dawn, in the Vienna Cabinet, the cameo with the Fountain of Sciences, a number of portraits of Philip II, the medallion of Queen Anne, etc.

Cf. V. Tourneur, Review of M. Babelon's work in Revue belge numismatique, 1923, p. 11; and Dr G.F. Hill, in Num. Chronicle, 1923, p. 164. "Fortnum attributes to this artist a very fine portrait of Philip II in the Royal Collection at Windsor Castle (Archaeologia, XLV, pl. IV; The Connoisseur, V, 1903, p. 241), and Kenner agrees in this judgment. The Cabinet des Médailles in Paris has a cameo portrait of the King (Babelon, Catalogue des Camées, n° 979), and in the same place is a remarkable intaglio in topaz with busts of Philip and Don Carlos, regarded as da Trezzo's work (Chabouillet, Catalogue, n° 2489)". TRIEBEL, FREDERICK E. (Amer.). Contemporary Sculptor; exhibited at the American Numismatic Society, New York, 1923, a struck medal, Educational Award, Order of the Sons of Italy, the State of New York.

TRINKLER, Rev. suisse num., XX, p. 383.

TRONO, GUGLIELMO (Italian). Mint-master in Rome 1578-1596.

TRÜMPI (Swiss). Mint-master at Basle, mentioned in 1463.

TRÜMPI (Swiss). Mint-master at Basle, about 1463.

TRYPHON (B. D. M., Vol. VI, p. 146). "Addaios, the poet, has commemorated Tryphon's art in an epigram. The artist appears to have been the court Gem-engraver of Polemon, King of Pontus, and himself evidently a connoisseur. Of his presumptive work we have the famous Marlborough cameo picturing the marriage-procession of Cupid and Psyche and bearing the inscription, ΤΡΥΦΩΝ ΕΠΟΙΕΙ. In spite of Furtwängler's endorsement I feel an instinctive suspicion of this signature. It is engraved in intaglio on a cameo, an easy and common method of modern interpolation, and the epigram might readily have suggested the name" (Duffield Osborne, Engraved Gems, p. 123).

TSERSTEVENS, MARC (Flem.). Mint-master at Antwerp, 1697-1702.

TUA, G. Signature on a cast and uniface medallion of St. Hubert; 155 mill.

TUAILLON, Prof. (Germ.). Contemporary Sculptor residing in Berlin, by whom I have seen a cast medallion commemorating the Centenary of Berlin University.

TUCHMAN, HANS (Germ.). Mint-master in Reichenstein, 1615, and in Bernstadt 1621.

TUCHMAN, JOHN (Germ.). Mint-master in Reichenstein, 1615.

TURIN, JEAN ZANIN (Amer.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, born in Brazil; pupil of Paul Dubois and Vander Stappen.

At the Paris Salon 1914 (Soc. des Art. français) he exhibited several Portrait-plaquettes: Baron de Rio-Branco, a famous Brazilian chancellor; — Olavo Bilac, of the Brazilian Academy; — Pinheiro Machado, vice president of the Brazilian Senate.

TURPIN, PIERRE (French). Mint-master at Angers, 1535-51: pinecone.

TURRY, HUGUET (French). Mint-master at Grenoble, 1543-47: letter T.

TYROLIAN MASTER OF 1518. By this artist who carved in wood the famous Louvre Relief of Emperor Maximilian from Dürer's sketches, and replicas of which exist in bronze and stucco, are also the following medals: 1518. Emperor Maximilian and Franz von Sickingen (Heraeus, XVI, 5), and Franz von Sickingen (Trésor, II, 8).

TZAERN, LIEVIN VAN (Flem.). Mint-master at Maestricht, in conjunction with Pierre Huys, 1526-28.

U

UEBELIN, FRIEDRICH (Swiss). Mint-master at Basle, circ. 1802, buried 16. October 1806. Cf. Carl Roth, in Schweiz. Kstlr-Lex., Suppl., p. 434.

The following details have been kindly communicated to me by Mr. Alb. Ruegg-Karlen: "Basler Münzmeister. War 1772 Raffiner in einem New Yorker Bergwerk, in welcher Eigenschaft er später auch in London arbeitete. Am 9. August 1783 gelangt er mit einer Bittschrift an den Basler Rat um Ausrichtung der dem Münzer früher üblicherweise zugekommenen sechs Viertel Korn, indem sich seine Kundschaft in der Silberschmiedearbeit verlaufen und ab s. zu der Münzbetrieb stille stehe und meint dass "bey so schwerer und an der Feuerhitze zu verrichtender Arbeit etwas Wein recht Väterlich angeleget wäre". Beim Tode Abel Handmanns (1788) verwendet sich für ihm die Meisterschaft der Goldarbeiter umsonst zur Erlangung der freigewordenen Münzmeisterstelle und wird er erst 9. Oct. 1802 in einem Kanzleibericht als Münzmeister erwähnt. 1803 und 1805 führt Ü. wiederholt, doch vergebens Beschwerde bei der Löbl. Haushaltung und dem schweizerischen Landammann um seine Anerkennung als gewesener helvetischer Münzmeister in Basel durchzusetzen und bei der helvetischen Liquidations-Commission die Auszahlung des rückständigen Gehalts von je Frs. 1000. für die Jahre 1798-1801 zu erreichen; als Entgelt erhielt er aber dann vom Rat 1805 die Bewilligung zur Ausprägung von Basler Rappen auf eigene Rechnung. 1805/06 nahm er eine umfangreiche Batzen-Emission (88.288 Stück) vor, zu welchen Andr. Burckhardt 7 paar Stempel und Wilh. Haas 1 paar Stempel gravierte (Alb. Ruegg-Karlen, Staats-Archiv Basel, Münz Acten).

UHLMANN, O. (Amer.). Contemporary Sculptor and Engraver, by whom is a medal struck in commemoration of the canal completed across Cape Cod, 1914. The medal was struck by Reed and Barton, silversmiths, of Taunton, Mass. (U.S.A.).

UTSOND (Norw.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist; designed the Commemoration Two Kroner of the Jubilee Exhibition in Christiania, 1914.

V

V & D. Probably the initials of merchants. They are found countermarked on Cayenne sous.

VAERWYCK, ROSA (Belg.). Contemporary Sculptor of Brussels, who in conjunction with Oscar Sinia modelled the medal of the 'Vieille Flandre' at the International and Universal Exhibition of Ghent, 1913; 55 mill.

VAGNETTI (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 183). There existed three generations of Medallists of the name of Vagnetti. Cav. FRANCESCO VAGNETTI lived in Florence and was the father of Cav. GIOVANNI VAGNETTI, born in 1840. Cf. A. Wolynski, Medaglie die Nic. Copernico, Firenze, 1879.

VAGNON, ANTOINE (French). Mint-master at Grenoble, 1513: letter A.

VALERA LORENZO, JOSÉ (Span.). Silversmith of Santiago in Galicia, by whom are Prize medals of the Santiago Exhibition, undated.

VALINTINE, N. (Brit.). Gem-engraver; exhibited at the Royal Academy 1828 a Portrait of King George IV.; an impression from an intaglio gem.

VALLGREN, VILLE (Finn.) (Cf. B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 188). Contemporary Sculptor; since 1917 he resides in Ahlberga (Finland). In 1919 obtained the title of Professor. By Vallgren are the following Finnish medals: Leo Mechelin; — Albert Edelfelt; — Robert Tigerstedt, and Jean Sibelius.

VALMITJANA, JULIO (Span.). Editor of medals of Barcelona, including: Official medal of the Coronation of the Virgin del Pilar of Saragossa, 1905; — Visit of President Loubet to Madrid, 1905; — School Festival at Barcelona, 1908; — The Catalan Union, 1900, etc.

VANDERNAT, JEAN (Flem.). Mint-master at Louvain, 1489.

VANDERORT, ABRAHAM (Flem.). Appointed Embosser of medals to Charles I, April 1625; in the next month he was ordered to devise patterns for the king's portrait. In July 1625, we are told by Mr. Symonds, "Vanderort was to view the stamps for coins and to lend aid to the engraver, duties which would cause him to be regarded with unfriendly eyes. Although never formally associated with the Mint, he did in fact produce a 20s. gold piece which was commended in high quarters, but the Tower authorities promptly rejected it in 1626, as being unsuited for general circulation". (Hy. Symonds, Engraver of the Tudor and Stuart Periods, Num. Chron., 1913, p. 363.)

VAN OVERBECKE, EUGENE ARTHUR (Flem.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist; exhibited at the Paris Salon, 1920, a frame containing six medals in bronze, mother of pearl and silver.

VANTZAERN, LIEVIN (Flem.). Mint-master at Maestricht, 1517-1528.

VANZO, M. (Amer.). This signature occurs on Medals of Agricultural Show at Rosario de Santa Fé, 1902, 1903.

VARANNES, JEAN DES (French). Mint-engraver at Dijon, during the Ligue: trefoil.

VAREMBERG, MARC (French). Mint-master at Turin, 1538: MV in monogram.

VARENNE, HENRI FRÉDÉRIC (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 203). This artist competed for the new French nickel coinage and issued several Patterns.

VARGHI (Ital.). Gem-engraver at Modena, sixteenth century.

VARICE, PIERRE (French). Mint-master at Amiens, 1557-60.

VARICE, PIERRE (French). Mint-master at Angers, 1557-59: a globe.

VARLEY, J. B. (Brit.). Possibly the painter JOHN VARLEY (1778-1842) or a relative; signed an intaglio Bust on carnelian in the Victoria and Albert Museum. Cf. Dalton, B.M. Cat. of Engraved Gems, LIX.

VASTAERTZOEN, JAN VAN OVERSTEGNE (Dutch). Mint-warden at Dordrecht, 1489-1508.

VAULX, PHILIPPIN DE (French). Mint-master at Montpellier, 1467: marigold.

VEEN, ERNEST VAN (Flem.). Mint-master at Brussels, 1712-1713.

VEGA, REMIGIO DE LA (Span.). Mint-engraver in Madrid under Ferdinand VII, Joseph Napoleon, and again Ferdinand VII. In 1829 he was appointed Chief-engraver, and in 1842 Engraver-general. He died in 1854.

Another Engraver of the same name officiated at the Mint as late as 1883.

BIBLIOGRAPHY. — Antonio Vives, Medallas de la Casa de Borbon, 1916.

VELLANO, BARTOLOMEO (Ital.). In contemporary documents, this artist's name occurs as BELLANO, which name has been adopted by Dr Bode and other modern critics. Vellano flourished circa 1430-1498, and was working at Padua, Florence, and Rome. He was one of the leading Sculptors and Founders of the Paduan school.

VELPE (or VELPEN), HENRI VAN (Flem.). Mint-engraver at Antwerp, Vilvorde, Maestricht, Brussels and Louvain, 1405-1437(?).

VELPE, JEAN VAN (Flem.). Mint-engraver at Louvain, 1471-1474.

VENANCIO, DOMINGOS (Portug.). Engraver of a medal commemorating the Tercentenary of Camoens, 1880.

VERDOYE, ETIENNE (French). Mint-master at Bayonne, 1673.

VERDUSSEN, JEROME (Flem.). Mint-master at Antwerp, 1627-1636.

VERNIER, ÉMILE SÉRAPHIN (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 225). The work of this artist was represented in the Roger Marx Collection by a fine plaque, Jeune fille, Fiancée, Mère; 76 × 45 mill.

Further works: Defence of Verdun, 1916 (official medal issued by the Comité meusien); — Salon 1920: Roll, bronze plaque; — M^{me} V. T, medallion in gilt bronze; — Victoire (breloque, enamelled gold).

VERNON, F. DE (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 235). The Roger Marx Collection sold in Paris, June 1914, included no less than 14 medals and plaquettes by this Medallist.

The late Dr Storer presented amongst others to the Boston Medical Library a Portrait-medal of Dr Armand Gautier, of Paris, 1911, by this artist.

VERNON, probably Rev. William Hardy Vernon (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 240). An intaglio-portrait in sard of the Earl of Buchan, in the Brit. Museum, is signed: VERNON F. (cf. Dalton, Cat. of Engraved Gems, p. 159, no. 1118).

VESTIGO, EUGÈNE (French). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, born in Paris; pupil of Mercié, Auban, Larche and Lorrieux. At the Paris Salon 1914 (Soc. des Art. français) he exhibited a panel containing seven medals.

VIAUD, THÉODORE STÉPHANE (French). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, residing in Paris. Exhibited at the Salon des Artistes français, 1920, several Portrait-medals.

VICENTINO or VALERIO DEI BELLI (B.D.M., Vol. I, 1904, p. 158; VI, p. 265). Duffield Osborne remarks: "Valerio dei Belli was perhaps the most prolific gem-engraver of the sixteenth century and ranked very high until his death in 1546. He was employed by Clement VII and Paul III. His drawing is rather more free than that of Giovanni del Castel Bolognese and his technical skill at least as high, but he had little originality and copied largely from the antique. Portrait cameos and rock-crystal intaglios of sacred and classical subjects, together with numberless gems, both large and small, heads, figures, and historical scenes bore witness to his industry and vogue. WEIDITZ, CHRISTOPH (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 423). Dr Georg Habich, Director of the Munich R. Münzkabinet has published (Studien zur deutschen Renaissance-medaille, IV; Jahrbuch der Kön. Preussischen Kunstsammlungen, 1913, pp. 1-35 + VII Plates) the result of his discoveries concerning the identity and the works of this hitherto unknown artist. He has had the good fortune to be able to point him out as the author of the eighty medals and one model, which had been variously ascribed to an "unknown Augsburg Wood-carver, or Dantiscus", and "Cortezmaster".

Weiditz was a native of Strassburg, where he can be traced until 1524; he then settled in Augsburg in 1526, whereto he always returned from various visits abroad, and where he died in 1560. This Master, who comes between Hans Schwartz and Friedrich Hagenauer, ranks with these among the leaders of German Renaissance medallic art. Unfortunately not a single one of his works is signed.

For documentary evidence and fuller information concerning Weiditz I would refer the reader to Dr Habich's monograph and subsequent article in Die deutschen Medailleure des XVI. Jahrhunderts, 1916.

The artist's work is divided into periods, an arrangement which I shall follow in the nomenclature of the medals attributed to him : Strassburg, 1523-1525.

MONETA.

By Dr Walther Giesecke.

(Translated from the German with the author's kind permission.)

'Monetae' form the most important foundation of every public or private community; 'Monetae' are absolutely necessary for carrying on war; 'Monetae' are moreover a useful commodity in every way. Of this we are certain. We know that the term is derived from the Latin. But what is the Latin origin of the word? This question has been raised by science many a time, but hitherto no satisfactory solution has been brought forward to set all inquiries at rest.

'Moneta' was originally a surname given to the Juno worshipped at a shrine within the precincts of the Capitol in the citadel of ancient Rome. To this goddess was consecrated in early times a small sanctuary, a sacellum, or chapel. But in 343 B.C. a temple was erected in her honour, in accordance with the vow made by L. Furius Camillus a year before at the battle against the Aurunci. Near this temple was afterwards built the first Roman Mint. The Romans had by that time completed the conquest of Campania, and, like the Carthaginians before them and the Egyptians after them, they had become more intimately acquainted with the currencies of the Greeks, and could no longer forego the usage of coined money in the administration of these new provinces. This led to the introduction of a struck coinage in their own land. The sequel was the erection of a Mint in Rome itself, and indeed either in the immediate vicinity of the temple of Juno or annexed to it. Hence the late transition of the name of Moneta to the Mint as the place of mintage on one side and to money as currency on the other. Originally, money was termed pecunia, and coin nummus.

The meaning given by the Romans to Juno as Moneta had scarcely anything to do with minting or the coinage. They looked upon the goddess as the bearer of high spiritual faculties, of mysterious gifts of the mind, as one who admonishes and warns, also as a seer and adviser, and they derived her surname from the word of similar significance, moneo. And no wonder, for was it not, Juno's sacred geese, who by their cackle, signalled the nocturnal attack of the Gauls on the Roman citadel and so caused their defeat?

Later on, when the Romans found themselves involved in a war with Tarentum, Juno Moneta prophesied, that, if the war were a righteous one, money would never fail them. This prophecy was fulfilled. The Romans carried home a huge booty in precious metals, and were enabled, in the years 269-8 B.C., to place their finance on a sound basis badly shaken as it had been by recent disadvantageous wars. From those years dates the new rich mintage of gold, silver and other currency. It would be wrong however, although money is indispensable to warfare, to conclude therefrom that Moneta was a goddess of the Army, a War goddess.

The etymology of Moneta from monere has been also accepted by modern science.

In a paper on the origin of the word Moneta Ernst Assmann has, after a discussion on the present position of the question, clearly demonstrated that the derivation of the word from moneo was simply suggested from the initial sound of the two words, without any serious consideration of such an explanation, which does not rest on any higher plane than any of the other known popular etymologies. A Latin would never have derived habeta from habeo, taceta from taceo, debeta from debeo, and so on. As a goddess who warned or reminded, her surname should have been Monens or Monitrix, but not Moneta.

A point, on which Assmann does not lay sufficient stress, is, that the word moneta presents a passive form of moneo whereas the idea of adviser or warner indicates an active form, a suggestion of trading.

Assmann then further informs us that about the middle of the 4th cent. B.C. a particular Siculo-Punic coin, a tetradrachm inscribed machanath or am machanath became the principal trading currency of the littoral of the Tyrrhenian sea, and that this coin was erroneously termed Moneta. He suggests that the name of the coin was probably first changed by the Sicilian Greeks from machanath into μνητα, and thence passed into the Latin, that particular currency having come into Roman hands as war subsidy in their fight with the Carthaginians, thus explaining how the name Moneta became an epithet of Juno. When the Dictator L. Furius Camillus, during his war against the Aurunci, applied to Rome in 345 B.C. for money, he "propter pecuniam argenti" received the reply, he should help himself, he may have owed his deliverance to this Carthaginian money, and in gratitude have vowed the erection of a temple to Moneta. To explain the connection of Moneta with Juno, Assmann brings into relation the Semitic Astarte, as the "bearer of the whole mercantile traffic between the East and West", and the Juno Serrana in Carthage. Thus Juno Moneta was to have become the Roman goddess of money.

As a supplement to Assmann's memoir, Constanzi later on took up the question again. He opposes the deductions of Assmann, the notion of Juno as a goddess of money, and discards the idea of the personification and deification of the profane medium of exchange of ordinary life. He allows that on account of the depositing of the Carthaginian money in the temple of Juno the latter may have received the surname of temple of Moneta, and he thinks that the name of Moneta as an adorning epithet of Juno in the sense of Admonisher and Adviser only received this interpretation after the word had been brought into connection with monere by popular etymology. He retains the derivation of μνητα from "machanath".

I cannot accept this etymology.

The Carthaginian currency never became, in the sense that Assmann considers it, a trade currency of the Mediterranean. The only currency which could be regarded as such, about the end of the 5th and beginning of the 4th cent. B.C., were the Athenian tetradrachms, the "owls".

At the time when the Dictator L. Furius Camillus vowed, at the battle against the Aurunci, the erection of a temple to Juno, which temple was dedicated in the following year, 344 B.C., the 'owl' and its Mint had lost a good deal of their ancient prestige. Corinth had risen to become the most important trading centre of Greece. Her 'Pegasi' were the current medium of exchange of Greece and Magna Graecia. The Greeks had therefore no necessity to adopt the Punic coinage for their trade currency. This would neither have suited their national pride nor their traditional dislike of everything Punic.

Had not the Carthaginians learned the art of coining at a later date and applied themselves in a general way to imitate in an inferior manner the classical prototypes produced by the Sicilian Greeks? On the other hand, we must allow — an argument, which Assmann did not bring forward in support of his contention — that on the oldest Roman coins: Head of Mars. Rev. ROMA and horse's bust, the rev. type, the horse's bust, was copied from the Carthaginian money, and possibly borrowed from the 'Machanath' coins. These Roman coins however, if they were really issued at that time, do not belong to the Attic standard, but to the weight of 7.27 gr. They were not exchangeable for Punic currency without calculation — at first 12 Roman didrachms were equivalent to 5 Punic tetradrachms. Had the Carthaginian commerce been of so great importance, as suggested by Assmann, on the Tyrrhenian Sea and the Latin coast the Carthaginians would surely have obliged the Romans to adopt the Attic standard, which was predominant, not only in Sicily, but also in wide districts in Southern Italy. A financial help by Carthage to Rome could only be effected by transmission of money in metal bars, as in all such cases it was found the best medium for international exchange. Besides I am not aware of any such transaction having taken place, nor do I know as a numismatic fact of the presence of Carthaginian coins in finds of Roman coins, which might have proved that the Punic-Sicilian issues had found a circulation beyond the proper district they were intended for, namely Sicily and Africa.

There are some exceptions to this rule, to which W. Schulze (in Assmann, p. 478) draws attention, namely the words verecundus and valetudo; and we even find a perfect past participle, which Maurenbrecher has pointed out to me in a private communication, on the oft recurring ablative merito in the old Latin. These are however rare occurrences, which in no way alter the improbability of the conjunction of an active meaning with a passive form of the word.

Further, the Carthaginians did not only strike tetradrachms with the inscription machanath or am machanath, which is translated by "field" or "camp currency", but may well have been the Punic name of a Sicilian city. We possess many more tetradrachms with the most varied Punic inscriptions, as for example, resh melquarib = Cephaloedium, qart chadsat = New Carthage, machasbien ziz, and others. In a far larger quantity than the Machanath coins are preserved to us in particular the ziz coins, which were no doubt struck in far greater numbers. It is therefore unlikely, that under these many descriptions only that of machanath should become the denomination of the entire species¹.

Probably it would be more possible to find a connection between moneta and the Assyrian manu = to reckon, and mēnu or minūtu, "Number", as also with the Egyptian manō. These word formations are in their turn allied with the Aramaic manab, which also means, "to reckon"². From the last is originated the borrowed Greek word μνα, the Latin mina, the Mina, an appellation for certain specific weights. Through another channel also, possibly the Phoenician, moneta might have been derived from this North-Semitic group of words. For such a derivation we, however, lack the support of real evidence.

Having so far demonstrated that all previous endeavours to explain the word moneta have led to no satisfactory result, we must find another way to obtain a solution.

We know, as a fact, that with the Greeks, the corporations of priests were the patrons and protectors of the correct measures and weights. The weight standards and measure standards, were preserved in the temples, as on the Acropolis in Athens, in the sacred places at Olympia and Eleusis. They often were themselves held as sacred and bore the inscription IERON, or as at Olympia ΔΙΟΣ ΙΕΡΟΝ. Duplicates could be procured at any time, and others could be tested and compared in the temples³.

When a community or a people passed over from barter to currency, it was easy to reach the Mint places, where correct weights were kept and where such could be accurately made. It is therefore not unlikely that the Temple of Juno Moneta, before it became a Mint, was the place where the previously needed measures and weights were preserved, and that the surname Moneta is connected with this property. I do not think it wrong therefore to look for a connection between the word Moneta and the expression for the unity, the Norm, that is with the root mon which lies at the foundation of Greek words μόνος, μονάς, μονότης etc., and to suggest the origin of the word moneta from these, and derive it especially from μονάς.

Μονάς is the Unit, the Normal or Standard weight and Standard measure. Thus we find described by a little known metrologist the smallest measure of length, the ῥακτυλός, as ἀρχὴ καὶ οἶον μονάς. Otherwise also the smallest, indivisible weight or measure, for instance, the κεράτιον described as μονάς. In Volusius Maecianus' Distributio the Roman As, the unit of the Roman coinage, is similarly described.

The word As has nothing in common with aes, the brass or copper, from which these coins were struck, but is derived from the Greek εἰς or εἰς μόνος, for which in Doric, for instance at Tarentum, the form ξ occurs. One may therefore suppose that here also, there is some connection, between μονάς and As, which both stand for the Unit.

Moneta has the same meaning. When for instance the Grammaricus Hyginus speaks of a pes monetalis or a mensura monetalis medimni, the adjective there has surely nothing to do with a Mint, or with the production of such⁴.

It describes here simply the standard measure, and can only be correctly translated as "Norma"⁵.

These Norms, the standard weights and standard measures were preserved on the Capitoline Rock in the Temple of Juno and were held as sacred and inviolable.

Amphora fit cybus hic, quam ne violare liceret,
Sacravere Jovi Tarpeio in monte Quirites, sings Priscian in his "Carmen de ponderibus", and on the Farnese Congius, preserved in Dresden, we find under the name of the Emperor Vespasian by whose authority manifestly the standard weight commission issued its certificates, the descriptive inscription reads: MENSURAE EXACTAE IN CAPITOLIO PX⁶.

As to-day the prototype standard Metre and Kilogram are preserved at the International Office of Weights and Measures at Breteuil near Paris, and the standard Measures of the German Reich, made after the Paris standards, are kept at the 'Normal Eichungskommission' in Berlin, so in the early days of the Roman Empire, the pes monetalis, the as monetalis and the original standard measures were laid to rest in the Temple of Juno Moneta. As we infer from the inscription on the Farnese Congius the corporation of priests filled lawfully the functions and office of the standard measure commission.

Μονάς and Moneta are in meaning one and the same thing — the Unit or Norm.

We may well think of Juno in the acceptance of a μονάθρα or μονάθρα conservans and suppose that the name of Juno Moneta was evolved on this wise, and in consequence it would not be ruled out that the word Moneta may have been borrowed from the Greek μονότης, however untraceable to us. In a similar way the Latin metreta was copied from the Greek μετρέτης, the usual measure for liquids. The interweaving of such a transformation on the contracted form μονάθρα seems quite possible. We may once more, in this connection, refer to the Greek word, μονότης, which also represents the Unit. In it lies at any rate a construction strongly related to the Latin Moneta.

In view of the clear, practical, useful and purposeful character of the Romans, and in view also of their strongly developed sense of Law and Right, it is only natural to find that they entrusted the preservation and administration, for the common weal, of things so important as the standard measures and weights to the protection of a great divinity. This divinity they have in the course of time assimilated in their language with the visible objects she was protecting. But there need not have been any peculiar characteristic of Juno to connect her with this attribution. The notion of Juno as Moneta need not have rested on any clear exterior and possibly accidental connection of the standard measures office with the Temple of Juno. It may well have been that the priesthood of the Temple of Juno, — which temple stood on the citadel rock long before the goddess became Moneta — had from early times occupied themselves with the study of metrology, and with its principles and applications to everyday life. And when, forced by the expansion of trade and commercial intercourse and the extension of the economic conditions of the state, it became necessary to erect a great public Standard Measures Office, part of its functions were transferred to the priests, who at this time or soon after, received the commission to build an independent Minting place. So the priests of Juno erected the Officina Monetae on the Arx upon solid ground, high above the protecting quarries of tufa, on the side of the dwelling house of Manlius Capitolinus, who had suffered capital punishment for high treason. And when in 345 B.C. the Dictator Camillus in the battle against the Aurunci vowed a temple to Juno such a temple was only the embodiment of a measure urgently needed on account of the new economic conditions of the state, and which had to be surrounded with all the usual religious forms and ceremonies. Perhaps the account given by Livy is nothing more than a belated confirmation of a public event, as it represented itself in the fancy of the narrator.

When once the temple of Juno was erected and in it the goddess was honoured and celebrated as the Protectress of the μονάθρα, and when at the same time the Mint was put in activity under her protection, it may well be that two different ways of looking at the matter set in, so that on the one hand Moneta was brought into line with the name of the goddess as foretelling and forewarning, in consequence of the erroneous but near related connection of her surname with the word moneto; and on the other hand, that the word Moneta used alone or in some other connection erroneously represented the Mint and later even the production of the latter.

There are many instances in the earliest mythology of the Romans in which we observe the evolution of an important comprehension of the Deity from a sober notion to one of practical life. The protecting god of boundaries, Terminus, rose from a similar trend of thought as the standard measure protectress, Juno Moneta.

From Galba onwards the notion of Moneta became blended in that of Aequitas, the protectress of everything right and just, bonum et aequum.

Both goddesses are represented on the large copper coins of that time, holding a pair of scales and a cornucopiae, as symbols; Aequitas occurs also with scales and a measure, the pertina.

Of a still later period, namely that of the Emperor Commodus, A.D. 176-192, we have a coin with the inscription APOL. MONE-TAE and the representation of a god, in nude state. Have we to do here with an advising, warning god, or was the god the Protector of the Standard weights and measures and of the Mint.

I will now let these lines take their flight into the world. May they contribute to the elucidation of a question which has long puzzled science, and help to bring in natura to the firm of my publisher and friend of many years' standing that with which I have prefaced in verbo the present monograph. CHARLES II. FARTHING, 1671-1679.

1. — FARTHING, 1671.

O. — Legend: — CAROLVS. A. CAROLO. (Charles, the son of Charles). A full stop after CAROLO. The last O of CAROLO opposite the end of the upper hanging ribbon. The continuity of the legend is interrupted by the head of the monarch. Bust of the King in profile and looking to the left. His Majesty's hair is long, thick, curly, and wavy. He is wearing a wreath of laurel. The laurel wreath of eight leaves has its ends united at the rear of the head by ribbon which is tied into a knot, the hanging parts being plain. The King is wearing a cuirass. The whole within an ornamented rim.

R. — Legend: — BRITANNIA with a full stop after it. The continuity of the legend is interrupted by the head of Britannia, her right hand and olive branch, and the upper part of her spear. Emblem of Britannia looking to the left. She is draped and seated, but her right leg is bare below the knee. Her right hand holds a branch of olive, and her left hand a spear. On her right a garnished convex oval shield bearing the cross of Saint George and the saltire of Saint Andrew, united, but not heraldically coloured. The cross of Saint George is not fimbriated. In the exergue, the date, 1671. The whole within an ornamented rim.

E. — Plain.

2. — FARTHING, 1671.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, and the last O of CAROLO is in contact with the end of the upper hanging ribbon.

3. — FARTHING, 1672.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, a space between the last O of CAROLO and the end of the upper hanging ribbon, and the date is 1672.

4. — FARTHING, 1672.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, less space between the last O of CAROLO and the end of the upper hanging ribbon, and the date is 1672, with less space between the numerals.

5. — FARTHING, 1672.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, less space between the last O of CAROLO and the end of the upper hanging ribbon, and the date is 1672, with more space between the numerals.

6. — FARTHING, 1672.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, the last O of CAROLO is in contact with the end of the upper hanging ribbon, no stop after BRITANNIA, and the date is 1672, with less space between the numerals.

7. — FARTHING, 1673.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, the last O of CAROLO is in contact with the end of the upper hanging ribbon, and the date is 1673.

8. — FARTHING, 1673.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, the last O of CAROLO is in contact with the end of the upper hanging ribbon, and the date is 1673, with less space between the numerals.

9. — FARTHING, 1673.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, the last O of CAROLO is in contact with the end of the upper hanging ribbon, and the date is 1673, with more space between the numerals.

10. — FARTHING, 1673.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, the last O of CAROLO is opposite the space between the upper and lower hanging ribbons, and the date is 1673.

11. — FARTHING, 1673.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, the L of CAROLO is in contact with the end of the upper hanging ribbon, the last O of CAROLO is opposite the space between the upper and lower hanging ribbons, and the date is 1673, with less space between the numerals.

12. — FARTHING, 1673.

Similar to 1, but CAROLA instead of CAROLO, and the date is 1673.

I much regret I am unable to publish a detailed description of this variety as I have not seen a specimen for many years.

13. — FARTHING, 1674.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, the last O of CAROLO is opposite the space between the upper and lower hanging ribbons, and the date is 1674.

14. — FARTHING, 1674.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, the last O of CAROLO is in contact with the end of the lower hanging ribbon, and the date is 1674.

15. — FARTHING, 1674.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, the last O of CAROLO is opposite the space between the upper and lower hanging ribbons, there is less space between the letters of BRITANNIA, and the date is 1674, with less space between the numerals.

16. — FARTHING, 1675.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, the last O of CAROLO is in contact with the end of the upper hanging ribbon, and the date is 1675.

17. — FARTHING, 1675.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, the last O of CAROLO is opposite the space between the upper and lower hanging ribbons, and the date is 1675, with less space between the numerals.

18. — FARTHING, 1675.

Similar to 1, but no stop after CAROLO, the last O of CAROLO is opposite the space between the upper and lower hanging ribbons, and the date is 1675, in larger numerals, with more space between them.

19. — FARTHING, 1676.

Similar to 1, but dated 1676.

Many years have elapsed since I saw a specimen of this Farthing. It was in the collection of my friend the late Mr. Henry Brown of 31, Renshaw Street, Liverpool. I think it had been produced by the die maker inverting the figure nine when he was making a reverse die for the Farthing dated 1679. I may add that Mr. Brown concurred with my opinion. He was a very keen and clever numismatist and his death on February 4th, 1899, was much regretted by his friends in Lancashire.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETIES, MUSEUMS, &c.

YORKSHIRE NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

An Ordinary Meeting of the above Society was held on March 28th last in the City Museum, Leeds, the President, Mr. Frank Heeley, occupying the chair. For his presidential address, Mr. Heeley chose as his subject "A Chat on Roman Coins". Dealing with the coins in the three metals, Mr. Heeley remarked upon the high standard of purity maintained in the Roman gold series, the metal containing no more than 4% of alloy. The Romano-Campanian series of silver coins was next dealt with, the reader inclining to the opinion that these were struck at Capua, the principal city of Campania, and were first issued when the Romans established themselves in this province about 342 B.C. The first purely Roman silver coins, denarii, quinarii, and sestertii, were issued 268 B.C., during the few years of peace which the Romans enjoyed at the end of the Samnite wars. Attention was drawn to the serrated denarii prevalent about the middle of the second century B.C., and the plated coins of the later Republican period and the reigns of the Emperors Nero and Claudius, passing reference being made to the gradual debasement of the silver coinage during the first century A.D., and its recovery under Diocletian (254-305). The early bronze coins from 450 B.C., those struck at the provincial mints in Gaul, Spain, Sicily, and the East, the portraits on the Imperial series, and the varieties of reverses, were all alluded to in a very able manner, and the paper was well illustrated by a large exhibit of coins from the President's cabinet. Mr. Heeley was heartily thanked for his interesting contribution on the motion of Mr. T. Pickersgill, seconded by Mr. W. Sykes.

The Hon. Secretary, Mr. Frank Varley, read a paper, "Notes on the Copper Coinage of Russia" in which the gradual improvement in the workmanship employed, was well illustrated by specimens from his collection. A cordial vote of thanks to the Hon. Secretary was passed on the motion of Mr. J.F. Musham, seconded by Mr. J. Digby Firth.

Other exhibits were made and described as follows: — By Mr. J. Digby Firth F.L.S.: — German 5, 10, and 50 Rentenpfennig pieces from the Berlin Mint, and 1 and 3 Marks from the Hamburg Mint, all dated 1924. British West Africa sixpence and shilling in brass, struck by the Kings Norton Metal Company (1920 and 1922); Senegal 10 Centimes (aluminium); Japanese Yen with Chinese chop-marks; and Hamburg 1/100 Mark, dated 1923, in aluminium.

By Mr. T. Sheppard M.Sc.: — A bronze excavation medal bearing on obverse a pick, theodolite, skull, urn, etc., and on the reverse "Opened by A. Pitt Rivers, F.R.S., 1895."

By Mr. J.F. Musham F.E.S.: — Set of money scales by Henry Neale, London; Automatic balance stamped T.B. = Thomas Beach, Birmingham, interesting as giving the (hitherto unknown) name of the maker of a fairly common type of coin-balance. Sovereign balance by Harrison, mounted in a case; Gold and Silver brass balance and coin gauge, on a sliding standard, by Edward Greaves; Henry VIII gold crown weight, 1582, struck by Cornelius Janssens of Anvers; and a recently issued Manual of Money-Weights, by A. Dieudonné, Paris.

By Mr. W. Sykes: — A selection of Russian coins.

By Mr. T. Pickersgill: — A large collection of Roman bronze and silver coins.

By Mr. J. Wright: — Proof Set of William Wyon's 6 d., 1/-, 2/6 and 5/- Proof Set of Manx Coins, and Silver Proof of Bank of Ireland 6/- token, 1804.

By Mr. H. Armstrong: — Several Scotch silver coins.

By Mr. T.S. Hall: — A well-illustrated and well-preserved work on Italian Medals, published in 1571.

Sympathetic reference was made to the death of Mr. J.E. Bedford, F.S.A., F.G.S., at one time Vice-President of the Society.

THE KENT NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

Mr. Walter H. Day presided at the Maidstone Museum on Friday May 8th 1925, when Mr. E.A. Horton gave an instructive paper on "Norman and Tudor Pennies", illustrated by specimens from his collection. Among other interesting facts mentioned by the lecturer was one which explained the reason of so many varieties in the coinage of Edward I., II., and III., which was due to the various parts of the design being struck by several separate punches, and not by single dies as at present. Lord Grantley, of Weeke Manor, Winchester, was elected a member of the Society, on the proposition of the President, Mr. J. Shirley Fox, R.B.A., F.R.N.S. Among the coins exhibited were the following: — Mr. J.W. Bridge, a collection of early pennies, including those of Julius Cæsar, Mark Antony, Archbishop Ceolnoth, Alfred the Great, Canute, Edward the Confessor, William the Conqueror, Henry I., and Stephen, together with the "Tribute Penny" of the Bible, and a coin struck by Augustus Cæsar, bearing on the reverse a representation of Halley's Comet, then supposed to be the spirit of Julius Cæsar in heaven. Mr. E.T. Clark showed a sovereign of Victoria bearing the last date of the first issue, with the young head and the Jubilee year date 1887, and with St. George and the Dragon on the reverse instead of the shield. Dr. Spencer Edwards exhibited some Australian, New Zealand, and Tasmanian Tradesmen's tokens of the 19th century, and a third of a farthing was shown by Mr. H. Risch. It was decided to exhibit a collection of English silver crowns in the Museum case, and the meeting was closed after a very hearty vote of thanks had been passed to Mr. Horton for his paper.

AUSTRALIAN NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

The Annual Meeting was held at the Society's Room, B.M.A. Building, 30 Elizabeth Street, Sydney, on Thursday, 19th March, 1925, at 8 p.m., Mr. R.H. Paynter in the chair.

There were nine members present. Apologies were received from Dr. G.H. Abbott and Mr. P.J. Marks.

The following Officers were elected: — President, Dr. G.H. Abbott; Vice-Presidents, Hon. J. Lane Mullins, M.L.C., Mr. R.H. Paynter; Hon. Treasurer, Mr. P.J. Marks; Hon. General Secretary, Mr. C.J.V. Weaver; Corresponding Secretary, Mr. A.W. Green; Members of Council, Mr. E. Wills, Mr. F. Miles; Auditor, Mr. J. McNeill.

Annual Report.

The Society has had a very successful year. The Papers and the exhibits have been of a very high standard.

The President, Dr. G.H. Abbott, has been to the fore as usual with some very fine specimens and his addresses on the various exhibits have been most interesting and instructive.

Mr. H.E. Parkes, who was elected Corresponding Secretary at the last Annual Meeting resigned the position. This is to be regretted as he always took a very great interest in the work and was enthusiastic to a degree. The Society can ill afford to lose such a useful member and it is to be hoped he may again take up the work.

The following have read papers during the year: —

Mr. H.E. Parkes, On the "Purchasing power of money in time of James I". Dr. G.H. Abbott, On "Ships on Medals and Coins", on the "Coins of Cos", "Notes on some interesting coins". Mr. D. Raymond, On "Coin finds". Mr. C.V. Weaver, On "A Review of an Archaic Tetradrachm of Syracuse". On "Deserters from Currency". Hon. J. Lane Mullins, On "Some portrait medals of Victoria".

The following exhibited specimens: Messrs. E. Wills, W.J. McNeill, Judge Hamilton, Messrs. H.E. Parkes, C. Weaver, H. Priestley, D. Raymond, P. Larsen, Miss Tietkins, Messrs. J. Hillman, P.J. Marks, Mrs. Reynolds, and Mr. Mills.

One feature of the year was the interest displayed by the ladies in the work of the Society. It is indeed a great pleasure to have them with us, it must tend to enhance the educational work which the Society is trying to carry out.

The Society is very happy in its new quarters, the members deeply appreciate the action of the President in securing them.

The finances, owing to the able handling of our Hon. Treasurer, Mr. P.J. Marks, are in a very flourishing condition.

In conclusion, it is to be hoped that the members will make a special effort to increase our membership and induce others to become interested in the work of the Society.

Mr. C.J.V. Weaver exhibited a Tetradrachm of Syracuse B.C. 480.

The Chairman, Mr. R.H. Paynter, gave an interesting account of the history of Syracuse, B.C. 200.

SOCIÉTÉ DE NUMISMATIQUE DU NORD DE LA FRANCE.

A new Society has been recently created under the title as above. Its seat is at Lille; 7, Rue de la Bassée; President: Hugo de Cort; Secretary: Max Crepy.

The first scientific meeting took place on May the 7th and was attended by most of the founders.

M. de Jaeghere communicated a fine and rare medal of the delivery of Vienna in 1683 and remembered its description given several years ago by his late father.

M. Hugo de Cort showed an important set of copper coins issued at Namur by the Bavarian Elector Maximilian-Emmanuel in the name of Philippe V as Duke of Brabant (1709 to 1710) and described new interesting varieties of these "liards" and "double-liards".

VARIA.

NUMISMATICS IN PARLIAMENT

Sir C. Oman (C. Oxford University) called attention to the unsatisfactory condition of the silver coinage of the realm, and moved: "That this House considers the present state of the silver currency of the realm unsatisfactory, and is of opinion that its standard of purity should be raised, and the designs on the reverses of the various pieces replaced by others of greater artistic merit and historical interest."

The crisis which led to the Bill for the abasement of silver currency, he said, had passed away, and silver, which in 1920 was worth 83d. per oz. declined in April, 1920, to 72d.; and gradually until now it stood at 31½ d. per oz. To-day it would be possible to coin silver shillings at a profit of 8d. or 9d. each; whilst the debased shillings gave a profit of 10½ d. each. But it was not worth while to have a speckled currency which it was a shame to look upon (Cheers).

He passed to members for their inspection a case of recently minted coins which had become discoloured. Two silver coins in the collection, he said, were mistaken in the dark for pennies.

HISTORY OF THE ALLOYS.

Owing to considerable discontent the Mint made a series of experiments with other alloys. The result was that they got a coin which, when it lost its outer coating of silver, became a coin of saffron yellow. Following another set of experiments the milling of the coin broke up. During the Coalition Administration a coin was, he thought, quite appropriately and characteristically made of several alloys (Laughter).

In 1924 a new alloy was tried with a copper inside, and when the surface was worn away a bright red was discovered. This was during the Socialist régime (Laughter). It looked as if the Socialist Government were producing red money (Renewed laughter). Worthless looking money was very bad for mankind. A coinage with a red mottled appearance must have a very bad moral effect on the public. Was it not possible to revert to the old standard instead of continuing the issue of "this horrible stuff"?

The Mint was at present striking large quantities of silver money for the Bolshevik Government of Russia, in the proportion of 75 per cent. silver to 25 per cent. alloy, and striking it very well. Was it really quite consistent with national self-respect that the British Government should be coining a better quality of silver for the Soviet Government than it did for our own country? It did not square with his idea of the dignity of the Empire and of the Royal Mint.

Mr. Guinness (Financial Secretary to the Treasury) produced a £1 note and told Sir Charles Oman that the design was copied from the sovereign.

UNSPORTSMANLIKE ST. GEORGE.

Sir Charles Oman said that on the sovereign St. George was a muscular man on a sturdy horse, and the Dragon was lying with its legs in the air. On the £1 note St. George was behaving in a very unsportsmanlike way; he was attacking the Dragon from behind, and his spear was coming out of the creature's crop (Laughter). The Dragon's wings were too small to carry a bat. It was, in fact, a scaly ostrich. Its legs were so short that it could not run fast. For an armed man to attack a creature that could not rise and could not run away was unsportsmanlike. It was all typical of official art.

As regards the picture of the Houses of Parliament on the back, it was more suitable for the side of a biscuit box, with some such words as "House of Commons Crackers" thereon. He wanted to plead for a large coin, a crown piece, which should have on it the device of Britannia holding out an olive branch and round her the memorable words which the present Premier quoted only a few weeks ago: "Give peace in our time, O Lord!" A precedent for the use of an inscription in English was to be found in the shillings and half-crowns of 1649-50, on which were the words "God with us."

Captain Bourne (C. Oxford), in seconding, said that a debased coinage was one of the signs of a bad Government. An artistic coinage, which had a real value in itself, was a sign of the greatness of a nation.

Mr. Bromley (Soc. Barrow-in-Furness) suggested as a design for our coinage, in place of Britannia, there might be the figure of one of our working people, unable in this wealthy, Christian, and civilised country to find work, and hawking his body from employer to employer without avail, or there might be depicted a workman's widow, left at the mercy of the country without a piece of silver or copper to help her. On the reverse might be the workman, crushed and broken, and the words, "Give us justice in our time."

Sir F. Nelson (C. Stroud) opposed the motion both on the question of profit and the undesirability of constantly changing the currency.

Mr. A. Hopkinson (Ind. Mossley) recalled the controversy about St. George being the Cappadocian bacon merchant who made a large fortune through supplying the Roman army with inferior bacon. The way St. George was dealing with the dragon was exactly the way one would expect a bacon merchant to go about the business (Laughter).

Sir H. Slessor (Soc. Leeds, South-East), supporting the motion, criticised the designs on the reverse of coins as crude and ugly. He regretted the Latin abbreviations, which conveyed nothing to the ordinary person. How many people knew what "Fid. Def." on the back of a penny meant?

Mr. Macquisten (C. Argyllshire) said he would like to see decimal coinage introduced and the groat re-established.

THE LOSS ON THE MINT.

Mr. Guinness, in reply to the debate, said the Government believed that under present conditions the coinage policy was justified, and it would be inadvisable to make any change. In these hard times we could not afford the extravagant coinage of the past. Before the war the Royal Mint yielded a profit. To-day it involved a loss of half a million a year. The prime function of coinage was a satisfactory currency rather than a collection of works of art. It should give confidence in circulation and not be easily forged. Treasury notes would soon be altered owing to the restoration of the gold standard and the transference of that currency to the Bank of England.

* "The idea of making an honorary award to commemorate this war against the United States of America originated with the "Loyal and Patriotic Society of Toronto".

It was decided to issue a medal, the first design for which was submitted but was not approved. A later design was passed and the order was given in 1817 to Messrs Wyon to supply the medals in gold and in silver.

In the former metal 62 and in the latter 548 can be accounted for.

The issue, however, was never made. There was much discussion as to the distribution in regard to services which entitled individuals to the gift of the medal.

Eventually the medals were defaced and sold as bullion, and the proceeds were given to the funds of the Toronto General Hospital.

There is no record that any of the original specimens were saved from destruction.

One or two specimens in bronze and one in lead of a smaller medal of identical design are known to be in existence. There is however, no record of the origin of these in Wyon's books, and they are considered to be pattern medals.

Mr W. S. Coutts having purchased the dies from Messrs Wyon with the object of sending them to Canada had 100 silver medals struck by them and had each medal numbered. We are now able to offer the remainder of the one hundred medals at the above very low figure.

THE LONDON PLAQUETTE.

The designer has sought to portray the following features. London, as capital of the Empire, is represented by a gateway, held open by Britannia on the right and Industry on the left.

Though the gateway are to be seen the Houses of Parliament, from which the Government of the Empire proceeds.

At the right of Britannia is the City Monument, representing History, and, the left of Industry, the Cenotaph—figurative of the Empire's Martial prowess.

NOTES ON THE MYTHOLOGICAL TYPES ON ROMAN REPUBLICAN COINS.

On a denarius of L. Cossutius C.f. Sabula, issued according to De Salis in 45 B.C., we find on the obverse the head of Medusa to left bearing wings and snakes, and on the reverse the winged Pegasus and its rider Bellerophon. The relation of the obverse type to the reverse is evidently in reference to the myth in which Perseus is regarded as the slayer of the Medusa from whose blood the winged horse sprang, and this is a subject we naturally associate with Corinth in which city the denarius was issued.

On the common denarii of L. Plautius Plancus issued about 45 B.C. is a head very like that of Medusa but which Babelon following Eckhel regarded as a mask, which according to the legend of the flute players given in Num. Circular, 1925, was placed on the head of the returned flute players, and the reverse type was by Babelon regarded as the dawn chariot of Aurora.

But some of the heads on these denarii are evidently meant for Medusa, as the snakes in her hair shew. The reverse type has been by others regarded as a triumphal quadriga.

In the XXXVth book of Pliny's Natural History cap. 10 we read of a picture painted by Nicomachus son of Aristodemus which Plancius had dedicated and placed in the Capitol. The picture represented Victory raising to heaven a triumphal chariot drawn by four horses. Some regard this reverse of the coin of Plancus as a memorial of the picture and of some victory gained by the moneyer's ancestor.

What then is the connection between the subjects on the obv. and rev. of this coin?

Medusa's head is seen in the Aegis of Minerva on denarii of Manius Cordus Rufus, circa 49 B.C. and on a denarius of M. Silanus and Q. Curtius and in their bronze coins. On bronze coins of Cæsar with the legend C.CLOVI.PRAEF the shield of Pallas appears. The Medusa's head on the centre of the Triskelis is seen on an Aureus of Caesar Augustus and also on denarii of L. Cornelius Lentulus Crus.

The head of Medusa was also used as a moneyer's symbol on bronze of M. Oppius Capito.

Few myths are connected with so many and ancient conceptions and such a variety of legendary incidents; for in this we are reminded of the fear of man before the destructive powers of nature, the attempt to terrify foes by the exhibition of fear-inspiring images, the ancient custom of making shields out of goat skins, the confused ideas of the early polytheism of the ancient world, and the changes which time brought about in the manner of using an old symbol. The Greek's love of the sea was combined with fear of its storms, and especially those around Euboea in which island the symbol very early appeared on the coinage. The Greek words associated with Medusa are all derived from ideas connected with the sea. The Gorgon meant the terrible, and that which inspired the terror was the strength of the storm, pictured as the Gorgon Σθενος, Stheno; the waves and breakers of the briny deep Euryale, another of the three Gorgons. The fear-inspiring flashes of lightning are compared to deadly snakes which they imagined the head of Medusa to bear.

Hesiod in Theogony 276 was the first to give these names to the Gorgons. These three daughters of the terror, the Gorgon, are described by Hesiod in his Theogony thus: "The Gorgons who dwell beyond the famous Ocean in the most remote quarter towards the night where are the clear voiced Hesperides, even Stheno, Euryale and Medusa who suffered grievous ills. This latter was mortal but the other two were immortal, ageless."

The name Medusa is the feminine of Μεδέων, the one ruling, and so signified the mistress or princess, the daughter of him who ruled the sea; him who was called Phorcys μετῶν ἄλζης lord of the salt sea. Homer spoke of him in Odys. I 71, as lord of the unharvested sea and in Odys. XIII, 96, as Phorcys the old man of the sea. Φορξῆς meant 'white' or 'grey', and was applied to the white horses or foam of the wind-tossed waves. The objects inspiring terror among Eastern peoples were connected with the land rather than the sea. The Hittites and men of Egypt made ugly images probably modelled on the fierce heads of lions or baboons or deadly serpents, and these may have suggested the art form of the Gorgon to the Greeks, especially the images of Bes.

The early races who tended flocks of goats naturally used the skins in making shields, and from that primitive custom Homer spoke of the shield of Zeus at the αἰγίς from the word αἶξ a goat. Not only in those very early days did men decorate their shields with an image intended to inspire fear. This has been a custom in all ages; even in the life-time of men now living the Maories of New Zealand decorated their faces with lines meant to make them fear-inspiring.

Hyginus tells us that the addition of the Gorgon's head to the shield of Zeus was made when he overthrew the Titans, a word derived from τείνω, 'to stretch' or 'reach'. This terrifying power was not confined to Zeus, for we read of Athene bearing the aegis of Zeus, as in the following passages of the Iliad, II, 447; XVIII, 204; XXI, 400. Homer only wrote of one Gorgon and in Odys. XI, 633 where Ulysses was in dread lest "Persephone should send me the head of the Gorgon, that dread monster from out of Hades". In Iliad. V, 741, the aegis of Athene is called "the dreadful monster's Gorgon head, dreadful and grim portent of aegis-bearing Zeus".

In VIII, 349, Hector's eyes are described as like those of the Gorgon. The symbol was also used by mortal warriors for in Il. XI, 36, the shield of Agamemnon is described as bearing "embossed thereon the Gorgon full of aspect glaring terribly and about her were Dread and Terror". Several fairy tales are told to account for the origin of this terrible shield. Ovid. in Met. IV, 798, says that Neptune violated Medusa in the temple of Minerva who covered her chaste face with the aegis and changed the Gorgon's hair into foul snakes that the deed should not be unpunished. Euripides in his play, Ion, says Pallas slew the Gorgon who fought with the gods and wears the Gorgon's skin upon her breast, which skin they call aegis.

The other legend of the slaying by Perseus of the Gorgon is related by Hesiod in the 'shield of Heracles', 216-234 and Theogony, 250. The references to the legend in the classical writers are all brief, and are only references to a legend every one was supposed to know.

Apollo was the emblem of both the destructive and the health giving power of the sun, and hence the at first sight surprising design of the Medusa's head in the centre of the Triskelis on coins of Agathocles of Syracuse; and of M. Cordus of the gens Cornelia, may be explained as typifying the benevolent aspect of the sun god Apollo, within the symbol of that god. This application of the Medusa's head, to express not terror but relief, is seen also in passages which refer to its use as a charm to arrest the evil eye, and in such a passage as that in the Ion of Euripides (1421) where we read of a Gorgon wrought in needle work in the centre web of a garment.

It was often used on lamps, vases, tombs and ships as a protecting emblem, and even after the beginning of the Christian era at Byzantium as a charm against gout and colic! This view of the symbol will also account for the many later works of art including the coin of Cornelius in which the face of Medusa is represented as beautiful, calm, cold, severe, and even with the eyes closed.

These probably belong to the latest period of Weiditz (G. Habich, Nachtrag zu Christoph Weiditz, Archiv, I, pp. 32-34).

Dr Habich adds further the three following medals as in the style of Weiditz :

Undated. Wolf Zwirlen (only known in clay).

1525. Wolfgang Babel. R. Arms. Wood (Hanover). Lead (Brunswick).

1526. Konrad Schiesser.

Dr Simonis has ascribed to Jean Second a number of medals which are here enumerated under Christoph Weiditz.

The name of Christoph Weiditz only occurs on an ornamental dagger in Dresden : CHRISTOF. WEIDITZ | IN. AVGVSTA. VIN | DELICA. FACIEBAT.

As a Portraitist Christoph Weiditz has a style of his own, the evolution of which is very striking in comparing his earlier and later works. "Als Portraitist", states Dr Habich, "stellt Weiditz sich ebenbürtig Schwarz und Hagenauer zur Seite. Von beiden hat er Anregungen empfangen, aber doch nur in äusserlichen, dem jeweiligen Zeitgeschmack unterworfenen Dingen, im Zuschnitt und in der Anordnung der Brustbilder, nicht aber in seiner plastischen Ausdrucksweise. Seine künstlerische Handschrift hat er gewarht. Als er das stark reliefierte Porträt der Hans Schwarz aufgriff, blieb er der Natur gegenüber treuer und präziser, detaillierter und exakter als dieser und später, als er mit Hagenauer in gewagte Konkurrenz tritt, eignet er sich wohl dessen kultivierten Flachreliefstil an, aber sowohl in der geistigen Auffassung wie in der Ausführung bleibt er ganz er selbst. Er übertritt den berühmteren Konkurrenten sowohl im Physiognomischen wie auch in der geistreichen Art, durch wohl berechneten Abschnitt der Büste und deren Stellung im Raum eine Vorstellung von der Gesamterscheinung der dargestellten Persönlichkeit zu erwecken. Zwar kennt auch er den Reiz, der im Wechsel glatter Flächen mit feiner detaillierten Partien beruht, empfindet die plastischen Werte des präzisen Umrisses und der knappen Form nicht minder als jener, aber in der Behandlung des Details vermeidet er die trochene Schärfe, die Hagenauer nicht selten eignet, und erreicht namentlich in der Behandlung von Gewand und Haar einen ungleich lebendigeren Eindruck als sein Rivale. Wie das Kleid sich glatt und doch modelliert an den Körper schmiegt, ist sehr individuell, und bei einiger Übung ist diese seine Kostümbehandlung mit dem etwas stereotypen Zuschnitt Hagenauers nicht zu verwechseln. Alles in allem sind solche Meisterstücke wie Cyprian Schaller, die Meringerin, Regina Lamparter, Eppendorf, Volant, Magdalena Honoldt, Covos, Wernher einem Hagenauer niemals gelungen."

Dr Habich notices that Weiditz's later works are less vigorous. The influence of the younger Holbein is very marked especially on his facing portraits.

Regarding the reverses of Weiditz's medals, Habich remarks : "Die reichen und geschmackvollen Reversdarstellungen der ersten Strassburger Bildnisse weisen deutlich auf die väterliche Buchschmuckwerkstätte hin. Es ist derselbe Typenschatz, mit dem der alte Hans Weiditz die Leisten und Bordüren seiner Titelblätter füllte, dieselben figürlichen und ornamental Motive, die der "Petrarkameister" in seine Druckstöcke für Signete u. dgl. schneidet. Mit dem Vater gemeinsam hat Christoph die Vorliebe für leichte Laubkranzumrahmungen; die an vielfach geschlungenen schmalen Bändern aufgehängten Schriftafeln, die stark profilierten Wappenschilder mit den Rollwerk usw. Die ganze Rüstkammer des Vaters aber hat Christoph in dem reichen Waffenarrangement der Prechtermedaille geplündert, das sich sehr ähnlich auf einem Blatt der Ciceroillustrationen (de officiis), Cicero und Scipio Africanus, findet, wo auch die beiden Kartuschen entsprechend vorkommen. Römisch geharnischte Standartenträger, wie der Knabe, der das (nebenbei bemerkt, von Hans Baldung Grien mehrfach gezeichnete) Prechterwappen hält, ist in diesem antiken Gewand ein Lieblingsgegenstand der Weiditzschen Holzschmitte, und die Delphine, die miteinander verbunden den Rahmen des Stillebens abgeben, trifft man als Ornament hier allenthalben." On later works, some of the reverses savour of Italian influence, and some of them appear to be directly inspired from Italian medals.

WEINBERGER, ANTON RUDOLPH (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 426). Additional works by this artist: Portrait-plaquette of Gerhard Hauptmann on his 50th Birthday; — Birth of Archduke Francis WEINGARTNER, L. (Swiss). Collaborator of Mr. Walter Gilbert, of the Bromsgrove Guild, who writes: "(Weingartner) has been my colleague for twenty years, I making the schemes and the ideas and compositions, and he concentrating on the technique" (communication from Mr. M. H. Spielmann).

WEINMAN, ADOLPH ALEXANDER (Biog. Dict. Med., Vol. VI, p. 427). Born on December 11, 1870; apprenticed as a carver of wood and ivory under Kaldenberg, 1886; attended the classes at Cooper Union, and at the age of twenty, was qualified to enter the studio of Philip Martiny, where he worked until 1895. In that year he was promoted to the post of assistant in the studio of Olin L. Warner.

Weinman's interest in medallic art was first awakened at the Chicago World's Columbian Exposition, 1893, but further stimulated in Warner's studio. The death of Warner, within nine months of collaboration with him brought to Weinman an invitation to enter the studio of Augustus Saint-Gaudens as his assistant, and on the latter's leaving for Europe, he went to work with Charles H. Nicholas, then Daniel C. French. In 1906 he set up a studio for himself.

"During this time", says Mr. Sydney P. Noe, from whose monograph I have extracted the information given here, "Weinman's interest in medals had been growing steadily, and occasional plaques had been produced in spare moments. One of the earliest of these is the portrait of his mother modelled as early as 1896. Portraits of children followed in 1898 and 1900. An official commission for the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in 1904 gave opportunity for a different type of medal. There came an opportunity to collaborate with St. Gaudens in the Roosevelt Medal (1905). In 1906, the Life-saving Medal was designed, and followed in the next year by the Award Medal given by the American Institute of Architects. Portrait-plaques were finished in 1910, and during 1911 designs for the new dime and half-dollar were carried to completion. Two charmingly decorative medallions of his little daughter were completed in 1915, and in 1918 he finished the J. Sanford Saltus Award Medal given by the American Numismatic Society for artistic achievement in the art of the medal. Mr. Weinman has since been awarded this medal. A War Service medal for Mount Sinai Hospital, finished early in 1920, is the latest of the artist's productions in this field (1921).

Mr Noe gives the following list of Mr. Weinman's medallic work:

A. A. Weinman.

Catharina Weinman, 1896; medal, 90 mill. (illustrated); — Dorothy; medal, 76 mill.; — Charles Yocce Harvey, 1902; plaque, Catherina Weinman.

105 × 90 mill.; — The Rocking-horse Baby, 1902; medal, 95 mill.; — Life-saving Medal, 1905; 75 mill.; — Louisiana Purchase Medal; — Commemorative medal; 70 × 70 mill.; — L. P. M., Grand Prize; 74 × 65 mill.; — L. P. M.; Æ. and Æ.; plaque 67 × 67 mill.; medal; 63 mill.; — Roosevelt Special Inaugural Medal, 1905; medal, 74 mill.; American Institute of Architects; 55 mill.; — Katherine Jane Weinman, 1915; medal, 97 mill.; — Another (illustrated), with child's head, bare, to r., within border of marguerites; 97 mill. (illustrated); — Bobbie; plaque, 150 × 120 mill.; — Mount Sinai Medal, 1917; 75 mill.; — Saltus Award Medal; 75 mill.; — Alic Helen Hettinger, 1898; medallion, 75 mill.; — Charles Kech, 1898; plaque, 85 × 125 mill.; — Louise Hettinger, 1900; medallion, 75 mill.; — The same, 1900; plaque, 133 × 230 mill.; — C. M. S. (Stark), 1910; plaque, 60 × 127 mill.; — Julius Theodore Melchers; medallion, 105 mill.; — The Edison Medal (sketch for a competition); 75 mill.

This artist exhibited in 1923, at the Exhibition of American Sculpture, A.N.S., the following medallic works: J. Sanford

Saltus Award, American Numismatic Society, struck medal; — Mt. Sinai Hospital War Service Medal, struck medal, galvanos; — Bobbie, plaque, mounted; — Mildred W. Thompson, medallion, sketch; — G.M.S. Esq., plaque; — Theodore N. Vail Memorial, American Telephone and Telegraph Co., struck medal, galvanos; — Louise Hettinger, plaque, mounted on wood; — Katherine Jane Weinman, medallion, mounted on wood; — Robert, his World, medallion; — Howard R. Weinmann, medallion; — Adelaide, portrait relief, mounted on wood; — U.S. Discharge Button; — Sixty Plaster Models for Medals, including U.S. Silver Dollar, Half Dollar, Quarter and Dime.

WEITNAUER (or WITNAUER), JOHANN HEINRICH (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 522). Mint-master, born at Basle, son of Schultheiss Hans Friedrich W. From 1618 to 1624 he was, in conjunction with his brother, Johann Bernhard W., in the employ of the Berne mint, with an annual salary of 2000 livres; Hans Rudolf Räber was their Die-engraver. On 30. November 1634 he was appointed Mint-master for a period of 15 years to the Principality of Neuchâtel and Valangin, at first with the assistance of his brother aforementioned. He coined on the Berne standard gold Pistoles, Thaler, Half Thaler, Dicken, Half Dicken, Half Batz, Kreutzer and Vierer. He however did not remain long in office.

BIBLIOGRAPHY. — M. A. Ruegg, in Schweiz. Künstler-Lexikon, Suppl., p. 447.

WEITNAUER, JOHANN BERNHARD (Swiss). Goldsmith and Mint-master, third son of Hans Friedrich W., and brother of Nikolaus and Johann Heinrich W. He went into apprenticeship on 24. February 1607 (until 1611) with the goldsmith Sebastian Schilling. In 1618 we find him as joint-mintmaster with his brother at Berne.

On 20. March 1622 the city of Mühlhausen entered into a contract with Joh. Bernh. W. and Hans Ulrich Falkner as Joint Mint-masters for a period of ten years during which they were to coin all kinds of currency on the Basle standard.

WEITNAUER, NIKOLAUS (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 522). Goldsmith and Mint-master, born at Basle. On 1. August 1614 he was placed in apprenticeship with his elder brother Hans Bernhard W. Appointed in conjunction with him on 14. April 1629 as Joint Mint-master at Neuchâtel and Valangin. But on the adoption in 1634 of a new monetary system, the Neuchâtel mint was closed for a long period. From 1656 he was Joint Mint-master at Berne with Anton Wyss; about 1670 he was still Mint-master of Neuchâtel and Valangin.

WELCKNER (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 430). This Engraver's initial W occurs already in 1834 on Hanoverian coins of William IV.

WELLS, THOMAS (Brit.). Wax Modeller of the last quarter of the eighteenth century; exhibited at the Royal Academy 1786-88 and 1791.

WENDLINGBURG, GILBERT (Brit.). Appointed 1345, in conjunction with William Stury, to issue Flemish Nobles of Edward III. and subdivisions, which were probably coined at Ghent.

WENDT, JULIA BRACKEN (Amer.). Contemporary Sculptor; has exhibited at the American Num. Society, 1923, two coloured plaster plaques, John Muir, and Mariana.

WERMUTH, CHRISTIAN SIGMUND (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 446). Has signed, together with his father, a medal of Baron J.P. von Ludwig, 1731.

INTRODUCTION.

No French Mint has hitherto been made the object of a thorough and comprehensive study. De Saulcy's Documents monétaires stop in 1547, and the Société française de numismatique did not continue beyond the reign of Henri II the publication it had undertaken to complete the preceding work. So that if all the essential matter was extant for a numismatic history of France up to the year 1559, the posterior period was represented by scattered documents, often inaccurate and generally unconnected.

We had therefore to go through a long preliminary work before writing the history of the Saint-Lô Mint, which we now present to the learned public. We had to search in the registers and files of the Archives nationales not only for any articles relative to that Mint, but also for ordonnances and regulations of a general order. These investigations gave birth to my Histoire numismatique des règnes de François II et de Charles IX, published in the Revue numismatique. We have since pursued them under the subsequent reigns as far as the general lease passed in 1662 with Denis Génisseau.

It is quite understood that we have largely borrowed from the four volumes of de Saulcy¹, whilst consulting at the same time the original archive documents, which enabled us to rectify a number of minor errors and omissions. We have besides culled in the Trésor des Chartes and in diverse manuscripts of the Bibliothèque Nationale some inedited documents dating from the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. For the reign of Henri II, the Archives have supplied us with much fresh information, but we have scarcely discovered anything in the Sorbonne Registres, which are so precious for the previous period.

Contrary to our hope, the Archives de la Manche do not comprise any papers connected with the issue of coinage from the Mint of Saint-Lô; but on the other hand we found there numerous documents mentioning individuals who were more or less related to the Mint establishment; privy masters, wardens, and other officials, workmen and coiners. Most of these documents have been reproduced in Notices, mémoires et documents de la Société d'agriculture, d'archéologie et d'histoire naturelle du département de la Manche, or have been made use of in articles contributed by local scholars. We have borrowed from this excellent magazine a number of facts, principally biographical.

To sum up, the existing documents, in connection with the study of the numerous coins struck at Saint-Lô which have been preserved to us, allow us to reconstitute in a satisfactory manner the history of this mint, with the exception of that period of the English occupation, extending from 1432 to 1449. On this period, we are completely in the dark, the only documents known being an unpublished account, which we have discovered at the Bibliothèque Nationale, and a short passage in the Cartulaire de l'église Notre-Dame de Saint-Lô, published by M. Lepingard².

We also regret that, notwithstanding all our efforts, our lists of Mint officers present numerous gaps, which we have been unable to fill up for want of documents.

A passage of the Histoire du diocèse de Coutances et Avranches, by Abbé Lecanu (Vol. I, p. 364. — Coutances, 1873) suggests that there exist some where in the department of la Manche other unpublished documents relating to the Mint of Saint-Lô during the English period; but should these documents turn up, they will have to be carefully scrutinised. Thus M. Lecanu writes that Saint-Lô issued tersains (tresains) of Henry VI in 1422 and 1423 for a value of 987 Poundsterling, but the Tresain was only created in June 1423.

JOHN THE GOOD,

"Receu avons l'umble supplication du procureur des gens des trois Estatz de nostre pais et duché de Normandie contenant que en nostredit pais et duché, qui est grant et de longue estendue, autant ou plus que province que nostre Royaume, ont esté de toute ancienneté establies deux maisons et forges de monnoies, l'une en nostre ville et cité de Rouen, l'autre en nostre ville de Saint-Lô."

Thus express themselves letters patent given at Bourges, 14 March 1508 (n.st.), by which Louis XII reopened the Mint of Lower-Normandy, which had been closed a few months before¹.

On reading these letters, in which both mints are placed on the same footing one might be led to believe that the Saint-Lô mint could be traced back as early as that of Rouen, or nearly so; but this conclusion would be quite incorrect. Rouen, an old mint of the Dukes of Normandy, was already coining under Charlemagne and his successors², whereas the erection of a mint at Saint-Lô dates back only to the middle of the fourteenth century³.

1. A.N. — ZI^B 62, fo 114, 110.

2. The denier of Charlemagne for Rouen is reproduced in A. Dieudonné, Monnaies carolingiennes : acquisitions du Cabinet des Médailles. Revue numismatique, 1915, p. 211, pl. v.

3. Charlemagne coined at Avranches (Abrincas). [Gariel. Monnaies carolingiennes, pl. v, no 18], and Charles the Bald at Coutances (HCVSTANCIEN) [M. Prou, Catalogue de la Bibliothèque Nationale, no 407]. Bayeux also minted heavily for Charles the Bald, as the deniers from Bayeux are very common, but there are no deniers for Caen.

The mint is mentioned for the first time in a mandate of 24th September 1351, sent to the Wardens of the Mint by the Mint-masters general ordering the putting into force of the letters patent of 22nd September, with regard to the fabrication of white and black money on the "pied de monnaie" 54¹.

The act of creation of the Mint has not been recovered², but as the execution dated 17th August 1351, of an order given the day before with reference to the coinage does not mention Saint-Lô, it is likely, if not certain, that this act should be placed between the 17th August and 22nd September, and probably nearer the first date than the second.

The opening of this new Mint explains itself through reason of economic and historical order. The right of seigniorage on the coinage constituting one of the principal revenues of the Treasury, the King had an interest in creating new Mints, on the condition that they should answer a real need of trade, and be far enough distant from the other Royal Mints not to inconvenience them.

On the advent of John the Good, 22nd August 1350, there existed, besides Paris, fourteen Royal mints which were situated for the most part South of the Loire and in the provinces bordering upon the possessions of the King of England³. The Duchy of Normandy, from which the crown drew the greater part of its resources, had no other mint than Rouen, and for the whole of the western portion of the kingdom, the nearest Royal Mint to Rouen was that of Angers. The opening of a forge at Saint-Lô could only inconvenience the Mints of the Duke of Brittany, and this consideration was not to influence the King of France.

It is also probable that Saint-Lô was chosen in preference to Caen, the capital of Lower-Normandy, because the latter was too near Rouen; for the ordonnance of Royallieu (10th June 1361) leaves us to foresee that from the time of Jean the Good, as also later under Henri II, the inhabitants of Caen exerted themselves to obtain a Mint for their city.

On the other hand, the need of currency must have been very great in a country as rich and mercantile as Lower-Normandy. Let us read again in Froissart the account of Edward III's campaign in 1346. As soon as they had disembarked⁴ the English took possession of Barfleur, "toute la ville feust reubée, et pris or et argent, et chiers jewiaulx, car ils en trouvèrent si grant fuison, que garçon n'avoient cure de draps fourrés de vair." After the capture of Carentan, the army proceeded towards Saint-Lô: "Si trouvèrent le pays gras et plentivens de toutes choses, les gragnes plainnes de blés, les maisons plainnes de toutes rikées, riches bourgeois, chars, charètes, et chevaux et les plus biaux bues du monde." As to "la grosse ville de Saint-Leu en Constantin qui estoit deurement riche et marchande... en celle ville avait très grande draperise et grosse, et grant fuison de riches bourgeois. Et trouvait on bien en la ditte ville de Saint-Leu manans huit mil ou neuf mil, bourgeois que gens da mestier." So the English obtained there an enormous booty; they found so much cloth that "ils en eussent donnet grant marciel, sils les seussent à qui vendre. On y trouva aussi bien mille tonels de vin et des autres biens grant fuison."

In fact, the Saint-Lô of that time was not only an important industrial centre, but the principal commercial emporium of the Cotentin. The establishment of a Mint there justified itself so much the more that, thanks to the riches of the country, the town must have recovered fairly quickly from the storm of 1346.

But we must look to the historical events for the motive of the creation of the Mint in the year 1351.

A few months after his accession, writes G. Dupont, John the Good had convened in Paris, for the following 16th of February (1351 n. st.), the States General, composed of two or three notabilities for "chascune notables et bonnes villes" of each viscounty. As always, the King needed money. But the notables of Normandy did not deem it possible to impose their country, already so tried by the double scourge of war and plague, with the burden of a subsidy without having consulted their co-citizens. The King was obliged to convene the Provincial States, who gathered together at Pont-Audemer, on 22nd March 1351 (n. st.), and decreed "an impost of six deniers per livre of every merchandise sold, a tax which deputies of the Norman nobility voted in their town four days later⁵. This tax gave rise to a long discussion, and the two delegates sent to Pont-Audemer by John the Good were obliged to make in his name numerous promises, which were badly held. We read under paragraph XI of "Traité d'aide et de subside au Roy : Sur l'estat des monnoies, traitté et accordé est que le Roy nostre sire en ordenera en la meilleure manière qu'il pourra bonnememi, au profit de li et de son peuple"⁶.

This was merely a phrase, and the changes and alterations of the coins continued notwithstanding. But, although the Traité does not mention a word about it, one may be permitted to ask oneself the question, whether, by creating a Mint at Saint-Lô, less than six months after the States of Pont-Audemer, the King's intention was not in some way to thank his subjects of Lower-Normandy for their subsidy, and to grant them a satisfaction which was, however, to profit him more than them.

The Mandate of 24 September 1351 was carried to Saint-Lô by Jehan Feuillet, who had just been named Warden of the Mint, and for this reason it is said that the carriage cost nothing.

Another document, dated from the 15th October following, gives us the name of the second Warden of the Mint; his name was Guillaume de Dreux and he came from Saint-Quentin, where he had held this same office of Warden at the Mint. The regulations then in force laid down that the Mint officials should be fairly frequently moved (remuer); the object was to prevent too cordial an understanding amongst these officials or with the private Masters for purposes of fraud. Theft and fraud were almost daily offences at the mints and honest deeds cost officials sometimes more than impudent thefts. Guillaume de Dreux had had a personal experience of this a few years before when he was Warden of the Mint at Montdidier⁷. Having refused to lend a hand in the malpractices of one of the Masters, who was none other than the famous Nicolas Braque, to whom we shall refer again later on, he was attacked by him unawares "on the way to Church", riddled with wounds and left for dead on the square, venial sins for which Nicolas Braque does not appear to have ever been brought to account and which did not hinder him from attaining to the highest dignities⁴.

A third document, dated 26th July 1353, informs us that the Counter-Warden of the Mint was Robin de la Haye, but the names of the Assayer and Die-cutter are unknown.

When the Mint of Saint-Lô was opened, the regulations in force specified that the fabrication of the gold coins and of the silver coins should be entrusted to ten distinct masters⁵, whose charges were independent one from the other⁶. This regulation was applied to Saint-Lô as elsewhere. Saulcy had not discovered the names of the two incumbents; Mr. Noël Valois was the first to find out that the name of the Master responsible for the silver species was Jean d'Arrablay, and we have ourselves discovered that the Master for the gold issues was a certain Louis Turel, a native of Lombardy, and nephew of Belommet Turel, citizen of Paris⁷.

As we have mentioned above, the opening of the Mint at Saint-Lô coincides with the order of the issue of white and black currency on the "pied" 54. The period was one of the numerous ones which mark the reign of John the Good when the currency was debased. The base silver coin, so-called Maille blanche (Hoffmann, 12) and the Double Tournois in billon, which were issued before the Order of 22nd September were debased on that day, whilst neither their weight nor legal tender were altered. This was also the case of the Ecu d'or, or rather Florin d'or à l'écu (Hoffmann, 1) as this coin is termed in the documents of the time; it remained at 54 to the Mark, and continued to be issued for 18 sols 9 deniers tournois, but it fell from 20 to 18 carats fine¹.

3. An execution of the Mint-Masters general, dated 23rd August 1350, gives the list of the Royal Mints. They were, besides Paris, Saint-Pourçain, Montpellier, Mâcon, Limoges, Figeac, Toulouse, Le Vigan, Agen, Tournai, Troyes, Loches, Angers and Rouen. Saint-Quentin is not mentioned, although it then existed. Moreover after 23rd March 1351 (n. st.) we find a Royal Mint at Dijon.

Saint-Lô issued this gold Florin, as well as the Maille blanche and Double Tournois², but as we do not know the secret sign which enabled one at the time to recognize the provenance of the coins, it is impossible to day to identify the issues of this Lower-Norman Mint, and the same observation applies to the later issues of John the Good and those of Charles V.

On January 22, 1352 (n. st.) a return was made to good currency; the Maille blanche and Double Tournois were decried, and in their place, all the Mints were ordered to strike a gros denier tournois, so-called à l'épi (Hoffmann, 35), which is characterized by having on reverse a châtelnor tournois above which is a kind of leaf — a flower, says Saulcy³ — and a new Double tournois of which it is impossible to state the type precisely. These new pieces were on the pied 30.

But the amelioration did not last long; as early as 22nd July 1352, the currency was placed on the pied 40; and on the 24th November following on the pied 48. The type of the coins was not altered, nor their legal tender, but the Blanc à l'épi and the Double tournois were reduced in size and standard.

As to the gold Florin à l'écu it remained all this time at 18 carats and 54 to the Mark, but its official tender varied according to the period of good or debased currency⁴.

Saint-Lô shared in the three issues described above, and the proof of it is that an order of execution was sent each time by the Masters-General. But, on 20th April 1353, when a new debasement was prescribed, the Mint is no longer mentioned; it had fallen into a standstill at an unknown date, which evidently must be placed between 25th January 1353 (n. st.), when as we know Jean d'Arrablay was still master⁵, and the following 20th April.

This standstill was followed by proceedings against the Masters and two Wardens of the Mint for frauds committed in the fabrication of gold Florins à l'écu. The fact that Jean d'Arrablay, Master of the silver currency, was prosecuted on account of fraud committed by him in the gold currency⁶ proves how fallacious the attempt was of confining each particular master to a special issue.

The letters of remission of Louis Turel inform us that he had issued or allowed to be issued by his lieutenant a large quantity of gold coins deficient in weight and in standard. For this reason he was arrested and put in prison and his personal and real estate seized; the goods of his cousin and surety, François Bonacourse, as well as of his uncle, Belommet Turel, were in the same way confiscated, and the latter was in addition also imprisoned. Finally, Louis Turel was condemned to a fine of 20,000 livres, of current coin at the time of his condemnation, and besides was deprived in perpetuity of all Royal charges, whether given absolutely or on contract. In the month of January 1354 (n. st.), he obtained from the King his pardon, and that of his uncle and of his cousin; his fine was reduced to 15,000 livres tournois, and he was set at liberty if he was not already so. After this he disappears, and nothing further is known about him⁷.

1. This new issue of the Florin d'or à l'écu was the fourth since the accession of John the Good; the preceding three were at 21, 20½ and 20 carats fine.

2. The type of this Double Tournois is not known. In his Histoire monétaire de Jean le Bon, Saulcy thought to identify it on no 5 of his Plate I, corresponding with no 66 of Hoffmann; but this cannot be correct, for Comte de Castellane has shown that from Philip VI the Doubles Parisis differ from the Doubles Tournois in that the cross on the reverse has equal limbs, whereas the Doubles Tournois have a Latin cross. On the other hand, Hoffmann calls his no 66 Denier tournois in error, whilst the reverse legend is MONETA DUPLEX.

3. This gros denier tournois was in reality a Blanc, for it was legal tender for 8 deniers tournois. We note that Hoffmann calls his no 35 "gros blanc Poille-villain". Now, the coin in question is the Blanc à l'épi, as is proved by the execution of 20th November 1352 (cf. Saulcy, Documents, Vol. I, p. 308), and as Saulcy admits in his Histoire de Jean le Bon (cf. Pl. I, nos 11, 11 bis, 12, 13 and 15).

4. From 18 sols 9 deniers tournois in September 1351, it was reduced to 15 sols tournois on 23rd January 1352 (n. st.) to reascend to 20 sols tournois on 23rd May 1352 and reach 37 sols 6 deniers on 3rd February 1353 (n. st.). After this date the fluctuations in value continued.

5. P. J., no IV. — A receipt dated 9th June 1353 qualifies J. d'Arrablay as "nagaires m^e de la monnaie de Saint-Lô" (cf. P. J., no XII).

6. P. J., no VIII.

7. P. J., no VII.

The same was not the case with Jean d'Arrablay. Forewarned in time, he managed to escape and leave the realm; he took good care not to comply with the summons sent out to him to return to be judged, and he was condemned in contumacy to a fine and banishment; naturally, his goods were seized. But in the end the exile weighed upon him, and in the beginning of the year 1356 he applied for and obtained a safe-conduct to come to Paris to plead his cause. He put in the plea, that if he fled, it was because he knew that the Masters General of the coins and Royal commissioners had been "excited against him by certain of his rivals", and finally, on 14th March 1356 (n. st.), in consideration of the good and faithful services rendered by him and his, "tant à notre cher seigneur et père qu'à nous-même¹", king John granted him his pardon, leaving only the civil fine to pay². Other letters of remission, given at the Noble House³, and dated the 25th March following, give us the reason for this pardon: Jean d'Arrablay had undertaken to reveal to the king the malpractices and thefts committed by numerous officers of the Mints, and to instruct him as to the means of preventing their repetition. Besides his own pardon, Jean d'Arrablay obtained that of ten of his accomplices whom he had to designate by name⁴.

The first of these ten was Guillaume de Dreux, who had also been condemned to banishment and whose property had been sequestered⁵. The other warden of Saint-Lô, Jehan Feuillet, stands fourth on the list, and a certain Jacques le Prestrel "changeur et citoyen de Saint-Lô, lieutenant de la Monnoie dudit Saint-Lô", evidently Louis Turel's "lieutenant", is the sixth⁶.

M. Noël Valois has narrated in detail the end of Jean d'Arrablay. He was drowned, "sanz loy, sanz jugement et sanz connaissance de cause", in June or July 1358, by order of Nicolas Braque, his former rival, who had become "maître d'hôtel et conseiller au grand et secret conseil" of king John. Seriously compromised by the revelations of Jean d'Arrablay, having been dismissed and his goods sequestered the preceding year, at the outset of the Parisian revolt led by Etienne Marcel, he had sworn revenge, and was successful.

The Saint-Lô Mint remained closed until July 1360. Why we do not know, but we know that from 1357 at the latest, Charles the Bad, to whom the Cotentin had been ceded by the treaty of Mantes (22nd January 1354 n. st.), and the King of England, Edward III., heir of the Sire de Saint-Sauveur, Geoffroy d'Harcourt, were the real masters of the country. "The French, repulsed from the interior of the Cotentin, were left with the towns on the borderlands, forming a vast semi-circle which they dared not leave, and which extended from Pontorson to Bayeux, taking in Vire, Argentan, Falaise, Caen, Saint-Lô and Torigny⁷". Saint-Lô was thus separated from the rear-land, the supply of precious metals to the Mint must have been difficult and it is possible that no one came forward to fill up the office of Master of the Mint.

The reopening of the Mint follows closely upon the conclusion of the treaty of Bretigny (8th May 1360). This nefarious treaty ceded to Edward III a quarter of the kingdom, and five French mints, Poitiers, Limoges, La Rochelle, Agen and Figeac, went over to the English domination. But as their cession does not appear to have been effective until the following year⁸, and as moreover

1. Did Jean d'Arrablay belong in any way to the ancient Périgord family of that name, a member of which, Pierre d'Arrablay, was Chancellor of France under Louis X and cardinal in 1316? We cannot say. But one might be led to think so in reading the letters of pardon, addressed to him from Meaux on 24th May 1358 by the Dauphin Charles, Duke of Normandy, at the instance of relatives (aims charnels) of Jean d'Arrablay and the high intercession of the bishop of Langres, the bishop of Nevers, Marguerite, the widow of the Count of Flanders, and the Duchess of Normandy herself (cf. Noël Valois, La Revanche des frères Braque).

7. S. Dupont, Histoire du Cotentin et de ses îles, Vol. II, p. 363.

8. Paragraphe VII of the Treaty of Bretigny stipulated that the territories ceded to the king of England, as well as all rights and jurisdictions issuing from these territories, should be surrendered to him "au plus tôt que l'on pourra, sans fraude et sans mal engin, et au plus tard dans la Saint Michel venant en un an", i.e. before 29th September 1361.

four new mints — Tours, Bourges, Chaumont and Châlons — had been opened in 1359 and in the first months of 1360, one cannot say whether there is any correlation between the two events.

Whatever the case may be, the Lower-Normandy Mint was "réédifié le premier jour de juillet l'an 60", and the New Master of the Mint for the silver currency, Drouet Caltot, issued from the 1st to 4th July, the Blanc à la fleur de lis, dit Compagnon (Hoffmann, 41)¹ on the piéd 48. The execution of this issue, prescribed on the 28th May before, had been sent out to the provincial mints on May 30. As Saint-Lô is not mentioned, the order for the reopening of the mint is necessarily later, and should be placed between that date and the 28th of June, for, on that day, Saint-Lô is named in the execution of the letters patent issued on the previous evening and placing the money on the piéd 60.

The debasement continued so rapidly that on 18th August 1360, the Compagnon had, in four stages, reached the piéd 120.

On August 30, following a Council held by the Regent, the future Charles V, at Boulogne-sur-Mer, a return was made to good money. The Royal d'or fin (Hoffmann, 8) of 69 to the Mark and worth 25 sols tournois², was continued, but the type of the white money was changed, and instead of the Compagnon, the issue of a gros blanc à la couronne (Hoffmann, 26 — Saulcy, 73) on the piéd 32 was decreed. Saint-Lô, to which mint the order of the Masters General was sent on September 8, issued this particular coin which was ordered from all the mints of the *langue d'oïl*³, and the accounts of Drouet Caltot, published by Saulcy, inform us that he also struck the Double parisis prescribed by the order of September 7.

Saulcy has succeeded in identifying the Double Parisis, which is not engraved in Hoffmann, but which we find reproduced under n° 92 (Pl. VI) of his Histoire monétaire de Jean le Bon. The obverse of this Double parisis is similar to that of the gros blanc à la couronne (Hoffmann, 16), prescribed at the same time.

On October 15, the Regent sent from Boulogne to the Masters General a new order, prescribing to the Mints of Paris, Rouen and Saint-Lô, and also Saint-Quentin, should the Master find it convenient, to issue from henceforth the white money on the piéd 52 ⁴/₅ en donnant à iceux blancs telle différence comme bon semblera à faire, et la [moins] apercevant que l'on pourra. The execution of this order was sent to Saint-Lô on October 21, and Drouet Caltot struck on the new standard from the 26th October.

On November 2, John, having returned from his captivity in England, resumed the conduct of affairs. He hastened to extend to the Mint of Poitiers the order of debasement given to the four Mints named above, and a few days after he applied this measure to all the other mints.

At the end of November, the exact date cannot be verified, a third issue of the Blanc à la couronne was ordered, but the account of Drouet Caltot makes no mention of it⁴. It would appear that the Mint ceased working for a few weeks at that time.

On 5th December 1360, a return to good money was made, and a change was made from the piéd 80 to the piéd 24. The types of the gold and silver currencies were altered; instead of the Royal, a Franc d'or fin (Hoffmann, 10) was struck, of 63 to the Mark, being legal tender for 20 sols tournois, and the handsome Blanc aux fleurs de lis (Hoffmann, 46) took the place of the Gros blanc à la couronne. A new Denier parisis, which Saint-Lô did not strike, and a new Denier-tournois, the identification of which is still to be done, were likewise prescribed.

There was but one issue of the Blanc aux fleurs de lis; Drouet Caltot struck this coin, and also the Denier tournois, until April 25, 1361, which is the last date in his accounts.

In reality the Mint at Saint-Lô had been suppressed on the preceding 14th of April, at the same time as Bourges and Tours, by the same order which prescribed the stopping of the issue of Blancs aux fleurs de lis and the creation of a new silver Gros tournois fin (Hoffmann, 16) and a Demi gros or Maille blanche.

Besides the Mint for silver currency under the direction of Drouet Caltot, there existed, as in the preceding period, a Mint for the gold currency, at the head of which was another Master, named Geoffroy Caron or Charon. This Master commenced to coin on August 7, 1360, and struck, between that date and the following 12th of November, 11,500 Royaux d'or; and in the period extending from the 11th of November 1360 to 20th May 1361¹, he struck exactly the same number of Francs d'or. This date of May 20 proves that the Saint-Lô Mint for gold took nearly a month longer than that for silver to obey the order of closure contained in the order of April 14.

This order does not formulate a reason for the suppression of the three mints of Saint-Lô, Bourges and Tours². The order of Royallieu, of the following 10th of June, which reopened Saint-Lô, is on the contrary very explicit.

"Ord^e aux gnaux, sur la plainte des changeurs et marchans de Caen, Constantin et pais d'environ, pour la doubte de plusieurs pillars, robeurs, n'en peuvent faire venir leur billon en la mon^e de Rouen, qu'il soit forgé mon^e et ord^e par la dern^e ord^e en la ville de Saint-Lô, jusques à ce que sa Ma^te ait ord^e d'icelle remuer et establir en la ville de Caen ou ailleurs, là où bon semblera à sa M^te et à son con^eil, non obstant que lad. mon^e de S^t-Lô eut été exceptée par lad^e ord^e."

Following upon this fresh reopening of the Mint, a new Master, called Jehan de Gisors³ took the direction of the Mint for silver, where he issued, from August 3, 1361, the Gros d'argent fin (Hoffmann, 16), prescribed on the 14th of April, and, after the 8th of November, date of the despatch of the execution, the small Deniers tournois, prescribed by the order of October 29, 1361. These two coins were on the piéd 21.

As to the Mint for gold, it remained entrusted to Geoffroy Caron who revived the striking of the Franc d'or.

Saint-Lô fell back again into standstill in the month of March 1362 (n. st.). The accounts of Geoffroy Charon close on the 5th, and those of Jehan de Gisors on the 13th March⁴. This time, the two Masters and the officers of the Mint had not committed any frauds; the kind of certificate that the Master General, Edouard Tadelin, wrote out at Saint-Lô itself on the 6th April 1362 (n. st.) and in which he mentions the closing of the Mint during the preceding months of January and February "par default que monssitrove" appears to prove this. The stoppage of the fabrication, already very slow⁵, was no doubt due to reasons of a general order.

Already on 23rd November 1361, an order given in Paris, prescribed to the Masters General to take the necessary measures so that the Mints should not be liable to closing. On 21st May 1362 another order decided "atendu le chômage des mon^e que les maîtres d'icelles pourront renoncer à leurs baux"...

It is probable that the enormous charges imposed on France by the treaty of Brétigny and in particular the payment of three million gold ecus in six years for the ransom of king John, contributed to a large extent to this closing of the Mints by lowering the wealth of the people and rarefying the precious metals.

TYPES OF THE COINAGE ISSUED UNDER JOHN THE GOOD AT THE MINT OF SAINT-LÔ.

22. September 1351	{	Denier d'or à l'écu (4th issue).	Hoffmann 1.
		Maille blanche (2nd issue).	Hoff. 12.
		Double tournois.	??

1. The Franc d'or not having been ordered before December 5, 1360, there is a gap which might indicate a temporary closing of the Mint.

2. Tours was not reopened before 1365, and Bourges not before the next century, in 1419.

3. "The Mints were formerly farmed for the duration of a year; a too short term, as the Master did not always have time to fulfil his promises and was thus liable to lose considerable sums of money. It was therefore prescribed in 1398 that the farms should in future be granted for two or three years. — Planche-nault, La Monnaie d'Angers, p. 96; cf. Saulcy, Documents, Vol. II, 9. Aug. 1398. But a Mint-master might obtain his farm for a term of several years, witness Geoffroy Caron.

4. Saulcy has here committed an error in his dates, which we have rectified after the original document in the Archives nationales.

5. After June 10, 1361, and until March 5, 1362 (n. st.) G. Charon issued only 2500 Francs d'or fin; and Jehan de Gisors, from August 3, 1361, to March 13, 1362 (n. st.) 51,000 gros tournois and 60,000 petits deniers tournois.

1. The Compagnon had succeeded the Blanc à l'étoile on 27th March 1360 (n. st.).

2. It was the second issue of the Royal, which began to be struck on 15th April 1359 (n. st.).

3. We find at that date fifteen mints of the langue d'oïl, and five of the langue d'oc.

4. We have verified the fact in the Archives on the original document (A.N., 21ⁿ 964).

NUMISMATICI, RACCOLTORI E RACCOLTE, DI MONETE E MEDAGLIE IN ITALIA. By Avv. Memmo Cagiati. Naples, 1925. 8vo. 107 pp.

The Gnechi Guide of Collectors of Coins and Medals and Numismatic Collections was first issued in 1886 and went through successive editions before the Great War. This work needed complete revision, as may easily be understood, and Signor Avv. Memmo Cagiati, the well known numismatic historian of Naples and the Kingdom of the Two-Sicilies, has undertaken the task and carried it through with success.

It is only natural that we should miss some names in the nomenclature of collectors and collections, but this could not be avoided. Some amateurs have a strong objection to their names being published and dealers are usually reticent when approached to disclose the names of their clients.

However, all the best known names of collectors and collections figure in the guide, which no doubt will prove of great service and be a means of linking up numismatists of the various regions of Italy.

FÜRSTENPORTRÄTE AUF ITALIENISCHEN MÜNZEN DES QUATTROCENTO. Inaugural-Dissertation zur Erlangung der Doktorwürde der philosophischen Fakultät der Universität Frankfurt a/M., vorgelegt von Hans Nussbaum, 1924. Berlin, 1925, 8vo. 48 pp. + 3 Plates.

The object of this capable and interesting monograph is to bring the Italian Renaissance coinage more prominently before the notice of art students and collectors.

The author introduces his subject with a dissertation on the Augustalis of Frederick II which is the natural precursor of the beautiful Quattrocento coins of Milan, Mantua, Ferrara, Naples and other mints.

The Augustalis found its prototype in the coinage of Imperial Rome, although quite different in style and workmanship. The bust on the coin cannot be accepted as a portrait, but should be considered as an idealised representation of the supreme head of the State, the Emperor.

Another precursor is the Grosso of Bergamo, first issued in 1236, which bears on the obv. an imitation of the head of the Augustalis.

Real portraiture on coins does not make its appearance until about the middle of the fifteenth century. Francesco Sforza, the great condottiere, having seized the ducal throne of Milan, caused his portrait to be placed on gold and silver coins in 1462. His successors continued this practice, and we owe to the Sforza rule some of the finest productions of Renaissance money. The dies may have been the work of Matteo da Clivate and Ambrogio Preda. Whether Leonardo da Vinci prepared the drawings for the engravers is possibly mere Milanese local tradition.

From the mint of Ferrara we have a wonderful series of Portrait-coins extending from the rule of Borso d'Este to that of Alfonso (1450-1507).

The Mantuan coins of Francesco II (1484-1519); those of Naples from Ferdinand I to Louis XII (1458-1504); others of Bologna, Mirandola, Rome, Savoy, of the same period, all appeal to one for their peculiar artistic merit.

Dr Nussbaum has given us a clever and critical paper, which I am delighted to bring to the notice of the readers of the 'Numismatic Circular'.

HET LEVEN EN DE WERKEN VAN JOHANNES LOOFF, Stempelsnijder en graveur te Middelburg, door M. G. A. de Man. Large 8vo. 72 pp. + 20 plates. J. C. and W. Altorffer, Middelburg, 1925.

This is an admirable and exhaustive study of the life and works of the Middelburg die-cutter and engraver, Johannes Looft. It is from the able pen of the honoured keeper of the Middelburg Cabinet of coins and medals, Mademoiselle M. G. A. de Man, so well known by numismatists for her many contributions to the science of their predilection. On the occasion of Mademoiselle de Man's seventieth anniversary of her birthday, the Society of Sciences of Zeeland has had this monograph printed and dedicated to her, in recognition of her life-long services in the cause of science. We venture to take this opportunity of associating ourselves with her numerous friends and admirers in respectful best wishes, trusting that she may be spared for many more years to her own family circle, and to that wider one of all numismatic friends.

Mademoiselle de Man has given us all the information on Johannes Looft that she was able to collect in the Archives of Middelburg and elsewhere. She describes 48 medals by him, a list of the currency issued from 1630 to 1647, for the cutting of the dies of which the engraver was chiefly responsible. The artist was also a line-engraver; he further did copper and silver work, which does him great credit.

His name is not unknown to British collectors of medals, as several of his productions are connected with English history.

We would therefore refer our interested readers to Mademoiselle de Man's monograph, which deserves the highest praise.

ICONOGRAPHY OF ANDREAS VESALIUS, by M. H. Spielmann, F.S.A., F.R.S.L. Published by John Bale, Sons and Danielsson, Ltd., for the Wellcome Historical Medical Museum. Price £1.10.0 net.

"This important work was originally written in order to form a part of the great Liber Memorialis that was designed to celebrate the fourth centenary of the birth of Andreas Vesalius, towards the end of 1914. The Liber Memorialis was intended to take the form of a collection of essays which were to be contributed by a group of selected scholars, the best authorities on their several subjects.

"At the instance of Dr Paul Heger (President of the University of Brussels), the Universities and Academies of Belgium, the Royal Museum and other Institutions, combined, with the patronage of the Belgian government and the City of Brussels, to pay this homage to the Father of Modern Anatomy. Mr. Spielmann then resident in Brussels, was honoured, by reason of his experience in the subject of iconography, with an invitation to deal with the portraiture of the Anatomist, a subject, in this case, peculiarly intricate. This part of the work was duly carried out. Then came the Great War, and its continuance rendered hopeless the realisation of the undertaking. Since then the cost of material and printing rendered publication in Belgium impossible.

"Considered from the point of view of Art, the book comprises the names not only of a number of the greatest among Old Masters, but of Portrait Engravers also of high repute from the 16th century onwards, as well as of Sculptors, and of Medallists of the 19th and 20th centuries. Subject Pictures, Sculpture, Drawings, and Medals thus supplement the larger sections of Painted Portraits and Engravings." (From the Publishers' Prospectus.)

I have before me the proof sheets of the Medal Section of the work.

The medals number 18, and are by Merlen (2), Binfield, Lefèvre (2), le Boulonois, Mercandetti, Simon, Jouvenel (5), J. and L. Wiener, L. Wiener, Anonymous, Van der Stappen, and Bonnetain. Seventeen of these medals are reproduced on Pl. LXV-LXVIII.

For artistic merit the portrait by Van der Stappen is the best, but unfortunately the resemblance is not good, and the same may be said of the other medals. Notwithstanding, these medals are of considerable interest, and they form an interesting section of Mr. Spielmann's work.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETIES, MUSEUMS, &c.

ROYAL NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

April 16 : Percy H. Webb, Esq., M.B.E., Treasurer, in the chair.

Mr. Gilbert showed an aureus of Nero (Coh. 22) from the Ransom collection (lot. 14) and another of Hadrian (Coh. 406) from the same sale (lot 24).

Mr. W.H. Valentine showed a large Chinese coin of the Emperor Shun-Ti 1333-41.

Mr. Percy H. Webb read a paper on a find of coins of Aurelian to Carausius, made at Linchmere in Sussex in the autumn of 1924. The owners, Mrs. Hoyle and Miss F.E. Abbott, brought the complete find to the British Museum where the reader had examined it. A fine selection had been made and generously presented by the two ladies to the Museum. More than half of the coins were of the reign of Carausius and they threw a good deal of light on problems of the time. As there were no coins of the later period after the peace with Rome, we could now tell with certainty what issues belonged to the years A.D. 286-289. Prominent among these issues were the FO and L issues of London. Colchester is much less fully represented than London and had evidently not been striking long. There were no coins with the mint-mark RSR and no coins of Rouen. Rouen probably did not strike for Carausius till the middle of his reign, after his victory over the forces of Maximian. Almost all the coins in this hoard bore clear traces of original silver washing — proving, what had hitherto been less than certain — that Carausius followed the normal practice of his time in this respect. The mark XI, which appears on some four of the coins, possibly denoted that ten of them went to the aureus.

A discussion followed in which Sir Charles Oman, Mr. F.A. Walters and Mr. H. Mattingly took part.

May 27th 1925. Mr. Grant R. Francis, F.S.A., President, in the Chair. Presentations. — By Mr. Lionel L. Fletcher : Bronze plaque representing the seal of the Society enlarged. By Messrs. Spink and Son, Limited : Bound copy of their "Circular," volume xxxii.

A vote of thanks was passed to these Donors. Exhibitions. — By Mr. George Hamilton Smith : Charles II. Halfcrown, shilling and sixpence of the first, and halfcrown of the third issues of the hammered coinage. Milled halfcrowns of 1663 and 1673.

The Reddite crown by Simon. Pattern crown of 1662 with plain edge. Pattern crown in gold by Roettiers, 1663, with plain edge. Pattern crown in gold by Roettiers with inscribed edge. Two pattern broads in silver, 1660. Pattern broad in gold, 1662. Hammered broad of the first issue, and three units.

The Naval Award in gold of 1665 in its contemporary case, being the identical medal presented by Charles II to his Chancellor, Lord Clarendon. It descended to the late Lady Rose S.M. Weigall, second daughter of the eleventh Earl of Westmorland.

By Mr. J.O. Manton : Charles II. Broad in silver, 1660, with inscribed edge, laurel branch, and Simon fecit. Broad in silver, 1662, by Simon. Charles I. Gold broad with mint-mark lys and portrait resembling that upon "The Juxon Medal."

By Mr. H.W. Taffs : William III. Two shillings dated 1697 differing on both obverse and reverse from the normal issue, especially in the arms on the reverse, where the lions are much smaller than usual — a variety not recorded.

A Review of the Pattern Broad of Charles II. — Under this heading Dr. Ernest C. Carter described the five types of these issues, and showed that they were all from the hand of Thomas Simon. Their designs indicated that they were intended for currency, and a careful comparison of the weights of the different specimens, with and without lettered edges, suggested that at least two of the five types were patterns for gold coins of higher denomination than the broad. Historical evidence was forthcoming to support this suggestion; and it was again supported by the fact that the original intention materialized in the issue, in 1664 and 1668, of the two-guinea pieces by Roettiers.

Dr. Carter, in illustration of his subject, exhibited a beautiful series of the coins he described.

KENT NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

A well attended meeting was held at the Maidstone Museum on Friday, June 12th 1925, when Mr. W.H. Valentine, F.R.N.S., gave an interesting lecture on the hop tallies and tokens, which were used many years ago as a method of keeping accounts between the hop growers and pickers. The lecture was illustrated by specimens from the Museum collection, kindly arranged by Mr. Golding, and by others belonging to the lecturer. Mr. Valentine stated that in his opinion both wooden and metal tallies were used together; the wooden ones for the large quantities, and those of metal for the odd bushels, but, as the coin-shaped tally was more convenient to use, it eventually superseded the wooden tally in nearly all districts. Mr. Valentine, who has already published several books on Numismatics, is proposing to publish a reference book of these hop tokens, and asked the Society to give him all the assistance they could by allowing him to take rubbings of any tokens they had in order that the lists might be as complete as possible. As the hop tokens appear only to have been used in Kent and Sussex, it is hoped to find eventually the finest representative collection in the County Museum at Maidstone, and anyone having specimens which they would like added to the collection, should send them to Mr. J.W. Bridge, the hon. secretary of the Society, at the Museum. The following coins were exhibited : — By Mr. J.W. Bridge. 3 communion tokens of lead, dated 1776, 1806, and 1836, 1 uniface token in lead with star shaped ornament, probably an early hop token, found locally; Mr. Walter H. Day, a Henry III, penny of the first issue from the London Mint; Dr. Spencer Edwards, a Dublin brewers' token of Stein, Brown and Co., of 1 tub.

HENRY VIII.

The Anglo-Gallic series really ceases with the reign of Henry VI, when all the French possessions of the English crown were lost with the exception of Calais, but the record of the series would not be complete without mentioning the groats struck at Tournai by Henry VIII. — Henry VIII held Tournai for five years. In 1518 he entered into a fresh treaty with France, by which he restored Tournai in exchange for a payment of 600,000 francs in twelve years. Hewlett's "Anglo-Gallic Coins".

COLLECTION OF BRITISH AND FOREIGN ORDERS

MOSTLY GRAND CROSSES

THE MOST DISTINGUISHED ORDER OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE. KNIGHT GRAND CROSS.

45104 The Collar. Formed alternately of lions of England, of Maltese crosses, and of the ciphers S.M. and S.G. having in the centre the imperial crown, over two winged lions passant-guardant, each holding a book, and seven arrows. At the opposite end of the collar are two similar lions. The whole is gilt except the crosses, which are of white enamel, and is linked together by small gilt chains.

The Badge. A gilt cross of fourteen points of white enamel, having in the centre, on one side the Archangel St. Michael encountering Satan, and on the other, St. George on horseback, encountering a dragon, within a blue circle, on which the motto of the Order is inscribed. The Cross is surmounted by the Imperial crown and is worn by a Knight Grand Cross to the Collar.

The Star. Seven rays of silver, having a small ray of gold between each of them, and over all cross of St. George, Gules. In the centre is a representation of the Archangel St. Michael encountering Satan within a blue circle, inscribed with the motto, AUSPICUM MELIORIS AVI. The enamel is slightly fractured in several places otherwise extra fine. R.R.R. 75 »

Instituted 27th April 1818, for the natural born subjects of the Crown of the United Kingdom as may have held or shall hold high and confidential offices within His Majesty's colonial possessions, and in reward for services to the crown in relation to the foreign affairs of the Empire, etc.

THE ROYAL VICTORIAN ORDER. Knight Grand Cross.

Instituted by Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, Empress of India, 21st April 1896.

Star. Gilt of eight principal points, in the centre a rose on a white and red cross within a blue band inscribed PRO FIDE REGE ET LEGE. R.R. E.F. 21 »

The Origin of this Order has been attributed to so remote a date as 1325. In 1795, on the partition of Poland, this Order was quite overlooked, and was not again heard of until July 1807, when its restoration was proclaimed at Warsaw. The Revolution of 1831 led to the union of the Polish Orders with those of Russia. The white Eagle has only one class.

45107 PORTUGAL. The Military Order of Christ. Oval gilt badge with chased border red enamelled cross expanding and flattened at the extremities, charged with a plain white cross, surmounted by the sacred heart in the centre of a star, the mounted on a white ground. Riband red.

Star. In the centre crosses as on the badge, above, the sacred heart, the whole in the centre of a silver star. Enamel chipped on one side, otherwise very fine. R. 8 10 »

This Order arose on the abolition of the Order of the Templar, and is of a dual character, the other branch being Pontifical. It was created by Dionysius, or Dennis, King of Portugal.

45108 PORTUGAL. Order of the Tower and Sword. Collar. Gilt with alternating towers, sword and wreath with blue links. Attached to the collar is a badge. On a enamelled green oak-wreath a white enamelled star of fine points and a gilt tower in the centre of the star, wreath and sword within a blue band inscribed VALOR LEALDADE E MERITO. Reverse. An open book within a blue band PELO REI E PELA LEI.

Badge as on collar.

- * From PREFACE to third edition : The coins found and published during the last ten years have been described in their proper places. Several additions have been made to the lists of the mints before the Conquest and some additions and alterations have been made throughout. But the most important alteration has been in the reign of Edward III, where it is shown that all the coins hitherto attributed to him were struck subsequently to 1351, and that those struck before, during, and after the Treaty of Bretigny may be distinguished by the titles inscribed on them. NOTES ON THE MYTHOLOGICAL TYPES ON ROMAN REPUBLICAN COINS.

MYTH OF THE NEMEAN LION.

Homer's references to lions in his poetical similes must refer to those of Asia Minor, as in Il. XV he describes a bearded lion turning away the hunters of the stag to illustrate the way in which Hector turned his foes. He described the fury of Agamemnon as "like a lion" in Il. XI, 239 and in line 480 speaks of the jackals fleeing from a ravenous lion.

In Il. XVIII, 318 he describes "a lion deep bearded, robbed of his whelps".

In Odyssey XI, 611, lions are described as wrought on the baldric of the shade of Heracles and in Od. VI, 130 Odysseus is described as sallying forth in his strength like a lion mountain-bred; as the scene of this part of the Odyssey is European, Homer may have regarded lions as still in his time found there. There is evidence that lions were seen in Greece as late as the days of Xerxes. The Greek astronomers named the star now called Regulus $\lambda\epsilon\omega\nu$ and the ancients associated the star with the myth of the Nemean lion.

In later times lions were brought from Africa for the Games in the amphitheatres.

Nemea is the name of a valley in the territory of Cleona in the N. E. of the Peloponnesus which lies in a direction nearly north and south, and is from half to three-quarters of a mile in breadth. It is shut in on every side by mountains, one of which, on the North East, is 3000 feet high.

In the sides of these mountains are several natural caves, one of which, situated fifteen stadia from the sacred grove of Nemea on the road thence to Mycenae, was pointed out as the cave of the Nemean lion (Pausanias II, 15, § 2).

The cave was near a village called Bembina mentioned by Theocritus, XXV, 202.

On a denarius of C. Publicius Q. f., issued about 79 or 81 B.C., the Reverse type represents the struggle of Hercules with the Nemean lion, the club, bow and arrows being shewn below, a subject which had appeared on bronze coins of Suessa Aurunca about 268 B.C., and at Heraclea in Lucania about 380 to 300 B.C. Nothing seems to be known as to the locality from which the family arose, but as they first came into prominence during the Punic wars, and as the legend of the Nemean lion had for many years been popular in the south it may be possible that the moneyer chose an ancient type from the city of Suessa or Heraclea. A denarius issued jointly by C. Coponius and Q. Sicinius c. 49 B.C. has the rev. design of a club draped with the Nemean lion-skin (cf. ANTIA Bab. 1).

The twelve labours of Heracles are not described by Homer, but, as early as about 850 B.C., Hesiod wrote in the Theogony (line 326): "But she (Echidna) subdued by Orthus, brought forth the destructive Sphinx, a bane to the Cadmæans; and the Nemean lion, whom I wot Hera, the glorious consort of Zeus, reared and settled in the cornlands of Nemea; a woe to mankind. There abiding he used to devour the tribes of men, whilst he held sway over Tretus of Nemea and over Apesas; but him the might of strong Heracles subdued".

Apollodorus a Grammarian of Athens who flourished in 140 B.C. (II, 74-75, V, 2-5), p. 72 Ed. Lipsia thus relates the myth. "First then Eurystheus ordered Heracles to bring the skin of the Nemean lion; now this beast was invulnerable, being born from Typhon. While going therefore in search of the lion he came to Cleone, and lodged with a craftsman Molorchus, and when the latter wished to offer a sacrifice he ordered him to keep it till the thirteenth day, and if he returned safe from the hunt, to sacrifice it to Zeus the Saviour, if he perished, to offer it to him as a hero. After reaching Nemea and seeking out the lion, he first shot at it with arrows; when he perceived it was invulnerable, brandishing his club he pursued it. When it fled into its den, which had two mouths, he blocked up one entrance and went in against the beast through the other; and placing his hand round its neck held it, squeezing it till he strangled it, and placing it on his shoulders carried it to Cleone. Finding Molorchus on the last of the days about to offer the sacrifice to him as though dead, he sacrificed to Zeus the Saviour and brought the lion to Mycenæ".

Diodorus Siculus (IV, xi, § 3 and 4) a contemporary of Cæsar and Augustus thus relates the myth.

"And he received as the first labour the slaying of the lion in Nemea. This was of extraordinary size, and being invulnerable by iron, bronze, or stone, required the constraining force of being gripped with the hand. He lived chiefly between Mycenæ and Nemea, around a mountain called from the incident 'the pierced' (τρυφεύς); for it had round the base a continuous gully in which the beast was wont to lurk. Heracles coming to the place assailed it, and when the beast fled into the gully, following it and blocking up one of the mouths, he grappled with it, and squeezing its neck with his arms, strangled it. Placing its hide around him, and covering his whole body, owing to its size, he had it as a defence against later dangers".

Strabo (Casaub 377, Book VIII, c. VI, § 20) who lived near the end of the reign of Augustus thus refers to the myth.

"Cleonæ is a town situated upon the road leading from Argos to Corinth, on an eminence ... there also, between Cleonæ and Phlius, is Nemea and the grove where it was the custom of the Argives to celebrate the Nemean games. Here is the scene of the table of the Nemean lion, and here also the village Bembina.

Cleonæ is distant from Argos 120 stadia, and 80 from Corinth. We have ourselves seen the city from Acrocorinthos".

Pausanias (Lib. II, c. XV), after describing Cleone, adds, "In these mountains the cave of the Nemean lion is yet to be seen, and the village Nemea is distant from hence about fifteen stadia".

The most detailed and most beautiful account of the myth is that of Theocritus in the XXVth Idyll. He describes the search in the deep valley and the first sight of the lion with its blood-stained jaws, the attempt to shoot it with arrows which fell from its skin without wounding; then the blow on the creature's head which half stunned it, and lastly the struggle to strangle the beast — "and Hades took his monstrous life". The flaying of the hide which resisted steel and sharp stone was then performed by using the sharp claws of the beast. Then Heracles adds "I cast it about my limbs for my defence against the brunt of wounding war. Friend, lo, even thus befel the slaying of the Nemean lion, that aforetime had brought many a bane on flocks and men".

MYTH OF PEGASUS.

There are two questions which naturally arise when we see the figure of Pegasus on a Roman coin; the first is, why was it chosen for a type by the moneyer, and the second, how was the winged horse regarded by the men who used the money. The answer to the first is that the moneyers frequently used to choose some emblem associated with their own family history, and any moneyer whose ancestors may have had any office in Corinth or any share in the subjection of the city would wish to commemorate the same by the type of Pegasus on his coins; that symbolic horse being the common emblem of that city. As to the thoughts which the symbol would suggest in the minds of the Roman citizens, of course much would depend on their education and culture. To the literary classes and those who studied Greek the association with the Muses would probably be uppermost in their minds; perhaps in traders' and soldiers' minds the mere geographical or historical ideas would predominate.

The winged horse is found on oblong bronze pieces issued about 280 B.C. in S. Italy where the frequent communication with Corinth or its colony Syracuse would make the Pegasus myth well known. An illustration of a specimen occurs on p. 5 of Babelon Tome I. A little later bronze coins, semunciae, were issued, bearing on the Obverse a head of Hercules wearing the lion's skin, and on the Reverse Pegasus to right, ROMA underneath, in the field ϵ , or a club.

These also may have been issued during the Pyrrhic war. This might be placed after the Republican issues. On the Rev. of common denarii of Quintus Titius, issued about 87 B.C., Pegasus is represented flying, to right, on the Obverse either the head of Mutinus Titinus, or that of Bacchus. The same type appears on his Quinarii, on the Obverse of which appears a bust of Victory winged.

The Pegasus on these coins is said to be derived from the coins of Lampsacus, in which city Priapus was held in honour. Mutinus Titinus is a surname of Priapus. The head of Bacchus also appears on coins of Lampsacus. These two deities were associated at that city.

L. Cossutius c. f. Sabula issued denarii probably in Corinth about 74 B.C. according to De Salis.

On his denarii the Pegasus on the Reverse is ridden by Bellerophon whose family was, probably, connected with Corinth. As a moneyer's symbol Pegasus occurs on early Republican coins bearing the Dioscuri, and on denarii of Lucius Julius Bursio, issued about 88 B.C. The earliest coins which bore the type of Pegasus are those of Corinth issued between 585-500 B.C. The periods when the Romans were especially interested in Corinth were the days when L. Mummius destroyed that city in 146 B.C., and those in which Julius Caesar rebuilt and colonized it in 46 B.C.

The coins which were issued between 146 B.C. and the restoration of Corinth probably bore types having reference rather to the legend than to the city.

The earliest myths were generally an attempt to describe the powers of nature, and the winged horse reminds us that, long before the Greek myth arose, winged animals were used in Mesopotamia to represent supernatural powers. The horse was both strong and swift, and seemed to those early Greeks a fit emblem either for the strong swift waves of the ocean, which on account of the similarity of the foam-crested waves to a horse's neck and mane we still call "sea-horses". So Hesiod Theog. 281 said Pegasus was borne by the Gorgon Medusa to Poseidon by the side of the ocean. Cicero used Pegasus as an emblem of speed in the only passage in which he mentions the myth, in his Oration pro P. Quintio § 80. The ideas of speed and irresistible power may have been suggested by the speed with which the dawn springs forth in southern climes. Thus we find some the Hebrew poets writing of "the wings of the ning", as in Psalm 139, v. 9, and in Psalm 18, v. 10. The poet Bellerophon in Alexandra (17) wrote "now over the peak of Pegasus, the dawn soared on the swift wings of Pegasus".

As the dawn is said to have received Pegasus when he had slain his rider Bellerophon.

Hesiod relates the myth of Perseus slaying Medusa, and Chrysaor Pegasus springing from her body; he then suggests a derivation of the name Pegasus viz., from a spring, πηγῇ (Theogony 282). Others as Asklepiades derived the name from the root ΠΑΓ from πῦμα and πηγός strong, or firmly put together, ὅτι ἐκπεπηδῆκε τοῦ Γοργόνος τραχήλου. Among the excellent gifts given by Agamemnon were twelve stalwart horses (ἵπποι πηγοὶ Iliad. IX, 124). In the text of Hesiod, as now preserved, the horse has been regarded as winged, because it is described as winging its flight away from the earth (ἀποπτάμενος); but some scholars regard these words as an addition by a later writer, because Pindar is said to be the first to mention wings on Pegasus (Olymp. XIII, 86 ἵππου πτερόεντι) and in Isthmian VII "for the winged Pegasus threw Bellerophon". The winged steed is also mentioned in the Ion of Euripides, 202.

Later writers copy the idea of wings, as Ovid in Met. IV, 781, and Strabo, VIII, 379.

Hesiod however gave wings to Nike, Eros, Erinys, Hypnos and Procreas.

From an archeological point of view it is most probable that the carvings of winged beasts were first made known to the Greeks by the Phoenicians, who had seen such in Mesopotamia. The ancient sculpture representing Bellerophon on Pegasus which was found in Melos represents the horse as wingless.

Homer does not mention Pegasus when relating the story of Bellerophon in Il. VI, 155 seq. The sculpture from Melos represents Homer's story, and is not an illustration of the later Pegasus myth. Apollodorus says he mounted Pegasus and, rising on him in the air, slew the Chimaera with his arrows. Tzetzes in his commentary on Lycophron says Bellerus was slain in Corinth, and hence his slayer was known as Bellerophon.

It was the Alexandrian poets who connected the myth of Pegasus with the Muses, following their custom of allegorizing and moralizing the ancient legends. Hence the Pierian stream which issued from the Corinthian rock was made to signify the fount of poetic inspiration.

St. Paul allegorized the rabbinical legend about the rock struck by Moses in a somewhat similar manner. Other fountains were similarly spoken of as Castalia at Delphi and Troezen. Confer Euripides πειρηναῖος πῶλος and Pausanias II, 31, 12.

As an example of the moralizing of the later writers we find Bellerophon represented as thrown from the back of Pegasus because he was endeavouring to reach the abodes of the gods; very different is the Homeric account of that hero.

The idea of the ascent of Pegasus to Heaven led the later poets, as Aratus and Hyginus, to name one of the constellations Pegasus, hence Ovid's line (Fasti III, 475) "nunc fruitur coelo, quod pennis ante petebat".

The association of the myth with the Muses is related by Antoninus Liberalis, a Greek grammarian who flourished about 150 A.D., and who wrote a series of forty-nine mythological stories.

He said the nine Muses contended with the nine daughters of King Pierus, of Macedonia, who when defeated by the muses were turned into birds. Pegasus, advised by Poseidon, struck mount Helicon with his hoof and a fountain issued which was therefore called Hippocrene, near the grove of the Muses, and whosoever drank of that stream became inspired.

Pausanias, IX, 31 § 3 "on ascending from the grove (of the Muses) you will see a fountain, which is called the fountain of the horse (ἵππου κρήνη). They say, that the horse of Bellerophon made this fountain by striking the earth with his hoof". Strabo lib. VIII, p. 399, refers also to the legend.

"There it is said, Pegasus was taken by Bellerophon while drinking: this was a winged horse which sprung from the neck of Medusa when the head of the Gorgon was severed from the body.

This was the horse it is said which caused the Hippocrene or Horse's fountain to spring up in Helicon by striking the rock with its hoof."

Pindar in his Isthmian Ode VII relates the fate of the rider Bellerophon as a warning to the proud. He says "but if a man lifteth up his eyes to things far off he is too short to attain unto the brass paved floor of heaven, for the winged Pegasus threw Bellerophon, his rider, who would fain have attained to the heavenly homes and the company of Zeus".

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTICES OF MEDALLISTS

WILLIGEN, ANTHONIS PIETERSZON VAN DER. Very probably born in Zierikzee, was baptized there April 21st 1591. He was the seventh child of the goldsmith P. Hermanse and Janneken Jacobs, daughter of Jacob Claasge, goldsmith.

A.P. van der Willigen, brought up in the goldsmith trade, married, 17th January 1617, Grietje van den Houte. The young couple established themselves in the house named "Roomen" in the Meelstreet at Zierikzee. In that house with a 16th century front, the old goldsmith furnace is still to be seen. A.P.v.d. Willigen occupied several honourable offices in his native town. About the year 1627 he left Zierikzee for the Hague, where on his demand he obtained, August 17th 1630, a privilege of the States-General to cut and publish a medal celebrating the victories of the Prince Frederik Henry of Orange. His abode in the Hague does not seem to have lasted long, then we meet him already in 1634 in Flushing, alas imprisoned, accused of the crime of having made a quantity of false rixdollars. Poverty, probably, will have been the cause that v.d.W. had connected himself with persons of vile conduct, who tempted him to make false coins. Having been examined by Pieter van Beveren, General of the Mint of the United Provinces, May 23th 1634, he indeed confessed to have been engaged by a villanous person, named Samuel Buyts to make false coins. V.d.W. owned to have made about forty false rixdollars and to have distributed them exclusively on the island of Walcheren, during a period of four months. It has remained unknown to what punishment v.d.W. was condemned for his crime of having counterfeited coins.

A.P.v.d.W. did not long survive the disgrace, brought upon his honorable family, for it is proved, that he died before or in the course of the year 1640. Hubertus Goltzius, related to the family of the celebrated engraver of that name, who had married one of Anthonis Listers, is in a document, dated 1641, named as one of the guardians of the four children, left by the deceased Anthonis Pz. v.d. Willigen.

The first work of A.P.v.d. Willigen, Wilge or Willighen, appears to be a capital engraving in three papers, illustrating the unaccomplished part of the tower of St. Lievens great church at Zierikzee, after the drawings, probably made by Anthonis Keldermans. The Magistrates of Zierikzee paid him in 1619 14 pounds grooten = 84 florins of our actual money for this precious work.

A copy of these rare engravings exists in the collection of the "Zeelandia Illustrata", belonging to the Zeeuwisch Genootschap der Wetenschappen in Middelburg. His first signed medal dates from 1630, his last one of 1631. Van der Willigen made several varieties of four medals left by him. Dies cut for méreaux de métiers (gildepenningen) have not been made by him. It is very probable, that other medals have been made by him, but they are unsigned and therefore we prefer to make no mention of them.

See for his complete works (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 501 and Marie G. A. de Man, in Jaarboek voor Munt- en Penningkunde, 1924 (Communicated by M^{lle} M.G.A. de Man).

WOLFF, TOBIAS (B.D.M., Vol. VI, p. 529). Dr Habich in Die deutschen Medailleure des XVI. Jahrhunderts, Munich, 1916, gives a more complete chronological list of this artist's productions than the one I compiled from the various bibliographical sources at my disposal.

Tobias Wolff's activity as a Medallist begins in 1568, but a medal of 1564, with Joachim II. of Brandenburg and Sigismund of Brandenburg facing John George and Frederick; R. Triumphant chariot of ancestors; lead medallion in Berlin, is probably one of his productions whilst an apprentice. This medal is very much in the art of Konrad Schreck's. In close connection with this work we have:

Undated. Prince Elector Augustus of Saxony and Anna(?).

Model in stone. Nuremberg.

— Prince Elector Augustus of Saxony. Model in stone. Coburg and Gotha.

— The same, smaller. R. Anna (Tentzel, 15, VIII).

1568. John Cyrus, abbot of Breslau; signed. Berlin and Munich.

1568. Sigismund Woysel, physician of Breslau, signed.

1569. G. von Sel. Vienna. This last medal shows characteristics in common with the medals that follow.

1570. Nikolaus Gallus and Georg and Klara Han, signed. Berlin.

1570. Joachim Frederick of Brandenburg and Katharina of Brandenburg. Berlin and Nuremberg.

1571. Joachim von Beust, professor in Wittenberg, signed.

1571. Peter Zeitler-Hofman, signed; and Anna Zeitler, née Reich, signed. Berlin.

1571. Bussa Sandau, signed; and Regina Sandau, signed. Berlin.

1572. Lukas Pollio of Breslau, signed. Berlin.

1572. George II. of Liegnitz-Brieg, signed; and Barbara von Liegnitz. Breslau and Dresden.

1572. Nikolaus v. Rhediger (Kundmann, Pl. X, 30), and Maria v. Rhediger. Breslau (Kundmann, Pl. XXXIII, 100).

1573. Johann Zborowski, signed. Munich and Gotha.

1573. Elisabeth Zborowski, signed. Munich and Gotha.

1574. Prince Elector John George of Brandenburg and Prince Elector Augustus of Saxony, signed. Nuremberg (model in stone). Weimar (illustrated, B.D.M., VI, p. 535).

1574. Daniel Rappold, syndic of Breslau, and his wife (née Wincklerin) with two children. R. Ruins in landscape. Berlin and Nuremberg.

1574. Hans Thiel. Berlin.

1574. Johann Neefe (Naevis), physician to the Saxon court signed. Berlin.

1574. The same; smaller, and Apollonia Neefe, signed. Berlin.
 1575. Prince Elector Augustus of Saxony. Stone model, signed.
 1575. Electress Anna of Saxony. Stone model.
 Undated. Prince Elector Augustus and 1575. Anna. Gotha (Tentzel, 15, 1).
 1575 or 1579. The same. R. The Resurrection. Stone model. Copenhagen.

Probably also:

1575. Johannes Cyrus, abbot of Breslau (only known from Kundmann's illustrations, Pl. IX, 25).
 1575. Jeremias Neuner, signed.
 1576. Prince Elector Augustus of Saxony. Stone model. Gotha.
 1576. Wolfgang of Brunswick-Grubenhagen. Stone. Nuremberg.
 1576. Albrecht V. of Bavaria and Ferdinand der Wartenberger, Duke of Bavaria, signed. Vienna and Munich.
 1576. Ferdinand der Wartenberger, signed. Stone. Munich.

 1583. Prince Elector Augustus of Saxony, signed.
 1583. Christian and Sophia of Saxony; conjoined busts. Vienna.
 1583. The same; differing in the costumes (Tentzel, XVII, 7).
 1583. Sophia of Saxony, signed. Munich.

1583. Johann Appenfelder, signed, and Anna am Ende, signed. Berlin (illustrated, Vol. VI, p. 532).
 1585/6. Prince Elector Augustus and Anna (Erbstein Cat. I, 306).
 1588. Hans Has, burgomaster of Dresden, and Anna Has. Berlin.
 1588. Johann Jenitz, signed. Berlin.
 1589/91. Electress Sophia of Saxony. Dresden (illustrated, Vol. VI, p. 534).
 1590. The same. R. The Trinity. Vienna and Gotha.
 1590. Barbatus Seifart von der Zehl, signed. Berlin and Leipzig.
 1591. Prince Elector Christian I. Gotha.
 1591. Another. Vienna. This piece belongs to Wolff's Furstenberg medals. As this is the only dated piece, we may surmise that the whole series was produced at that time.

- 1591 or 1592. Paul Buchner. Vienna.
 1592. Christian Barht. Berlin.
 1592. Hans Georg Dehne. Berlin.
 1592. Ludwig Andreas. Berlin.
 1592(?). Philipp Ulstat. Berlin.
 1593. Melchior Zipser, signed. Berlin.
 1593. August Jenitz, and (R.) Victoria Jenitz, née Heidenreich. Berlin.
 1593. Frederick William of Saxony. A badge, belonging to a series.

Undated. The same; medal, and 1594. Anna Maria, his consort. Gotha.

 The same. R. Arms (Trésor Num., XXXI, 6).
 1594. Leonhard Vogel (Erbstein Cat. I, 431).
 1594. Anna Has.
 1595. Valentin Gräfner, goldsmith, signed. Berlin.
 1595. Bernhard Schmit. Gotha.
 1596. Johann and Kaspar Neefe (Naevius); joint busts, signed (Erbstein Cat., I, 399).

The reverse of this medal shows a shield of arms within ornamented cartouche, below, a motto, on which the signature V. This monogram does not represent Paulus van Vianen, but as the Adolph III. Occo medal shows the Augsburg goldsmith Jean de Vos, who evidently worked at same time in conjunction with Tobias Wolff, as he did with other medallists.

1596. Christoph Richter and Maria Richter. Berlin.
 1596. Georg Landsberg (Lanna, III, 1201).
 The same, and Ursula Alberti, née Bener. Berlin, Vienna and Chemnitz.
 1597. Rudolf v. Gersdorf. Berlin.
 1597. Burkhardt Reich and Gertrud Reich (illustrated, Vol. VI, p. 533).
 1597. Christian I. of Saxony. In the style of the Series of Rulers (Tentzel, 19, III).
 1598. Prince Elector Christian II. of Saxony (Löbbecke, 588).
 1598. Philip II, of Spain. The Hague.
 1600. Margrave Joachim of Brandenburg. Berlin.
 1600. Margrave Ernest of Brandenburg. Berlin.
 1600. Kaspar Has, signed. Berlin.
 1600. Urban Schneweis, Dresden goldsmith, signed. Berlin.
 1601. Christian II, of Saxony, and probably also others (Tentzel, 25, I, IV, V and, VIII).
 1601. Martin Hillger. Vienna.
 1604. Balthasar Dietrich, signed (Erbstein Cat. I. 347).
 1606. Prince Elector Christian II. of Saxony; large medallion with cartouche (Tentzel, 26, V).
 Undated. "Tobias Wost". Mentioned by Tentzel, p. 158 (self-portrait of Tobias Wolff?).

THE COINAGE OF SAINT-LÔ

CHARLES V.

We have to wait until 1376 before we find, after fourteen years of interruption, the Mint of Saint-Lô active again, and once more, we do not possess any document on the circumstances of its reopening. But we are, ourselves, convinced that the reopening was a consequence of the important event which dominates at this time the local history of the Cotentin: the siege and recapture from the English of the castle of Saint-Sauveur-le-Vicomte.

Leopold Delisle has narrated in detail, with the help of original documents, the preparations for and varied phases of this memorable siege; so we cannot do better than refer the reader to his work¹. But we should note that the populations of the Cotentin and Lower-Normandy, ground down each in their turn by the English garrison of Saint-Sauveur, attached capital importance to the success of the undertaking, and that they consented to heavy sacrifices to ensure this.

As early as the month of July 1372, these populations sent to the King deputies beseeching him to take the matter in hand. On the following 27th of December, "Charles V, by letters patent, dated from Paris, declared his intention to besiege Saint-Sauveur, and ordered a levy of 40,000 gold Francs from the whole of the land of Normandy, on the other side of the river Saine²". This tax was voted and dealt out, and the siege began early in 1373, but "the operations languished during nearly two years"; the fortress was too strong, and the besieging army not enough. It was admitted that more powerful means should be put into working, but to do this, more money was required. The Provincial states, gathered at Saint-Lô on 10th October 1374, then at Bayeux on the following 27th January, voted fresh and considerable subsidies. At Bayeux, says G. Dupont, 30,000 Francs were voted.

The siege was revived, at a fresh cost, may we say, in March 1378 (n.st.), and, thanks to the heavy artillery which was used there, and thanks also to the levy on the parishes of Lower-Normandy which came to help on the siege, the English were obliged to capitulate, under conditions. On 21st May they agreed to surrender the castle if they were not relieved before the 1st of July; but they were allowed the right to take away all their belongings and to have them transported to the harbour of Carteret "at the expense of the country", and it was agreed that a sum of 40,000 gold francs should be paid over to them. On July 3, the besieged surrendered.

As early as June 4, the Provincial states had been summoned; they accepted the terms of the capitulation, and elected a commission³ with full powers to realize the 60,000 francs gold which it was estimated would be needed. The Royal Treasury lent 20,000 francs; and a forced loan was imposed upon the notable inhabitants of the cities of Lower-Normandy — a loan which was repaid by means of varied local taxes — which procured the remainder of the money.

The object was reached; it had cost dearly, and Lower-Normandy had to bear the burden, but the country felt a sense of relief and security which it had been missing for a long time. It is probable that from this time the hope began to occupy the minds — possibly of the Provincial states themselves — to "raise the Mint", the possession of which constituted for the city a notable privilege. The Royal administration was certainly in favour of this reopening, as about 1367, the Master General Edouard Tadelin had exerted himself to this end⁴. That he did not succeed was due no doubt to no one offering to take the mastership, but after the capitulation of the English, the situation was no longer the same, and we believe that offers were not long delayed in coming.

At any rate, about September 8, 1375, i.e. barely two months after the videment of Saint-Sauveur, a document, quoted from by Saulcy, mentions a Jacques Aubert as Warden of the Mint of Saint-Lô, although his official nomination dates from the following 18th of February, 1376 (n.st.) according to a register of the Sorbonne. On February 13, the second office of Warden was given to Raoul de Saint-Germain, formerly Warden of the mint at Dijon, and the privy masters' accounts of expenses inform us that the said Raoul received his salary from March 22, 1376 (n.st.) "qu'il vint au St Lô pour faire édifier et mettre sus lad. monnoye jusqu'au XX^e septembre LXXXVI qu'il se partit dud. office"⁵.

The Mint began to coin on 16th May 1376 under the direction of a master named Hanequin de Winemar⁶, who acted by the intermediary of a "tenant le compte", i.e. a clerk, named Julian Mansel. This Master had to direct both the gold and silver mints, and Saulcy's Documents prove that the dual Mastership, which we have noticed under John the Good, no longer existed under his successor⁷. On the other hand, Saint-Lô, like the other mints of the kingdom, must certainly have struck gold currency.

The accounts for the gold coinage are lost⁸, but we possess those for the white money and know that from 16th May 1376 to 7th June 1377, the Mint struck 485,000 Blancs au K (Hoffmann, 7).

Hanequin de Winemar's contract was certainly not for longer than one year, as it was then the rule; he did not renew it, and his clerk, Julian Mansel, filled the office from 7th June 1377 to 4th August 1379. But already the fabrication was beginning to languish: in 1377-78, Julian Mansel struck only 43,000 Blancs au K — more than eleven times less than in the preceding year, — and 45,000 in 1378-79. At the end of the second year's term, he did not apply for a renewal, and no one having presented himself to take his place, the Mint was closed after 4th August 1379.

Exactly a month sooner, on 4th July 1379, the battle of Pont-la-Vieille, near Valognes, took place, at which the English garrison of Cherbourg⁹ had beaten and made prisoner the king's lieutenant in Lower-Normandy, Guillaume des Bordes, captain of Montebourg. Following on this defeat, the French had to abandon to the enemy the whole of the North of the peninsula. All the inhabitants, men and women, had to leave their houses and villages, and "se retrairent toutes ces gens par deça le Clos que on dit du Cotentin, qui estoit le plus gras pays du monde". (Froissart.) Never before had this land, formerly so prosperous, undergone such calamities; from Carentan to Cherbourg, it was left a wilderness¹⁰.

It is understood that the enemy did not remain confined in this solitude; they frequently left it to attack and rob the rural populations. To mention but one year, in 1381, the English of Cherbourg devastated the Cotentin and the Avranchin.

These devastations and these wars ruined trade and industry; they were, in a word, responsible for the standstill of the Mint.

2. A. N. Z1⁸ 981-982. These accounts give also the name of the assayer of the Mint which Saulcy omitted to mention: his name was Colart Partoutbel.

3. And not Vomerjart, an erroneous reading of Saulcy, which we have rectified from the original document. — Likewise, instead of Jehan Mansel, we should read Julian.

5. In gold currency, Saint-Lô cannot have issued other coins than the Franc à pied (Hoffmann, 2) — the official name of which was Denier d'or aux fleurs de lis — created by letters patent of 20th April 1365.

6. The Blanc au K also dated from the latter's patent of 20th April 1365; it was an excellent coin issued on the "pied" 24.

7. On August 1, 1378, Charles the Bad had pledged Cherbourg to the English for three years, and the delay was prolonged in 1381; but in 1383, Charles the Bad was unable to obtain its restitution and the English declared that they were going to retain Cherbourg and Calais at any price. The King of Navarre, Charles III, son of Charles the Bad, did not receive the town and castle of Cherbourg before December 1393.

III

CHARLES VI.

On 15th April 1390, letters patent, given in Paris, were sent to the Masters general "pour l'ouverture de la mon^e de S^t Lô, que Pierre le Marié offre prendre, et qui a longtemps esté en chômage, par deffaut de m^e par^r". To stop the influx of foreign currencies in Normandy and "peupler le pays de noz bonnes monnoyes", these letters directed "de bailler audit Pierre ladicte Monnoye de Saint-Lô, sans enchère, ceste fois seulement pour ung an", and at the price he offered ¹.

The documents do not inform us whether the initiative was taken direct by Pierre le Marié ² or if the latter had made his application in consequence of the steps undertaken by order of the Master Generals in view of finding a new Mint-master.

The order for the reopening could be complied with fairly rapidly. The Mint, under Charles V, was installed in a mansion belonging to the bishop of Coutances, lord and baron of Saint-Lô. This same house was rented afresh ³. Two other houses were also rented "pour le fait de la monnaie", one of which was intended for the lodging of the wardens. One of the wardens of a previous period, Jacques Aubert, who may have inhabited the town, was restored to his office ⁴, and a second one was appointed, whose name is not known, as well as no doubt also a counter-warden. Eleven workmen and coiners were conveyed from Paris "pour l'avancement de l'ouvrage dud. lieu ⁵"; and pending the appointment of a die-cutter ⁶, the necessary dies were sent to the Master ⁷. Further, although we lack information, it may be that the former assayer, Nicolas Partoutbel, had returned to his office; otherwise, another must have been appointed. At any rate, on 22nd July 1390, the coining was recommenced "dans la monnoie naguère de nouvel diffiée", but Pierre le Marié was not at the head ⁸; a person of the name of Guiot Quarrel ⁹ had in fact made higher bids, and "Nos seigneurs des Comptes" had given him the Mastership.

It is well-known that the gold coins of Charles VI struck at Saint-Lô bear as a distinctive mark a dot under the 19th letter; but such is not the case with the silver money, where the secret dot occurs on the 18th letter. The silver coins — guénars and half-guénars — on which we find a dot under the 19th letter on the reverse, and a dot between the 18th and last letter and the initial crosslet on obverse, originate from the mint of Villeneuve-Saint-André-lès-Avignon. There could not exist any doubt as to this, for the Registre entre deux ais is absolute and precise, and we are surprised that Saulcy should have thought there was an error, and that the Register transferred to the article Saint-Lô the characteristics of the coins struck in Paris, when, until 1411, the guénars and half guénars issued in the capital are distinguished from others in that they bear no secret dot ¹⁰.

Every one knows too, that under Charles VI, the secret dot is sometimes a plain dot and sometimes an annulet, and that, until 1417, the one and the other are characteristic of a distinct period of the coinage.

The period during which the secret dot is plain extends from the 11th September 1389 to the 20th October 1411; and, during these twenty-two years there were but two issues of gold Ecus à la couronne, and two issues of white and black money.

The Ecus à la couronne are of fine gold, and between the two issues there is only a very slight difference of weight.

The white money — that is the Blanc of 10 deniers, commonly called guénar (Hoffmann, 22) and the Petit blanc of 5 deniers, known as Demi-guénar (Hoffmann, 26) — remained on the foot 27 from the 11th September 1389 to 29th April 1405; on that day it was placed on the foot 29, but for a short time, as from the 8th August following, a return was made to the foot 27, and the money struck after 29th April was ordered to be remelted ².

Therefore, practically, one could say that there was but one issue of white money from 1389 to 1411.

As to the black money, it was struck during the whole of that period, on the foot 27. Besides a Denier parisis (Hoffmann, 40) which was not coined in Normandy, this black money consisted of three kinds of coins: a Double tournois (Hoffmann, 31), a Denier tournois (Hoffmann, 38), and a Maille tournois (Hoffmann, 41). Saint-Lô issued these in large quantities, especially the Deniers tournois, but as the legends of the denier and maille, KAROLVS REX on obv., and TVRONVS or OBOLVS CIVIS on rev. only number ten and eleven or twelve letters, their mint of origin had to be distinguished — if however people troubled about this, which does not seem to have been the case — by aid of some secret sign which we are now ignorant of. The same remarks apply to the Double tournois, although the obv. legend, KAROLVS FRANCORV REX would have allowed the apposition of a dot under the 18th letter ⁴ but as far as we know, no specimen thus marked has ever turned up.

We possess, apparently, a full account of the white and black money of Saint-Lô, during the whole period of its working under Charles VI ⁵, and we find in it the names of the successive masters. The account for the gold has only been preserved for the short period running from 7th March 1417 (n.st.) to 15th January 1418 (n.st.); but we have no doubt that the Mint struck gold currency from the date of its reopening, and that the striking of the gold, as well as of the silver, was under the direction of the same master. At any rate this fact is proved from 1398 ⁶.

We have noticed that the first master was Guiot Quarrel. His lease was certainly not for longer than a year, reckoning from his first delivery, according to the usual clause, as he coined from 22nd July 1390 to 23rd July 1391. His coinage, which is very considerable, consists of guénars, half guénars and deniers tournois ⁷.

After him the Mint did not immediately find a lessee, but after an interruption of two months Jehan Trotaut and Pierre d'Auvergne coined "en la main du roi", that is at the King's pleasure ⁸, 38,000 ordered on September 11, 1389, and its execution dates from a month later. There were then only 18 mints, as Saint-Lô did not yet exist, and the letters patent prescribing the reopening of Villeneuve d'Avignon are of May 11, 1391. The legend of the guénars and half guénars number 18 letters on the obv. and 19 on the rev. Consequently, Paris might have received the secret dot on the 18th letter on the silver as well as on the gold coins. By not giving Paris a secret dot, this 18th secret dot was left unengaged and it was attributed to Saint-Lô. Shall we conclude therefrom that it had been resolved to reopen Saint-Lô as early as September or October 1389? We however only raise the question.

1. The Ecus of the third issue (11th September 1389) are of 61 $\frac{1}{2}$ to the mark; those of the fourth issue (29th July 1394) are of 62 to the mark.

2. The guénars struck on the foot 29 (fourth issue) had as a distinctive mark a plain dot under the initial crosslets. They are only known for Tournai.

3. Saint-Lô has only issued Mailles tournois of the second issue, prescribed on 24th July 1393, on the foot 27, as the first, but of a lower standard — 1 d. 3 gr. \mathcal{R} . instead of 1 d. 6 gr. \mathcal{R} . — but on the other hand of a heavier weight — 303 $\frac{1}{4}$ to the Mark instead of 337.

4. The legend on reverse: MONETA DVPLEX numbers but twelve letters.

5. This account is reproduced in Saulcy, but divided into numerous fragments, and many errors of reading have crept in; and there are also a few omissions.

6. Cf. Saulcy, Documents, vol. II, p. 104 (8th July 1398).

7. The total of guénars reaches 798,000; that of demi-guénars 248,000, and of deniers tournois 21,600.

2. Saulcy informs us that Pierre le Marié was a native of Angers. He had just filled the post of Mint-master at Rouen, to which he had been elected on 18th August 1388.

3. A.N.ZI⁸ 981-982 (accounts of Hanequin de Winemar and Guiot Quarrel).

4. On 19th September 1388 Jacques Aubert had been appointed Counter-warden of the Rouen mint, but he had given up the post on the 30th of the same month.

5. A.N.ZI⁸ 981-982. Account of Guiot Quarrel.

6. This die-cutter, named Henri de Vezel, appears to have been sent to Saint-Lô during the course of the year, and not on December 14, as reported by Saulcy; Guiot Quarrel's accounts show that Henri de Vezel gave on December 13 a receipt for 40 livres "pour deniers a lui paiez pour aler à Saint-Lô et soy mettre sus pour exercer de nouvel ledit office", and these 40 livres were too big a sum to represent solely his travelling expenses.

7. On 29th July 1390, coining-irons for grands and petits blancs were delivered to Alain le Breton, servant of Guiot Quarrel. At this date the Mint was already working; it was not the first time therefore that dies had been received.

8. On 14th May 1390, Pasquier le Marié, warden of Angers, had appointed Pierre le Marié, his brother, as his lieutenant for a month.

9. No doubt a relative of Guiot Quarrel, "visiteur général des aides" in the provinces of Lyons and Burgundy, mention of which we find on 12th July 1377 Bibl. Nat. — Pièces originales, 51. — Amelle, 8).

10. This last fact raises an interesting problem. The Registre entre 2 ais, mentioning the secret dots, expressly states that these "différences (furent) ordonnées estre mises pour les monnoies d'or et d'argent tant du Royaume comme du Dalphiné faictes sur le pié de monnoie 27^e". But the coinage on the foot 27 was grands blancs and 1.000 petits blancs, from 18th September to 6th October 1391.

At this date a new master, Guillaume Marcel or Mansel, undertook the direction of the Mint and kept it until 20th November 1392. He exercised through an intermediary "tenant le compte", named Jehan Bourdon, who only coined three sorts of coins: grands and petits blancs, and deniers tournois¹.

Marcel's successor was Guillaume le Marié, who was in office at least until 9th October 1397, also by the intermediary of a "tenant le compte" who was no other than his own brother, Pierre le Marié, mentioned before. During this period of five years, the Mint coined all the white and black monies prescribed on 11th September 1389, with of course the exception of the denier parisien.

The accounts of the Saint-Lô Mint present a gap between 9th October 1397 and 30th March 1398 (n. st.). On this date we find the mention of a new master named Jehan Burnoust or Burnoust, who had as "tenant le compte" his predecessor, Guillaume le Marié. Jean Burnoust appears to have had his lease renewed until 16th June 1403². From the previous 8th January, he had taken a new "tenant le compte", named Michiel Descharbey. Guillaume le Marié having left him to offer his services as contractor of the Mint of Rouen, a post which he was not long in obtaining.

A document of 21st January 1399 (n. st.) tells us the special mark of the gold écus struck by Jehan Burnoust previously to this date. On that day³, we read in the Registre entre 2 ais, "fu mandé aux gardes de la monne de St Lo qu'ils feissent mettre pour diferance es deniers d'or qui seront doresnavant faiz en lad. monne pour le temps que Jehan Burnoust en sera maistre part^{re} c'est ass^{ez} que A de regnat, qui est devers la croix, soit barré, et devers la pile A de Karolus soit semblablement barré".

This écu is known, and there is a specimen in the trays of the French Cabinets⁴.

Jehan Burnoust's place was taken by a master named Jehan le Goupil who, as we shall see, occupied the position for a number of years, and who was to reach the highest office of the coin hierarchy. His distinctive mark, or rather his first mark, is known to us by the following passage in the Registre entre 2 ais: "le X^e jour de janvier, l'an MCCCCIII (i. e. 1404, n. st.), fut mandé aux gardes de la monne de St Lô que pour diferance A de regnat, qui est devers la croix du denier d'or, ne soit pas barré, et semblablement, devers la pile A de Karolus ne soit aussi pas barré pour le temps que Jehan le Goupil tenra la monnoye, et A de Karolus des grans blancs et petiz soit barré".

It was thus prescribed that during the mastership of Jehan le Goupil, exactly the opposite should be done, at any rate for the gold, to what had been done under Jehan Burnoust.

We are almost certain that the first period of office of Jehan le Goupil lasted a year, from 16th June 1403, at which date Michel Descharbey appears to have ceased to act on account of Jehan Burnoust, and 28th June 1404, when we find the same Jehan Burnoust again Master of Saint-Lô with Guillaume le Marié as his clerk. But the Saint-Lô accounts show here again a gap of one year, followed by another, running from 30th July 1404 to 3rd June 1405.

Two documents published by Saulcy tell us that the lease of the master in office during the months of February and March 1405 (n. st.) — in our opinion, certainly Jehan Burnoust⁵ — was to end on the following 3rd of April, and that the new lease was to be for three years. They also show us Jehan Burnoust and Jehan le Goupil competing for the Mint by way of the process now known as a 'Dutch' Auction. Jehan le Goupil was the successful bidder, but he took his competitor as his clerk, and kept him as such at least until November 1407.

The accounts of the Mint give us information on the white and black monies struck by Jehan le Goupil from 3rd June 1405, the date of his first delivery of coins, to 3rd October 1411, and we know that he only issued 132.000 guénars, 194.700 deniers tournois, and 87.180 mailles tournois. This is a small production, for a period of over five years, in comparison for instance, with the coinage of his predecessor, Guiot Quarrel, whose term of office lasted but one year, but this appears to us in conformity with his lease¹.

We have already stated that we do not possess the accounts for the gold currency, but we have a fairly clear idea of the amount Jehan le Goupil must have struck, thanks to his bids of 11th March 1405 (n. st.). He undertook to strike within three years 900 gold marks, i. e. 300 marks per annum; now, as in 1405, the écus were at 62 to the mark, this represented an annual coinage of 18.600 écus².

Saulcy has noted some interesting details in connection with these écus. In February 1410 (n. st.) J. le Goupil and the two wardens of the Mint, Guillaume Laillier and Nicolas Varroc were summoned to appear before the counter, that is before the Masters general, to answer a charge of having issued écus of short weight, found at a money-changer's "sur le pont de Paris", named Jehan de la Fontaine. Jehan le Goupil was condemned to a fine, and in addition, had to undertake to keep on at the Mint "pour l'année qui suivra la fin de son bail... et à faire ouvrir 300 marcs d'or, c'est assavoir 100 marcs en ceste présente année outre et par dessus la somme qu'il a promis faire, et 200 marcs d'or l'année à venir, ou paier au Roy 30 s. ts franchement pour chacun marc qui deffaudra d'avoir ouvré icelle somme, et au cas que en cette présente année il ne pourroit ouvrir lesd. 100 marcs d'or outre la somme qu'il a promise, il les pourra faire ouvrir l'année à venir, et avec ce sera tenu faire à ses dépens tous les deniers dessus dix".

The two wardens in their turn were condemned to coin at the Mint 50 marks of gold "outre et par dessus la somme d'or que Jehan le Goupil a promis faire dedans ledit temps que icelluy Goupil doit tenir lad. monne, ou paier au Roy 30 s. ts. franchement pour chacun marc qui deffaudront d'avoir fait ouvrir icelle somme".

It is probable that the office of Mint master was not at times very remunerative, otherwise Jehan le Goupil could hardly have been punished with the obligation of prolonging his term of office at the Mint for a year longer after the expiry of his lease³.

On 20th October 1411 an order given from Paris prescribed a general debasement of the coinage. The écus remained of fine gold, but passed from 62 to 64 to the Mark (5th issue) and the white and black currencies were placed on the foot 32 (4th issue of the guénar). All these debased coins are differentiated by an annulet as mint-mark instead of a plain dot.

This annulet period lasted until 10th May 1417, but it is divided in two by an interval of a year during which, in virtue of the ordonnance cabochienne (25th May 1413) the silver currency — but not the black money — was placed back on the foot 29. On 7th

1. 11th March 1405 (n. st.) he had effectively promised to strike within three years 500 marks of silver; we may probably suppose that he undertook not to coin any more during the three years 1408-1411; which makes a total of 1000 silver marks. As the guénar on the foot 27 was 5 d. 12 gr. R. and 74 $\frac{1}{2}$ to the mark, 1000 marks of silver (argent le roi) coined solely in guénars would produce 162.000 pieces. Now J. Goupil coined 132.000 of these, and in addition we have to take into account the deniers and mailles.

2. However, the coinage of gold must certainly have been considerable during the period of 1390-1411, as the écus of Saint-Lô with the plain dot are not rare and offer numerous varieties, with certain A's of the legends sometimes crossed and other times uncrossed. These sundry varieties no doubt originate from different mint-masters, and we have seen that the masters were fairly numerous during the course of this period; moreover it is not said that Masters like Jehan Burnoust and Jehan le Goupil have always used the same special marks during the whole of their turn of office.

An écu before us (Pl. III, fig. 1) merits special mention. Instead of the two usual $\frac{x}{x}$ between each word of the obv. legend there is $\frac{x}{x}$ between the first two words, $\frac{x}{x}$ between the second and third words, and between the third and fourth, and $\frac{x}{x}$ between the fourth and last words; in addition the A's on the obv. are not crossed, whereas on the rev. the A of REGNAT alone is crossed. We do not know to which master we should ascribe this écu.

3. The same occurred again, and for the same motive, in 1416, when J. le Goupil was condemned to take back the Mint for a year.

1. On 22nd June 1385, Guillaume Marcel is mentioned as proxy and partner of Jehan Bourdon, master of the mint of Rouen. Again on 19th May 1390. But already in 1378 we find him as 'pleige' and companion of Pierre Bourdon, also Mint-master of Rouen (Saulcy, vol. I, p. 543).

2. Saulcy thought that in September 1401 Guillaume le Marié had again become master of Saint-Lô and that Jehan Burnoust was his "tenant le compte"; this is an error which we have corrected from the original of the accounts. But these accounts leave a gap from 30th January 1402 (n. st.) to 8th January 1403 (n. st.).

3. Jehan Burnoust was then in the second year of office, or at least was entering upon it.

4. This écu has been published by M. Dieudonné, in Rev. Num., 1911, pl. IV, fig. 18.

5. On 26th February and 12th March 1405 (n. st.) Jehan le Goupil is styled formerly Master of the Mint of Saint-Lô.

June 1413 the guénar and half-guénar were suppressed and replaced by the gros aux lis (Hoffmann, 15); then, on the following 3rd November, as this gros did not please the people, it was replaced by the grossus¹ (Hoffmann, 11 and 14); but, seven months later, on 4th June 1413, the grossus was in its turn suppressed, and the striking of guénars and half guénars on the foot 32 was resumed as before the creation of the gros aux lis. From 14th June 1414 to 10th May 1417 no change occurred in the currency either in weight or standard.

Jehan le Goupil filled the office of Mint-master during all this time, and thanks to his accounts, preserved in the Archives Nationales, we have full information on his coinage of white and black currency.

The execution of the Royal letters of 20th October 1411 was sent to Saint-Lô on 8th November, and from this date to 3rd August 1413, J. le Goupil coined only grands blancs (about 712,000) and mailles tournois (96,000).

The order of 7th June 1413, creating the gros aux lis, mentioned by name the Mint of Saint-Lô, as having to coin the new currency, but the order was not complied with. Saint-Lô did not issue any gros aux lis and was closed from the month of August 1413 to that of May 1414². As to the execution, dated 8th December 1413, of the order of 3rd November creating the grossus, it was duly sent to Saint-Lô, and that mint was amongst those which were to coin the new gros³, but we have to wait until 8th May 1414 to find an entry in the accounts of the first delivery of grossus, and the second and last is dated from 15th May. The total of grossus coined is only 18,000, but we have nevertheless found a specimen (Pl. I, fig. 2), the characteristics of which differ slightly from those indicated as follows in the Registre entre 2 ais:

"Es deniers gros qui seront faiz en la monne de Saint Lô sera mis pour difference devers la croix soubz la 18^e lettre un point, et devers la pille au ront qui est dessus le R de GROSSUS où il y a une fleur de lis sera mis une croisette".

Now, whereas on the cross side, our specimen corresponds to the description, on the head side the crosslet is placed within a circle above the O of GROSSVS, that is in the place prescribed for the gros of Villeneuve-Saint-André; in addition, we find further on the head side, at the beginning of the legend, the small trefoil indicating the Paris mint. We gather from this that the dies for this coin have been cut in the capital, and that possibly that of the head side was confused with another intended for Villeneuve, unless there is simply an error of copy in the *Registre entre 2 ais*⁴.

In this same month of May 1414, Jehan le Goupil coined also Doubles and Deniers tournois. Being given the value of the grossus — 20 deniers tournois — and the absence of subsidiary currency, the need of black money may have been felt.

The striking of currency on the foot 32 recommenced at Saint-Lô on 12th August 1414⁵, and during the end of the annulet period, the Mint issued close upon one million grands blancs guénars, about 50,000 deniers tournois (210 marks) and 120,000 mailles tournois (375 marks).

As to the gold we have already stated that we have no record of it before 7th March 1417 (n.st.). From that day to the following 15th June, Jehan le Goupil coined 4,400 écus à la couronne of 62 to the mark legally current for 27 s. 7 d. ts.

1. The Gros aux lis and Grossus were both coined on the foot 29, but differently understood. The Grossus was heavier (65 to the mark instead of 84); the Gros aux lis was of finer metal (11 d. 16 gr. \mathcal{R} . instead of 9 d. \mathcal{R} .).

2. From 30th October 1412 to 22nd May 1414, the accounts of J. le Goupil follow each other on the same roll of parchment; which does not show any seam. These accounts are therefore without a gap, unless we admit, which is very unlikely, that J. le Goupil made use of another parchment for the gros aux lis.

Second proof. — These accounts have been verified by the Masters general on 20th February 1413 (n. st.) and later on 17th September 1414, and as reserves are made in the verification carried out in margin of the parchment.

3. According to the Registre entre 2 ais, these mints were eight in number, but whereas the Grossus of Paris, Rouen, Tournai, Châlons, Troyes, and now also Saint-Lô are known, those of Saint-Quentin and Villeneuve-Saint-André have not yet been brought to light. On the other hand, a document published by Saulcy (Documents, vol. II, p. 177) proves that the Grossus were also struck at Montpellier.

4. The Registre has committed such an error in its description of the Grossus of Tournai.

5. The execution of the order of 4th June 1414 prescribing the renewed striking of the guénar was sent to Saint-Lô on 28th June.

On 10th May 1417, we meet with a further debasement: the écu à la couronne was replaced by the Mouton d'or (Hoffmann, 3), and the new gros, commonly called Florette, was placed, at the same time as the black money, on the foot 40.

This Mouton (1st issue), cut at 96 to the mark, was no longer of fine gold, but of 23 carats only. Both this coin and the Florette are easily recognized by their types. As to the guénars and half guénars (5th issue), their characteristics were: on the head side, a dot between the two fleurs de lis above the shield, and on the cross side, a dot at the end of the cross, on the opposite side to the crosslet.

The mint-mark on all these currencies continued to be an annulet, but this annulet was now no longer a distinctive mark of issue¹.

This time we have in full the two accounts of the gold and silver of Jehan le Goupil who remained Mint-master during this fresh period. The order of 10th May 1417 was put into force at Saint-Lô on 16th June; from that day to 15th January 1418 (n.st.) the Mint struck 20,400 Moutons at 23 carats, and 282,000 guénars, in all. No florettes, no petits blancs, not black money.

We have before us a specimen of the guénar²; the mouton is known also (Pl. III, fig. 3) and there is a superb specimen in the Mint Museum, in Paris.

A further debasement took place on 21st October 1417; the white and silver currencies were placed on the foot 60, and a second issue of the Mouton was decreed (at 22 carats), in addition to the gold Heaumes and Half-heaumes created on that same day. But this order of 21st October did not apply to Saint-Lô.

In fact war was in full rage. Henry V of England, having landed near Touques on the previous 1st August, marched upon Caen and captured it on 4th September³, then besieged Falaise, which surrendered on 16th February 1418 (n.st.) and continued on to Vire, invested by the English troops. It was impossible therefore for messengers from Paris to reach St Lô without crossing occupied country, or taking a circuitous route south by way of the Maine and the borders of Brittany.

But there was something worse, Henry V, in becoming master of Caen, erected a Mint there which issued, in his name, but with the French arms, a guénar (Hoffmann, Pl. XXIX, 9), similar to those which were coined at the same time in the Mints of Charles VI⁴. This Mint of Caen, established in the capital of Lower-Normandy, and strongly held by English troops, was to compete with the Saint-Lô mint, to the latter's disaster.

It is probable that towards the end of November 1417, that is about the time when the execution of the order of 21st October⁵ reached the Mint, if it did so, Saint-Lô was practically at a standstill, if not already closed. In any case, the closing soon became definitive, and the Mint closed its doors on 15th January 1418 (n.st.).

On the following 12th March, the Duke of Gloucester, Henry V's brother, entrusted by him with the conquest of Lower-Normandy, captured Saint-Lô, and for thirty-one years the capital of the Cotentin was to submit to foreign domination.

1. Certain Moutons of the first issue — as for instance that of Villeneuve-Saint-André-lès-Avignon — have a plain dot, instead of the prescribed annulet, which shows the small importance attached to this business.

2. We notice on this guénar two dots dividing in two the word KAROLVS. Could this be a special mark used by Jehan le Goupil? We cannot say. At any rate there is nothing similar on the mouton d'or.

3. The castle of Caen only capitulated on 20th September.

4. C^{te} de Castellane, Demi-gros d'Henry V d'Angleterre frappé à Caen, Rev. Num., 1895.

5. We do not know at which date this execution was sent to the provincial mints.

A curious detail is to be noted : after the capture of the town, the Duke of Gloucester seized the last five boxes of guénars and two boxes of black money coined by Jehan le Goupil since the year 1415. Taking into account the importance of the mintage of the mint, the contents of these boxes must have represented an appreciable sum.

The capture of Saint-Lô by the enemy could not evidently be known in Paris until some days later ; so that, on 16th March 1418 (n.st.), "Jehan Tainturier s'opposa à l'entérinement des lettres de Pierre de Ravend, impétrées par lui à cause de la garde de la monn^e de Saint-Lô"¹. This claim had been made to the Masters General of Charles VI; now, on 16th March Saint-Lô had been for four days in the hands of the Duke of Gloucester, and the officials of the French king had no longer any authority there².

THE MONEYSER THURFERTH AND THE HAMTUN MINT.

The name Thurferth makes its first appearance upon our coinage in the reign of Eadred, and continues during the reign of Eadwig, and the early years of Eadgar. Thurferth's coins are few, and with one exception fail to disclose a mint name.

The name Thurferth, as that of a moneyer, is of rare occurrence, so rare that we may assume that all the known coins bearing that name, and issued in the reigns of Eadred, Eadwig and Eadgar, were struck by the same moneyer and that all his coins were issued from one mint.

Only seven coins struck by Thurferth, during the above mentioned three reigns have come under my notice, viz.—

2. All this was normal, but what are we to think of the following fact? On 3rd August 1418, by mandate given from Paris, Charles VI authorized the Abbot and monks of Mont-Saint-Michel, to take from the Viscounts of Avranches and Coutances, the receiver of the « aides » of Avranches and the privy master of the Mint of Saint-Lô a sum of 1500 livres tournois intended for the payment of the garrison of Mont Saint-Michel (Siméon Luce, Chronique du Mont Saint-Michel, pièces justificatives, no 1. Paris — Didot, 1879).

S. Luce notes that on 3rd August the council of the king of France was still in ignorance of the entry of the English into Avranches, which had capitulated on 14th July; but the council could not be unaware of the capture of Saint-Lô, and if so what could this summons on the Master of the Mint mean? The Mint not working any longer, we must assume that J. le Goupil had remained indebted to the King for work done in 1417 and previously, but why is he not specifically named?

No. 1. came from "A Hoard of Anglo-Saxon Coins found in Ireland" (Num. Chron., 1863, p. 51); it passed through the Evans, and Carlyon-Britton Collections, and is now in my possession.

No. 2. also is in my possession. It is a curiously blundered piece of good silver and in good state of preservation, and weighs 16½ grains. The dies from which this coin was struck appear to have been of local manufacture; made by a man unaccustomed to the work; and the incomplete E's and R's suggest that he was imperfectly acquainted with the correct form of the characters he was impressing in the die. The reverse legend, when rearranged reads ·DVIVEΓ·D MΓ = ·DVRVER·D MR. A similar instance of the use of the gamma-like character for R and B, is given by Major Carlyon-Britton in the British Numismatic Journal, vol. V, p. 86, where he describes a coin of Anlaf, of the Derby Mint, which is inscribed DEOΓEΓ, for DEOREB, and a coin of Eadred, inscribed GISLEIEΓ M, for Gislermer M, is described in the British Museum Catalogue, vol. 2, p. 149. No. 47.

No. 3, was described in the Numismatic Circular, for October, 1909, and I am unacquainted with its present provenance. No. 4, formed lot 67, at the sale of the Bascom collection, when it was illustrated in the sale catalogue, and was assigned to Southampton. Nos. 5 and 6, are in my possession and No. 7, is in the National Collection. The latter coin is illustrated in the British Museum Catalogue, vol. 2, pl. 14, No. 5; Ruding's, Annals of The Coinage, 1840, pl. 21, No. 11, and in Hildebrand, pl. 1, No. 3. A similar coin to No. 6, was in the Montagu collection.

The obverse legends of Nos. 5, and 6, evidently stand for EADGAR REX M(erciorum), and EADGAR REX T(otius) M(ercia), respectively, and there can be little doubt that the coins were struck for Eadgar during his short reign as King of Mercia, A.D. 957-959, as he would not be described by the inferior title of King of Mercia, after he became King of all England.

The fabric of these two coins differs materially from that of other coins of the same type. No. 5, appears to have been issued earlier than No. 6, as the same punches were used in making both obverse and reverse dies for the former coin, while different punches were used in making the obverse die for the latter.

Eadgar's titles as shown upon these two coins accord with those in the charters of his short reign as King of Mercia. In a charter of the year 959 (Kemble, Codex Diplomaticus, No. 480), he is styled "Rex Merciorum", "totius Mercia provinciae necnon et aliorum gentium in circuitu persistentium gubernator et rector".

Thurferth's name appearing upon these coins of Eadgar proves that he was a moneyer in Mercia, and the coin of Eadwig (No. 4), struck but a short time previously, and inscribed ·DVRFER·D MO HAM shows that he was working at Hamtun — the Mercian Hamtun — now known as Northampton.

Thurferth was a name not unknown at Northampton at the period under consideration, for we find it recorded in the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, that in the year 921. —

"Thurferth jarl and the holds, and all the Army which belonged to Hamtune, and north as far as the Welland, submitted to King Eadward and sought him for their lord and protector."

Possibly Thurferth the Hamtun moneyer, was a near connection of Thurferth the Hamtun jarl.

Among the names of the "ministri" who witnessed the above-mentioned charter of 959, appears that of Thurferth, possibly the Danish jarl of Northampton, who submitted to Eadward the Elder, in 921.

The only other period at which we find the name Thurferth, as that of a moneyer, is in the reign of Cnut, when it appears upon coins of Thetford, and Norwich, and in the reign of Eadweard the Confessor, when it appears upon coins of London, and Norwich. Probably these coins were, again, the work of one moneyer, who was possibly a descendant of the Thurferth, who was coining at Northampton in the tenth century.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETIES, MUSEUMS, &c.

YORKSHIRE NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.

An ordinary meeting of the above Society was held on June 20th 1925 in the County Museum, York, the President, Mr. Frank Heeley, occupying the chair.

In a paper on the "Silver and Copper Coinage of George II", Mr. T. Pickersgill gave a very complete survey of all denominations in both metals. On the accession of George II no change was made in the denomination, size, and fineness of the silver money, and the same symbols appeared in the angles of the reverses as on the silver coins of the two previous reigns, viz: Roses, for West of England silver: Plumes, to indicate silver from the Welsh mines of Sir Humphrey Mackworth and Sir Carberry Price: and Roses and Plumes, for silver extracted from lead melted down from pit coal and sea coal. Dealing with the first coinage of the "Young Head" type, Mr. Pickersgill gave some interesting particulars relating to the engraver John Croker, who was responsible for the dies. Born at Dresden in 1670, Croker came to England and was appointed Chief Engraver of the Royal Mint in 1697, being succeeded on his death in 1741 by his fellow countryman and former assistant, J. S. Tanner, who engraved the dies for the second coinage, or "Old Head" type, first struck in 1743. To this reign belongs the second of the only two commemorative coins in the English series; viz. coins with LIMA under the bust, supposed to have been struck from silver captured by the "Prince Frederick" and "Duke" privateers. The arms and abbreviations of the royal titles were fully explained, together with a brief description of the Maundy series. Treating of the copper coins, attention was drawn to the 'error' halfpenny of 1730, the "Young Head" and "Old Head" types, the use of the letters U and V in the spelling of the king's name, and the amusing peculiarity on the reverses, which shows a remarkably good outline of a rat on the knee of the seated figure of Britannia. The reader's remarks gave rise to an interesting discussion upon various phases of numismatic study, ranging from mistakes in the coinage, to the merits and demerits of a standard coinage for the whole Empire. Mr. Pickersgill was warmly thanked for his interesting paper on the proposal of Mr. J. F. Musham, seconded by Mr. H. Mackay.

The President, Mr. Frank Heeley, exhibited and described a series of silver coins of the twelve Caesars, and also the Caqué medals of the French kings. The latter consisted of 75 bronze medals representing the rulers of France from A.D. 420 to the nineteenth century. A cordial vote of thanks to the President for his interesting exhibits was passed on the proposal of the Honorary Secretary, seconded by Mr. J. Digby Firth.

Other exhibits were made and described as follows: — By Mr. J. F. Musham F.E.S. — An uncommon piece in the form of a christening token, being a neatly engraved George III "cartwheel" twopence: an engraved "cartwheel" penny suggesting a Cricket or Curling Club pass: a counter marked Birmingham and Neath penny, and other engraved and countermarked pieces. Also proof halfcrowns of 1893 and 1911, a pattern Anglesey penny, and a Mexican dollar of 1885. An automatic guinea and sovereign balance with a late style of printed label of instructions.

By Mr. J. Digby Firth F.L.S. — German 18th century marriage and baptismal medals in silver: Spanish two real or quarter dollar of Ferdinand IV (1759) countermarked G.P. and crown for Guadeloupe (!): Silver pieces of Sigismund III of Poland, for currency in Poland and Danzig: and the large Thaler of John of Leyden, commemorating the defence of Munster by the Anabaptists (1534-35).

By Mr. J. Wright. — Four varieties of Wilberforce medals in silver: two varieties of medals commemorating the opening of Sheffield Town Hall: Lead medal of Cromwell as Lord Protector: York Halfpenny tokens: three varieties of Queen Anne farthings: Wood's Irish halfpence and farthings etc.

Mr. Geoffrey Thompson M.A., was elected an ordinary member of the Society.
